Miraculous Vision of the Image of Boulogne?

A FRENCH FISHER GIRL'S STRANGE EXPERIENCE THAT RECALLS THE CELEBRATED MEDIAEVAL LEGEND.

THE ancient city of Boulogne, in France, which is also a popular modern watering place, has been greatly excited by the report that a miraculous vision has appeared there.

A young girl named Marie Dennel, living in the fishing quarter of the town, was sitting idly one evening in a boat, which was not made fast to anything, and the tide carried it out, and in a short time she found herself adrift at sea, without oars or sails. The night advanced, and the poor girl drifted further and further out to sea, and feared she was beyond hope of rescue.

She fell asleep for a time, and then she awoke to find herself further from help than before. She wondered fearfully what she could do, and then, she declares, the thought came to her to pray to the Holy Virgin of Boulogne, who occupies the foremost place in the hearts of the people of this region. As she did so a luminous figure appeared before her in the air, wearing the peculiar crown that is borne by the statue of the Virgin in the Cathedral of Boulogne. As the dawn broke the boat drifted safely ashore, the vision appearing before the happy and wondering girl to the last.

By many pious people this vision is believed to portend the recovery of the famous miraculous image of the Virgin of Boulogne. After a history as remarkable as that of any sacred relic in Christendom the image was thrown to the flames during the French Revolution, and apparently burnt, but there are many who believe that it was saved in some manner and hidden away to be brought to light again at some future time.

According to the legend, it was in the year 636 A. D., in the

Having Your Fat Carved Off

There Is Hardly a Part of the Human Figure Except the Vital Organs That Can Not Be Remodelled By the Knife, Declare the Surgical Enthusiasts of the Newest Fat Cure, and Fat Faces and Fat Waists Can Be Made All Over Again By the New Flesh Sculpture.

"The surgeon's knife is the chisel of the practitioner of the new art of ridding a person of fat. It will carve from the block of flesh the masterpiece as the sculptor's chisel carves from the marble the ideal."

FIGURES carved to suit any requirement; wasp waists, long hidden beneath successive layers of adipose, excavated in all their pristine beauty from the enshrouding tissues, even as the beauties of Pompeii by the archaeologist's spade; lines and curves of grace rescued from the demon fat; every woman a Venus and every man an Apollo.

And—

That is the whole point, fat brother and plump sister. There is hope—not the nebulous, hesitant hope that has flitted before the heavyweights like a will o' the wisp, bearing fore and aft the sign "Before and After," but the real solid, certified, tried and not found-wanting hope of exact and positive science.

It does not lie in the gymnastic stunts, the awful physical culture, the walkings and contortions that afflict the seeker after leanness like the tortures of the Middle Ages. Away with all of that! It does not lie in the diet that takes away from him or her of the redundant curves all that is worth eating and afflicts the soul like purgatory. Eat what you want! It does not lie in anti-fats or any of the catalogues of mortifications, especially prescribed for the plump.

It lies in the surgeon's knife. The surgeon's knife is the chisel of the practitioner of the new art. It will carve from the block of flesh the masterpiece as the sculptor's chisel carves from the marble the ideal.

At least it will when the system is perfected and that won't take long, say some of the most eminent surgeons of the East. At the present time the remodelling process is confined to the torso, but it has been eminently successful and there is not the faintest reason why it should not be extended to cover from the top of head to the tip of toe.

Andrew Bazzle, 400 pounds, the heaviest man in the Valley of Virginia, will go down in the sacred writings of the fat as the first hero, the patriarch, the pioneer, through whom was blazed the way to leanness.

Think of it, Big Bill Taft! To go gently to sleep with a cone of ether over your face and wake up, a trifle weak, to be sure, but with the litheness and lightness of the dancing faun. Think of it, Fay Templeton, Marie Dressler, Trixie Friganza and others! To go to sleep the same way and arise nymphs of fairy slenderness.

That is what Andrew Bazzle of the Virginia Valley, has shown by his martyrdom to be possible, and by offering himself up on the altar of theory has received the reward of dropping to the 300-pound class and of encompassing the emancipation of all his clan.

Andrew Bazzle is on the shady side of forty. The whole Valley of Virginia hailed him as its fattest man. He was a celebrity.

"I'm getting tired of carrying all this weight around," he confided to Mrs. Bazzle. "Guess I'll go down to Richmond and see what they can do for me."

He went. He confided his weariness to an eminent surgeon.

The surgeon thought deeply. "There is a way," he said at length. "But it is unusual. It is being studied closely, but subjects have been lacking. It offers, perhaps, the only solution of the fat man's problem."

Then the surgeon explained. There wasn't really a bit of danger, he said. The knife of the chiropodist had more peril in it than the blade of the surgeon in such a case.

"It is this way," he said. "The fat that burdens you has no real place on the human form. It is, in a measure, a parasite. It was not particularly contemplated by Nature. The consequence is that the deposit, being foreign, may be removed comparatively easy. It has no nerves in it. The blood vessels are few and weak, and no harm can ensue from cutting through them. We will simply carve out the adipose tissue, remodel what is left deftly and—well, you will not be so fat."

"How fat will I be?" asked Mr. Bazzle.

They adjourned to St. Luke's Hospital to talk it over with others. Mr. Bazzle became convinced. As the matter had been one of special study and research, a number of eminent surgeons were sent for from the North to witness the operation. There were several from Johns Hopkins, of Baltimore, and one from Philadelphia.

They gave Mr. Bazzle ether. Then Dr. Stuart McGuire, the operating surgeon, measured neatly two ellipses, one on each side of the subject's abdomen. They measured eight inches by three, about. Then the surgeon cut carefully in almost to the stomach wall, clean through the deposit of adipose tissue. Working quickly and delicately, Dr. McGuire severed the base of the ellipse and lifted out the mass. It was as though a die had been pressed into the torso, an elliptical die, clean through skin and fat, and then withdrawn with what it had encompassed.

This mass weighed nearly fifty pounds. Quickly the aperture was cleaned and dressed. Then the skin at the edges of the ellipse was brought together and sewed. An exactly similar operation was performed upon the opposite side of the abdomen.

There was apparently very little shock. Mr. Bazzle awoke some time later not feeling bad at all. He was all impatience till the time came for the removal of the bandages. With trepidation he gazed at his waist. It is probable that he pinched himself and murmured doubt as to his identity.

For behold—he had a waist line again and his girth was nearly normal.

"The operation was entirely successful," said Dr. McGuire. "Fully one hundred pounds were removed. It may form again, but it will take very long if it does. The operation was of very great value as demonstrating certain possibilities."

Dr. H. Philip Sandorn, connected with several of the big hospitals in Philadelphia, was present at the operation.

"What are the possibilities of removing this adipose tissue from any part of the body?" he was asked.

"It has passed beyond the range of the possible into that of the actual," he answered. "The scars upon Bazzle will soon become only faintly noticeable. It has been demonstrated that this tissue can be removed from the body without ill effects at all being incurred. Both in New York and Philadelphia research into this phase of surgery has been pushed to an astonishing degree. The Bazzle operation was remarkable in the amount of tissue removed and was extremely valuable because of some other phases of it.

"The operations and the research have been carried on very quietly. There are a number of reasons for this. The sensitiveness of the patient is a great one. There have been more well known people than you imagine who have undergone the operation. I know personally of two famous actresses who have lightened the burden of the flesh in this manner.

"I believe that the time is not far distant when the surgeon will be able to remodel the fat-covered form into perhaps more perfect lines than existed before the overlying process began. What has been done with the abdomen can be done upon most of the other parts of the body. The scarification is a popular objection, but as surgery stands at present this has been reduced to a minimum. Many operations can be performed without the trace of a scar afterwards. The surgeon carves down the superfluous tissue. Massage and nature will do the rest.

"There is still much to be investigated and much to be learned, but the way has practically been cleared. The terror of fat will soon be a thing of the past and the surgeon combine with his science the art of the sculptor. I may say that from his study there are no secrets of the human frame hidden from him and that from this perfect knowledge of anatomy there is none better qualified to remodel what he can. Because of the delicacy of his work, the absolute necessity for steadiness and sureness, he is perforce an artist.

"He will become the sculptor of the human body, the living flesh his clay.

"This is not a dream, please understand. It is an actuality, already demonstrated. With the perfect knowledge will come the perfect skill and the perfect art. There is not a part of the flesh, except the vital organs, that cannot be remodeled. That is a daring statement, I know, but I stand by it."

By the way, it is whispered among the surgical fraternity that one of the charming actresses who has tested the method is Miss Lillian Russell. The operation was conducted with the utmost secrecy in a private hospital in New York, according to the story, and the fair prima donna grew lighter by about fifty pounds.

reign of King Dagobert, that the soldiers on the ramparts of Boulogne saw a strange boat approaching the port. It had neither masts nor sails, nor oars nor sailors, but directed by some invisible force, it sailed straight into the harbor. Above it floated a luminous, transparent figure as of an angel.

When the mysterious vessel reached the shore they found on it a statue of the Holy Virgin, bearing the Infant Saviour, "so beautifully carved," says the historian Leroy, "that it was inexpressibly divine and majestic."

The people of Boulogne then built for it a church, known as Notre Dame de Boulogne. The building devoted to this sacred image has since been destroyed twenty times, but to-day it is larger and handsomer than ever.

During the Middle Ages it was one of the greatest places of pilgrimage for kings and warriors and other men from all parts of the world. The famous Godfrey of Bouillon, the crusading King of Jerusalem, after going to the Holy Land, sent to the church out of gratitude a drop of the blood of the Saviour, which is still preserved in a golden casket.

Whence came the mysterious boat and image? There was uncertainty upon this subject for many centuries, but in the eleventh century two bishops from the East, St. Macarios of Antioch and St. Jor of Mount Sinai, came to Boulogne. They related that at the time of the Mohammedan conquest of Antioch the Christian priests of the city, wishing to save their sacred image of the Virgin from the hands of the infidels, placed it upon a boat and confided it to the sea. This boat, guided by Heaven, they believed, had carried the image to Boulogne, a distance of some 3,000 miles, and a marvellous journey in every way, for the boat must have gone through the Mediterranean, threaded its way through the Straits of Gibraltar, crossed the Bay of Biscay and then proceeded up the English Channel until it reached Boulogne. The visitors from the East declared that the image was the one that had once been kept at Antioch.

The image had many wonderful and perilous adventures. The soldiers of Henry VIII of England captured the town and sent the image away to London, but it was eventually returned after the English soldiers in Boulogne had been nearly annihilated by the plague, which was regarded as a punishment for their sacrilege. During the religious wars in France the Protestants carried it away to the neighboring Chateau of Honvault. They tried to chop it to pieces with axes, but the wood resisted as if it were steel, and finally they threw the image in a ditch.

After the war the Lord of Honvault, who had been a Protestant, became a Catholic, and promptly restored the image to the Church.

Then came the worst experience of all. During the French Revolution Andre Dumont, an atheistic member of the Convention, lighted a great bonfire in the market place and deliberately threw upon it the sacred image, because he and the men in power regarded it as a relic of ancient superstition tending to enslave the minds of the people.

Although some witnesses said that they saw the image burnt, there were others who declared that it was snatched from the fire and hidden in some secret place about the city. According to some the hiding place was under the ramparts. Before the burning, however, a Catholic officer in the army had secretly detached a hand from the image, and this is preserved to-day in the present Cathedral. The revolutionary government sold the building at auction, and it was pulled down in order that its stones might be used as building material. At the beginning of the nineteenth century Monsignor Haffreingue, by remarkable efforts and collecting subscriptions all over Europe in behalf of the famous shrine, succeeded in building a finer church on the old site than had ever stood there before.

A splendid statue of the Virgin was built to replace the ancient image which had been lost during the Revolution. The statue stands upright on a boat between two angels, as if controlling the waves. The hand saved from the ancient image is preserved in a magnificent jewelled reliquary.

The simple people are intensely attached to the Virgin of Boulogne and its ancient traditions, and they eagerly hope that the original image will yet be recovered and restored in its entirety to the cathedral.

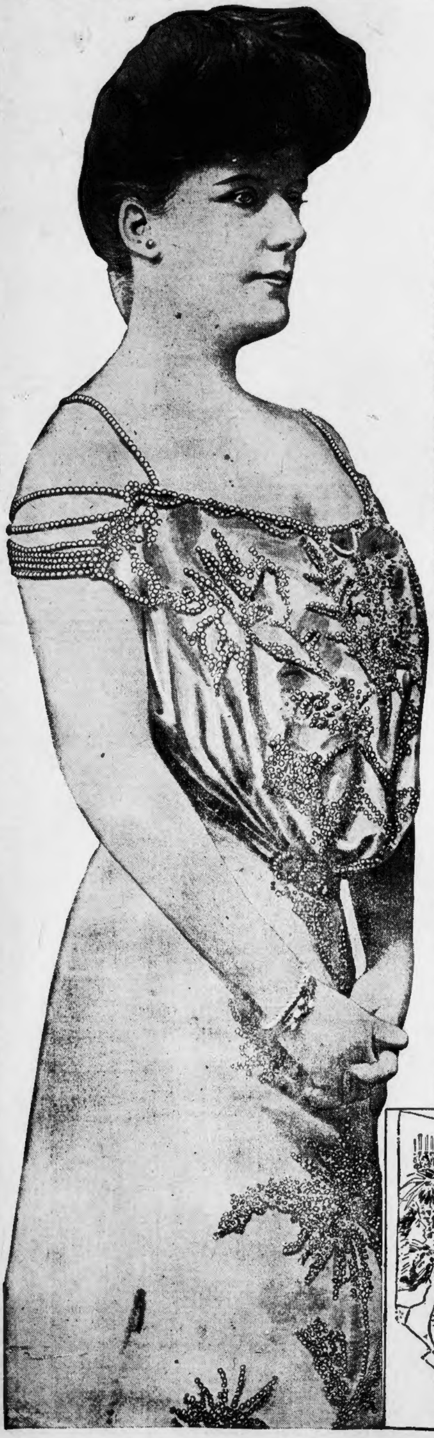
PECULIAR MYSTERY OF MR. LONGWORTH'S OLD SWEETHEART.

NICHOLAS LONGWORTH.

Was This Beautiful Girl the Victim of TWO Poison "Accidents" After Seeing Her Former Fiance Wedded to the President's Daughter? Or, Did She Finally Succeed in Ending a Hopeless Existence?



Miss Miriam Frances Bloomer.

ONE charming and radiant young woman, the focus of twenty thousand pairs of admiring eyes in a scene whose outcome is breathlessly awaited by more than eighty millions. She is Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, daughter of the President of the United States, at the Chicago Convention.

Another young woman, beautiful and equally charming, dead from a dose of poison in her brother's New York apartment. She was Miss Miriam Frances Bloomer, once the affianced bride of that same Nicholas Longworth—and once before, since his marriage to the President's daughter, mysteriously and very nearly fatally poisoned.

Was there ever a more startling contrast between two fates so curiously linked? One all bright and joyously secure for the future; the other inexorably doomed by shattered illusions, probably by a broken heart?

The bereaved family refer to an "accident"—the second of two similar "accidents." The Coroner permits the body of the beautiful girl, with only a perfunctory inquiry into the cause of her death, to be quietly taken to the home of her parents in Cincinnati. Officially it is a deplorable incident that is closed.

But no one who analyses the circumstances of Miss Bloomer's death, in connection with that narrow escape of a little more than a year ago from a like fate, and in the light of mental influences easily imagined, can avoid the conclusion that she found life no longer supportable.

It was several years ago that Miss Bloomer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Bloomer—a Cincinnati family of wealth and social prominence—became engaged to marry Nicholas Longworth, of another Cincinnati family of equal social standing and wealth.

Before it was generally known that this engagement had been broken off, Mr. Longworth's persistent courtship of the President's eldest daughter made him one of the party visiting the Philippines, China and Japan, of which Secretary Taft and Miss Alice Roosevelt were the distinguished centre. When the party returned, Miss Alice had capitulated. She was the future Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

This announcement stimulated curiosity about Miss Bloomer's position. When and why had her engagement been broken? There was no satisfactory answer to this question. There was nothing in the aspect of the beautiful, accomplished, high-bred former fiancee of Congressman Longworth to indicate that she was in any way disturbed by his revised matrimonial arrangements.

Yet, as the date for this great wedding of the social season drew near, it was persistently gossiped in Cincinnati and Washington that Miss Bloomer would be among the few invited guests who would fail to attend. It was whispered that her love for the man who had chosen another to be his bride, having once pledged himself to her, had not waned, that to appear at the ceremony uniting him to another woman would be beyond her strength.

Whoever believed this was unfamiliar with the true ring of Miss Bloomer's mettle. Not only was she one of the gayest of the charming guests at the Longworth wedding, but publicly, and in the most smiling and unaffected manner, congratulated the bride and bridegroom.

It was not until some months had elapsed that the state of Miss Bloomer's mind and heart became again a matter of speculation. In March, a year ago, she was mysteriosly poisoned while alone in her room. For a long time she was in a semi-unconscious state. There were deep acid burns on her hands and face. For six months she was secluded in the country, under the care of physicians.

She finally recovered and returned to the social circle in which she moved showing few traces of her terrible experience. She, no more than members of her family, seemed able to explain how she received the injuries which were so nearly fatal. Detectives—even a medium who was consulted—could discover no more than was told at the time by her brother, Ralph Bloomer, the famous Yale football halfback, in whose New York apartment she was living at the time.

Returning to his apartment one evening a little before 11 o'clock, Ralph, according to his custom, rapped at the door of his sister's room to say good night. Receiving no answer, he opened the door and looked in. She was sleeping peacefully; his rap had not awakened her.

Going then to his own room nearby, Ralph read for a while Twice, as he read, he thought he heard low moans from his sister's room. He attributed them to the restlessness that often goes with disturbing dreams, to which she was subject, and went to bed. Early the next morning he was awakened by his sister's maid, who begged him to come at once to her mistress's room.

He found his sister in agony from acid burns on different parts of her face and limbs. She was conscious, but could not speak. Surgeons who were promptly summoned were puzzled. They could not determine what corrosive poison had done the mischief.

It was always denied that any bottle containing poison, or that had contained poison, was found in the young woman's room. Detectives were employed in vain—it was impossible to learn where the poison had come from, or how it had been administered to the young woman, who, according to all accounts, had fallen into a peaceful slumber the night before, alone in her own room, and had not been disturbed until her maid, entering as usual in the morning, found her in agony, close to death.

The publication given to this mystery resulted in more gossip about Miss Bloomer's feelings concerning her shattered romance. Her successor in the affections of Nicholas Longworth was still enjoying the blissful triumphs of a honeymoon, read about and talked about all over the world.

Was this beautiful girl, at the height of her charms of person and mind, a hopeless victim of disappointed love? Was she heart-broken? Had she sought forgetfulness and peace in death?

After her recovery Miss Bloomer went about her social pleasures and duties, giving outwardly no sign of being other than a happy and care-free girl of unusual claims to the admiration and love of men. There has been nothing to indicate that the members of her own family saw reason to be solicitous about the state of her mind and emotions.

Then, suddenly, when a great national event furnishes an incident picturing prominently the settled domestic felicity of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mr. Longworth's former sweetheart drinks poison and dies.

The coincidence here noted does not affect the formal accounts of the tragedy, accepted by Coroner Acritelli, which are to this effect:

Miss Bloomer and her maid, Jeanne Pierre, used cyanide of potassium in cleaning some jewelry, and when they had finished Miss Bloomer told the maid to put the glass containing it away. She was going out to dinner with her brother, who was late returning home from downtown, and when he returned he found her dressed ready to go.

She exhorted him to hurry and remarked that she was very hungry. Then she got some crackers which she had in her room and began eating them. Her brother heard her choke slightly over the dry crackers and go to the bathroom. In a moment she ran from the bathroom, screaming that she had drunk the cyanide instead of water, and fainted. Mr. Bloomer called Dr. Forbes Hawkes, but his sister died soon after the doctor arrived.

Coroner Acritelli questioned the maid, who had gone out at about the time Mr. Bloomer came in, and decided that the taking of the poison was the result of a mistake. Two glasses stood on the washstand, one containing cyanide and the other water.

Other investigations showed, it is said, that Miss Bloomer did not drink from any glass containing a solution of the poison for cleaning jewelry. The only glass in the bathroom containing any fluid was one partly filled with water, in which a belt buckle—after being treated to a bath of the cyanide—was rinsed.

The water in this glass did not contain enough of the poison to seriously injure any one. The glass from which Miss Bloomer drank the fatal dose did not contain any water when she rushed into the bathroom. She must have filled it at the tap. But when the Coroner appeared on the scene it contained at the bottom a sediment of cyanide of potassium sufficient in quantity, he declared, to kill a dozen people.

Why did Miss Bloomer fill with water that glass instead of drinking, to relieve her choking sensation, from the glass that stood ready filled with practically pure water?

Ralph Bloomer declared that his sister that day had appeared in the happiest frame of mind. She had arranged to go with a party of friends for an outing on Lake Erie, and at the close of Summer expected to go abroad with other members of her family.

What is the truth, in the light of all the indications set forth here? Were both these poison incidents pure accident? Or did both have some logical connection with incidents which threw the unfortunate girl into a condition of despondent hopelessness?

At last, with the means at hand, suddenly realizing the utter futility of life for her, the mockery of all her plans for enjoyment, or even contentment in this or any other country—at last did she resolve and promptly carry out her resolution to end it all?

HAS audacity overreached itself? Critics of the sheath skirt declare that it has gone a step too far. It has been tolerated in the ball room. It has been permited on the streets. But since it has invaded the beach the protests against it are louder and more violent than ever.

For the Directoire gown has come and undoubtedly intends to stay awhile anyway. It is becoming. That being the feminine answer to every argument against absurdity, extravagance or immodesty in dress the sheath bathing gown has probably come for the season or for many seasons.

That it is graceful and has chic cannot be denied. It has the graceful outline of all the Greek robes, of which the Directoire gown is merely a modernized adaptation. It has the indescribable but desirable something which Americans call style and the French chic. But it has foresworn modesty. It reveals every line of the figure with shocking frankness, and has the inevitable slit at the side of the skirt which must be there, because no woman can sit down in the Directoire gown without splitting it.

The first sheath bathing suit appeared on the beach at Atlantic City. It went merely for a walk, not a bath, for its appearance caused such a congestion on that part of the Board Walk along which the wearer paced the sands that the police had to order the well-dressed crowd to move on. In the crush a woman cripple who had been in a perambulator fainted.

The pioneer bather who dared to wear a sheath gown into the water was a pretty young woman who took her first dip of the season at Revere Beach, near Boston. She drove from one of the neighboring cottages prepared for the bath. About her trim figure was thrown a long bath robe of dark blue silk. When she reached one of the less frequented parts of the beach she stepped from the carriage, flung the bath robe to her waiting maid and stood revealed, one of the prettiest and most audacious figures that ever shocked a beach population.

Straight from Paris the sheath costume had come. It was of silk in exquisite shade, so like the gray blue of the sea in the morning light that it was only the sharpest nautical eye that could note where a wave ended and the svelte figure of the swimmer began. So trimly did it nestle about the chest, the waist and the hips that women turning their marine glasses upon her said excitedly, "She's wearing a corset. Wonder if it's waterproof." The skirt, of knee length, fitted closely, except on the right side, where it was split to nearly the waist line and laced with a white silk cord, disclosing a pair of silk tights of the same sea shade. With the tights were worn sea-colored silk hose and white sandals. On her head was a charming poke of blue horsehair straw, with a bunch of white roses at the side, and tied under the chin with broad blue silk ribbons.

At New York's Manhattan Beach, a girl appeared for her dip in a modified sheath, one whose skirt was fuller than the prescribed model, and beneath which she wore full bloomerettes, both of white. The girl had to be coaxed to go into the water because her new poke bathing hat had not arrived, and she positively refused to wear "a dowdy, old-fashioned oilskin cap."

At Cape May the bathing master, urged to his duty by a bevy of Philadelphia dowagers, reclining, but by no means unobservant, in their beach chairs, ordered two fair creatures to withdraw from the beach. Their offense was their too striking resemblance to the garishly striped eels found on the coast.

For besides the sheath skirts of which the dowagers strongly disapproved each young woman wore combination tights and hose of black and white striped silk. The oil silk poke bonnet of the one and the bandanna head wrapping of the other were of the same design and color.

"Every one knows that black and white is really the most startling of all color combinations. It can be made positively vulgar," grumbled one of the deck chair occupants, who is a victim of the gout.

"The striped tights and the hats are bad enough, but what lies between—the abominable open skirt—here, bathing master! You know us. You know that for fifteen seasons we have been coming here and bringing our families with us. We demand that you remove those women. Either they leave the beach or we do. If you tolerate such persons in Cape May we will go to Ocean City."

The bathing master timidly approached the laughing young women and delivered the message. "Did you come from those old frumps over there? I saw you talking to them," cried the eeliest of the eel-like maidens.

The bathing master could not deny this obvious fact. The young women, after a brief animated conference and mindful that the bathing master wore a silver star that is the insignia of the law, concluded to withdraw, but as they did so they proved beyond a doubt that they were feminine, for they marched straight past the chairs of the protestants, stared, shrugged their shoulders and laughed.

"Of course, the sheath skirt is not becoming to rheumatic legs," they said in chorus.

At Far Rockaway, where the citizens objected to bathers in dripping suits walking the streets of the town, the sheath bathing suit appeared, but the citizens, at least the male citizens, looked tolerantly upon it. The girl who wore it was a svelte, dashing brunette, and, though the costume was red, it was a shade of red so subdued as to be almost brown. Strictly speaking, it was maroon. Her knickerbockers, stockings and hat were of black, the poke hat being trimmed with an oilskin imitation of a bunch of Jacqueminot roses.

"I wasn't moved to yell for the police when I saw it," said one of the town officials. "I think the skirt was a bit too short, but I wasn't on the dessous side. Everything depends upon the point of view. And the sun was in my eyes."

The official's wife has not yet seen the sheath gown. After she has seen it his view may be different.

Fashion demands that you must wear the hat and sandals upon the beach. If your mother or your maid or a poor relation will kindly consent to sit on the beach and hold them for you while you go into the water, there is no objection to your removing them when you begin your swim. Otherwise you must wear them into the surf. Like the long gloves, they are better worn, but at least they must be in evidence. You must prove by their presence that you know you ought to wear them.

The sailor hat of oil silk is admissible, but the poke is the favorite hat. Flowers are made of waterproof material, that will look fresh and dainty after its contact with the salt water. There are parasols of waterproof material to match the costume. The bathing coats may be of waterproof, but silk, and crash and linen are preferred.

Our audacity in bathing costumes we have borrowed, with other audacities, from the French. A French dressmaker said:

"The bathing costumes have never been so beautiful, so complete or so daring. My patrons insist upon the Directoire style. Silk is the favorite fabric, and the shinier the silk the better. One of my most beautiful patrons looks in her black silk sheath bathing suit as an eel that has just been drawn from the water. Another insisted upon a flesh-colored sheath skirt. An officer interfered—the brute—at Trouville, but powerful influence intervened, and madame was permitted to wear her gown, which made her look as Aphrodite when she rose from the sea.

"This year, as never before, the bathing costume must be complete. To bathe without stockings will not be tolerated.

" 'Straining at bare ankles but swallowing the sheath dress,' was the comment of a cynic bachelor.

"There must be a bathrobe, sandals, a hat and parasol. They must harmonize with the costume. It is well that they match the white or black bands of silk that decorate the bathing dress. The shades may be fawn or flesh color, pink, blue, dark red or black or white or black and white."

It is but a step, say those in the conning tower, from the sheath bathing suit to the one-piece garment that has been in use in European, German and French bathing resorts for several years, but which no one has yet succeeded in making of general use in America.

The one-piece bathing suit is a twin of the combination suit which some women wear as the foundation for their toilets in all seasons. The combination suit is woven of silk or wool or cotton. It may be short sleeved or long, low necked or high. Its distinguishing mark is that it fits even more closely than the paper on the wall, unless the paper be most artistically applied. It is, in fact, the one-piece bathing suit worn by swimming teachers and expert swimmers of the male sex. Swimming teachers have long tried to introduce it. They say that it is the nearest approach to natural garb permitted by the law and by the grace of Anthony Comstock, and that it is the only proper garb for swimming. They argue that the skirt is a menace to a swimmer. It may become loosened from the main garment, entangle the legs and cause the swimmer to drown. Yet a New York helmetted guardian of morals at Bath Beach threatened the arrest of a female swimmer in a flesh-colored one-piece bathing suit if she did not immediately retire to the bath house and put on a skirt.

Poutingly she obeyed, remarking, as she strode back to the bath house with a small regiment of the curious marching behind, "all reformers are misunderstood."

The House of Murder. No. 1—Where M. Steinheil Slept. No. 2—Where Mme. Japy Slept. No. 3—Where Mme. Steinheil Slept That Dreadful Night of May 30.

The Clock That Was Mysteriously Stopped to Tell the Exact Time of the Murders.

A MYSTERIOUS double tragedy occurred in Paris on the night of May 30, which has thrilled and awed the French capital.

It could not be called a murder. That is too coarse and brutal a term to apply to this subtle affair.

Two persons were killed, Adolphe Steinheil, a rich and famous artist, and his highly respected and esteemed mother-in-law, Madame Japy. The artist's wife, Madame Steinheil, a beautiful and accomplished woman, though in a neighboring room, escaped unharmed.

The place of the tragedy was in the little Impasse Ronsin, a cut-off street or court, where many artists have their studios. It is in the heart of Paris, yet quiet and secluded, just off the main thoroughfares.

Artist Steinheil's studio house was among the most imposing of the fine old houses in the Impasse Ronsin. It was shut off from the street by a high brick wall. Within was a little garden adorned with flowers and trees—a rare luxury in the middle of a great city.

Everything about the place bore the stamp of prosperity and affluence.

On Sunday morning, May 31, Artist Steinheil was found dead on the threshold of his bedroom, strangled, it seemed, by a cord round his throat, and his legs and arms were bound. His mouth had been stuffed with cotton.

Madame Japy lay dead upon her bed, in the next room. She, too, had been bound hand and foot, tied to the bed, and strangled. She also had been gagged with cotton.

In the next room her daughter, Madame Steinheil, lay upon her bed bound, and a cord about her neck, but it had not been tightened. She was uninjured.

Upstairs the artist's valet had slept all night without hearing any outcry or noise that it would seem must have accompanied the death struggle of the two victims.

Nothing in the house had been disturbed, except Madame Steinheil's desk, which had been opened and some papers and banknotes strewn about. No money had been taken, though the artist's pocketbook contained $1,200.

The silver on the sideboard was untouched. None of Madame Steinheil's jewels had been taken. On the table by the bed of Madame Japy, who had been killed, lay three rings of great value, in plain view. The clock had been stopped at 12:10 to show the exact time of the murder.

The valet, coming downstairs at six o'clock in the morning, discovered the dead bodies. He notified the police. They came and began an investigation.

Madame Steinheil, excited, hysterical, declared she had been attacked at midnight in her bed by a man, a former model of her husband's, who gagged and tied her. Then she had heard the villain and his accomplice strangle her mother and her husband.

The next day Madame Steinheil made a new statement. There had been four assassins, she said. One was a red-haired woman dressed in black. The other three were men, bearded, middle-aged, dressed in long black robes like Russian priests. She had had a long conversation with them, and they spoke French with a foreign accent, like Germans. Then she gave a long list of jewels that had been stolen.

When Inspector Hamard heard of this he said: "If Mme. Steinheil says that a single one of her jewels was stolen she lies. I saw every one of them this morning."

He declared it could not have been a vulgar burglary. The case became more mystifying the further it was probed.

Mme. Steinheil had sent her daughter, an eighteen-year-old girl, away to the country the afternoon before the tragedy. The maid had gone with the girl to the Steinheil country villa at Bellevue.

One of the two watchdogs was sent away with the maid and daughter. The other dog was sent back to its former owner that same day.

It was observed that the assassins had entered the premises by a private gate through the garden wall. Passkeys had been used for entering the house. The cord and the cotton used in overcoming the victims had been found in the house.

Truly these assassins had been no blundering amateurs. They brought nothing with them. They took nothing away. They came and left like guests or friends of the family.

When the famous journalist, Henri Rochefort, heard of these developments he offered to bet the chief of police 500 francs that no one would ever be arrested for the crime.

It began to be talked about Paris that it was a political crime, and dark hints were exchanged that the secret police were implicated in it.

But what possible political connection could be woven about M. Steinheil's artistic life and untimely death?

Just this: It was to M. Steinheil's house that former President Felix Faure was seen going the night on which he died.

Vance Thompson, the eminent journalist, in his book, "Diplomatic Mysteries," written three years ago, has a chapter on Felix Faure, in which he says:

"There is in Paris an illustrator whose work, in black and white and color, has lifted him into prominence; every one knows his pictures—these sad, accurate glimpses of nocturnal Paris, these scenes of daily life, brutalized by labor and deformed by coarse delights.

"His wife gained the acquaintance of Felix Faure; what unhappy tale she told the old, kindly man neither you nor I may know. He had helped many troubled folks; he liked, too well, to pose as the father of his people, and this occasion tempted him.

"The evening of February 16, 1899, he left the palace of the Elysee and drove to this home of art and intrigue. In his own carriage, surrounded by a cloud of police agents, the President of France drove to the house. The door was opened; he went up the stairs—to his death.

"There are certain truths which no journalist or publicist is quite willing to tell. The facts are too monstrous in their truths to be believed. Truth, as the French say, is not always probable. Only when the blunt facts are seen in historical perspective do they take on an air of likelihood. To scores of men in Paris the mystery of Felix Faure's death is no mystery at all. One of the most accomplished of European publicists, Henry Dumay, lifted the curtain for a moment; then, remembering how improbable the truth may appear, he let it fall. It was a problem every journalist has faced.

"Indeed, at that time, when Paris was keyed up to an extremity of excitement, when there were nightly riots in the streets, and when the troops rode abroad and you knew not what man at your elbow was a spy—at that time to have told the truth about the death of the President would have been a crime against public order, and, as well, a swift way of 'committing suicide.'

"Truly, in 500 years, the Latin world has changed very little. What was darkly done in the caves of the Doge's palace in Venice was done in a Parisian home—above the noise and glitter of an evening street—a moment's walk from the Place de l'Opera, which is the shining heart of nocturnal Paris. The poison that snapped the life-cord of Felix Faure, President of France, was sudden and violent. He was dead fifteen minutes after he went upstairs. It was 10 o'clock.

"For one hour the body lay on the sofa in the little parlor—gaudy with art moderne. A brigadier and three agents of the brigare des recherches carried it down to the door; two men walked it across the sidewalk and placed it in the carriage. What had been the sixth President of the "Third Republic" rode back to the Elysee huddled in the corner of his coupe. When the body was decently laid out in a bedchamber it was officially announced that Felix Faure had died of apoplexy—stricken in his bed.

"While the lying dispatches flew abroad to every newspaper office and to every financial centre, couriers raced to every European court bearing the true story of his death. The truth was heard in Vienna, I happen to know, within twenty-four hours, and was confirmed within forty-eight hours. It was known at the Vatican within forty hours. But these things are not printed.

"With Felix Faure out of the way, the Socialists and Financiers, the Humanitarians and Internationalists went on, making for France what history you know.

"The French police, that famous secret police, does more than detect crime and repress disorder; it deflects the course of history, now and then. The occult government of France hides in its police; the agents who work its will come and go in the dim corridors of the House of the Pointed Towers, there by the Seine. Of these agents, not the least regarded is the dark-browed, cerebral woman who gave into the hand of Felix Faure the cup from which he drank death."

This is why the Steinheil house has become known in Paris as the "home of art and intrigue." Here President Faure had often come before that fatal night. He had posed for Artist Steinheil, and it was his portrait of the President at the Salon that gained for this artist his ribbon.

People began to speculate on why there had been no struggle by the victims. Could it be possible they had been drugged or poisoned, and the tying, gagging and apparent strangling done afterward, to give an appearance of a vulgar murder?

Surely the "secret police" ought to throw more light on such a case, involving people in the highest circles. Mr. Thompson's book gives the following information about this branch of the Paris police service:

"About the words, 'the secret police,' there is a pretty air of mystery. They summon up pictures of cloaked figures, of men waiting in dark alleyways and of stealthy steps behind the curtains of corridors. They are woven into nine-tenths of popular French fiction. The woman concierge, sunning herself in what Parisian doorway you please, feeds her imagination on tales of multiple disguises. For her the agent de la surete, who comes to inquire about her lodgers, is dark with mystery; he is 'of the secret police.'

"As a matter of fact this branch of the police, though dressed in plain clothes, is not at all occult. It has to do with plain and simple crimes. Most of the agents of the surete are old soldiers, honorable men. They are supplemented, however, by a band of quasi police known as indicateurs. These people, who are permanent auxiliaries of the service, are recruited among the street fakirs, the idlers of the barriers, and all the homeless and masterless rogues who foregather in Paris. Criminals themselves, they furnish most of the information upon which their fellows are arrested.

"But behind these humdrum agents and those gloomy outcasts, their aids, there is a mighty and mysterious 'secret police,' about which not one Parisian in a hundred has definite knowled[illegible]he real secret police—to-day, as und[illegible]pire—is that which is known as [illegible]igare des recherches; that is, the brigade of investigation. The members of this force are recruited in a far higher rank of society than the fellows of the surete. Indeed, there is no class—from the old nobility to the new feudality of finance—which does not contribute to this occult system of espionage.

"A foreigner in France, if he associates frequently with people of importance, comes in time to know them well. They follow him in his comings and goings, report upon his acts and opinions, and sift his life with a care unknown in our careless republic.

"At present, interest lies on the political side of this omnipresent agent of republican government. In every sense of the word, it is a creature of the government that is for the time being in power. It not only watches the politicians of the opposition creeping among the conservatives, royalists, Bonapartists and nationalists, but as well it foments those disorders which the government, with a great show of energy, represses. It sets on foot ready-made riots.

"Nine-tenths of the disturbances incident to the expulsion of the monks and nuns of France were planned and created in the perfecture of police—that fantastic building of the pointed towers, which lies along the Seine. Many of the incidents of the Dreyfuss case were begotten there. You may remember that Monsieur Labori, an advocate for the defense, was shot in the back as he walked the streets of Rennes. There was tremendous excitement, but no arrest was ever made. This "crime" was of police manufacture, and it served its passing purpose of injecting into the case a new thrill of sympathy for the government.

"Skilled in all languages, able to enter any society, the agents of the brigade des recherches have their fingers on the pulse of public life and know the men of high place as well as if they had gone through them with lighted candles. In a large measure it is through them that France is governed."

But what bearing has all this on the unhappy Madame Steinheil?

Perhaps none at all. Perhaps it was the mysterious "red haired woman" who Madame Steinheil says entered with the assassins and assisted them in their terrible work.

But what an amazing revelation is forced upon the public that possibly the Paris secret police have a woman who acts as official prisoner when certain exalted folk are wanted to be put out of the way.

No matter what arrests may be made or what explanations the police may make, it is regarded as certain that the whole ca[illegible] will continue to be enveloped in imp[illegible]trable mystery, for it involves too man[illegible] political secrets and scandals to ev[illegible] brought to the light of day.

In the meantime the beautiful [illegible] Steinheil is reported to be at he[illegible] villa at Bellevue quite seclude[illegible] of police agents surround th[illegible] no one is permitted to see [illegible]bers of her family.

Mr. Vanderbilt and the Mysterious Mrs. Ruiz.

WHEN Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt separated from his wife, who was Miss Elsie French, and she presently applied for a divorce, general wonder over this quite unexpected matrimonial shipwreck soon developed into curiosity about a mysterious woman in the case.

The news spread abroad that at about this time Mr. Vanderbilt had made a gift of a handsome automobile to a certain Mrs. Ruiz. It seemed that in the press of his affairs, complicated by divorce proceedings, Mr. Vanderbilt had forgotten to pay for that automobile. The dealers got anxious about their money—thus the mysterious Mrs. Ruiz became, in public estimation, a prominent feature in the Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt domestic breach, which quickly widened into divorce.

Who was Mrs. Ruiz? Was she widow or divorcee? Was she a lady selected by Mr. Vanderbilt to join him in a second marriage venture? Instead of disappearing, the mystery deepened. Nobody seemed able to answer these questions—until they were answered in these columns.

Mr. Vanderbilt shipped himself and some tons of personal belongings to England. Soon the London illustrated newspapers were picturing him driving his London-to-Brighton coach down crowded Piccadilly. Whatever his matrimonial intentions might be, Mr. Vanderbilt, at present, certainly was faithful to his grand passion for horses and the stable.

But on this side of the Atlantic curiosity about the woman part of the problem would not down. Would Mr. Vanderbilt wed the fascinating woman upon whom he called the evening before he was booked to sail to Europe?

Would he marry a charming young widow almost as wealthy as himself to whom he had paid respectful attentions for more than a year?

Would he lay his hand and his fortune at the feet of an English beauty who has smiled upon him since he went to England on the eve of his wife's suit for divorce?

That he will take one of these matrimonial steps seems probable from the fact that his mother's mission, when she followed him to England to beg him to be reconciled to his wife, failed.

When he returns to this country, as he intends to do to attend the horse show at Long Branch, the curious may be gratified. Meanwhile there is much conjecture, much speculation, many attempts to pierce the veil of mystery surrounding his future.

A few who are his intimate friends say that Mr. Vanderbilt, having enjoyed a new term of bachelor liberty, will never again permit the noose of matrimony to encircle his neck. Others reply that when a man is in love bondage is sweet and freedom is a synonym for desolation. The latter relate the romantic story of his meeting with the gay Mrs. Antonio Ruiz and his own resultant divorce, and the application for divorce which has been made by Mr. Antonio Ruiz.

In the diplomatic list, under the heading "Cuban Legation," for this month, is the entry:

"Senor Don Antonio Ruiz Olivarez, Attache, Absent."

That Don and Dona Ruiz are both absent from the Cuban Legation is quite true, for the reason that the Donna Ruiz is sequestered at Port Chester, N. Y., living in luxury and waiting, waiting for what? For whom? No one will say positively, Mme. Ruiz least of all; but she sits every evening in a dim corner of the veranda of a friend's house and looks at the path of the moon on the sea from beneath the shade of her becoming mantilla, borrowed from the countrywomen of her husband, and sighs and thinks—what?

Don Ruiz waits, too, but he waits at the Waldorf Astoria, waits more openly and definitely, for he spends all his hours urging his energetic young lawyer, George Young Bauchle, to be yet more energetic and get a divorce instantly, sooner if possible.

Does Dona Ruiz in the shadow of the long, cool veranda, think of the man of the past, of Don Ruiz? Or of the man of the future? And is that man of the future Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt?

Gossips in circles far remote from those of the man of millions and of the gay woman of fashion predict that a marriage will take place between the discarded husband of Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt and the runaway wife of Dona Ruiz, the Cuban Attache. For, they argue, Mr. Vanderbilt was infatuated. And infatuation, they conclude, is nine points of matrimony.

They say in proof of his infatuation that it was instant; that when meeting a pretty young horse-
park in Syracuse, N. Y., and asking per

Mrs. Antonio Ruiz, Whose Husband Has Applied for a Divorce, and Who Is Said to Have Fascinated the Lately Divorced Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt.

he Inexplicable Conduct of the Richest Woman in America.

MRS. HETTY GREEN, an enigma even to her own sex, celebrated everywhere as the richest and most peculiar women in America, has added a new mystery to the mysterious whole of her remarkable life.

Why has this enormously rich and eccentric old lady suddenly cut short her recent plunge into expensive high life to go back to her $15-a-month Hoboken (N. J.) tenement and her 30-cent meals at a "beef-and-beans" restaurant?

For many years, while piling up her millions with financial sagacity not second even to that of the late Russell Sage, while spending her days in her office as autocrat of the fortunes of the New York Chemical National Bank, Hetty Green had baffled the tax-gatherers by leading the simplest possible life in that little Hoboken tenement.

While handling millions in the way of business, in her private life she was as frugal and saving as the wife of any humble mechanic. Little copper pennies were the unit in auditing her domestic expenditures. She held the janitor responsible for the return of the daily milk bottle, which, if lost, might be charged in her bill. If she entertained, or was entertained, her ideals did not soar above the level of the janitor and his family.

She wore the same dingy bonnet the year around. Otherwise her costume was little more distinguished than that of a washerwoman. She seemed always possessed by two chief dreads—she dreaded being recognised as a rich woman, desiring to avoid the importunities of the needy; most of all, she dreaded the tax collectors.

Before taking her little tenement in Hoboken she had a habit of moving from one cheap boarding house to another—always moving when the other boarders discovered her identity. Often in these places she dressed so shabbily that the landlady would not admit her to the dining room with the more fastidious boarders. This pleased the old lady—she preferred to eat her meals in the kitchen.

In her little hall bedroom she would wash her own handkerchiefs and undergarments, hanging them on the backs of chairs to dry, and do all her own mending. Usually she had no trunk with her, and when moving time came she could walk out with all her baggage in her hands.

That $15-a-month Hoboken tenement was really a step up, for she had some furniture and a trunk, and had bread and milk, and sometimes eggs and meat, delivered by tradesmen of the neighborhood. And occasionally she would give the janitor a dime or a quarter for seeing that the milk bottles were always returned.

During office hours at the bank, if she felt in the mood for lunch, the nearest "beef-and-beans" resort enjoyed her patronage. "Tips" are not obligatory at "beef-and-beans" emporiums.

Suddenly, this last May, without the slightest warning, Hetty Green gave New York its sensation of the year. With her maiden daughter, Miss Sylvia, she became a guest at the Plaza, in New York, one of the most magnificent and exclusive hotels in the world. Not merely a guest, but mistress of a suite of apartments of which the rental is $10,000 a year.

This gorgeous suite was to be her permanent home, she said. This statement, and the spectacle of Hetty Green substituting two and three dollar meals in the grand hotel dining room (actually with a tip for the waiter) for her customary thirty-cent "beef-and-beans" repast, made seasoned New Yorkers wonder if "Hetty had suddenly gone stark mad."

She had a new bonnet, too.

Had her soul, hitherto attuned only to the musical clink of the silver and gold coins as they flowed between the fingers of the cashier in the Chemical National Bank, come to recognize the harmony of rustling silks and lace fans and waving plumes and ultra cultivated voices? Had she, when her years were approaching the three-score-and-ten mark, been suddenly smitten with a first love for society?

[illegible] were evidences of this change of taste, for [illegible] she discarded her worn frock of black bombazine for one of silk. She went to a beauty doctor and began treatment looking to the removal of her wrinkles.

And she gave a dinner. Mrs. Green, who had never before entertained "because she had no time for such foolishness," gave a dinner. For all her non-entertaining during her long life, Mrs. Green made up at this dinner. It surpassed in splendor the banquets given by the Emperor of Germany.

It was served upon the Plaza's gold plate.

Each of the sixteen covers represented an outlay by Mrs. Green of $20. The floral decorations cost at least $50. Tips to the waiters and the maids amounted to $50.

This was the complete menu, destined to go down in history:

Canape de Caviar.
Consomme de Viveur
Filets de Sole Marquise
Baron d'Agneau a la Grecque
Asperges Vertes Speciales, Sauce Polonaise

G. H. Mumm Extra Dry.

At the dinner was Matthew Astor Wilks, the beau of many seasons, who has several times been reputed to be engaged to Miss Sylvia Green, who was looking radiant as the transformed Cinderella in her robe of white satin.

"I do wish I could persuade you to spend the Summer at Newport. I belong to both of the clubs."

Mr. Wilks was addressing Mrs. Green, although he looked straight at Miss Sylvia, who blushed and looked at her plate.

"I would do everything in my power to make it pleasant for you."

"I have thought of it. I think we may," was the reply of the richest woman in the world, while the richest woman's daughter lifted shy eyes of gratitude to her Sphinxlike mother. "The Countess Leary has invited us many times, but I think we would take a cottage and entertain our friends. You see, I've been very busy for many years, but I want to entertain those who have been good to me and my little girl."

And the glances of both mother and alleged suitor centred upon the embarrassed but delighted Sylvia.

Right here there was a characteristic diversion. An exquisite youth lifted his glass to the hostess, saying:

"Really a rare old vintage, Mrs. Green."

"Well, it ought to be," came the prompt answer. "It cost me nine dollars a bottle!"

Shortly after the dinner Mrs. Green bought a new bonnet, a shining new one from which the two pink roses nodded coquettishly, to succeed the battered old one. She drove occasionally in the park after the bank closed, her daughter beside her. Sylvia Green was growing handsome. In the brougham she looked as dazed and delighted as Cinderella in her pumpkin coach.

One night they appeared at a theatre. They occupied a box and two seasoned beaus joined them, and escorted them to Sherry's after the play. The whisper went around the Sherry tables:

"You know Mrs. Green is a widow. The late Mr. Green died—it must have been three years ago."

Mrs. Green, if her keen, light gray eyes noted the whispers, gave no sign of approval or disappproval of their chatter. Whatever her purpose in moving to the Plaza, supping at Sherry's after the play was part of it, and no whispering would deflect her from that purpose.

Yet a week after the pleasant supper at Sherry's she sent a curt note to the bookkeeper of the Plaza:

"Send my bill at once. I'm moving out to-morrow."

Manager Sterry, agitated at thought of losing such a profitable guest, signalled an elevator and ascended to the Green apartments. Mrs. Green was packing her dress-suit case. Miss Green, her eyes red with weeping, stood at the window of her suite from which she was taking a last look at the red brick pile of the Cornelius Vanderbilt mansion, and farther on up the avenue the twin white stone houses where live Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor and Mrs. William Astor.

"I'm leaving," was all Mrs. Green would say.

Why she was going, whether she would ever return, where she was going were queries to which she merely shook her head and straightened her lips by way of answer.

They drove away shortly afterward followed by the wondering eyes of the untipped attendants. Neither the cabman who drove them to their new destination, nor the expressman who carried thither their trunks, would tell whither they had driven.

A fellow guest at the Plaza reported that he had seen Mrs. Green emerging from the McAdoo tunnel that connects New York with Hoboken; but he confesses he might have been mistaken. Though if it was Mrs. Green, he avers, she had discarded her fine new bonnet with the pink roses for the battered old black one.

Later it was established that Hetty Green had, in fact, resumed her Hoboken simple life career.

Why? Had she become suddenly appalled at the cost of her high life orgy? Had she scented the hated taxgatherer hot on her trail? Or had she discovered the hollowness of life in the smart set. Hetty Green does not answer. It is a mystery.

But there is undeniable gain for Hetty Green in the way of an enriched experience. She can reflect upon these contrasts:

At the Plaza—$30 a day for board and lodging; in Hoboken—$8.50 per week for all living expenses.

Plaza—view from her window of Central Park and New York's most fashionable turnouts rolling along Fifth avenue; Hoboken—a dingy back yard containing the signs of a perpetual tenement washday.

Plaza—continually bumping into millionaires and the smartest of the smart set; Hoboken—for society, her tradesmen and the janitor and his family.

Plaza—a tip for some servant for every other breath she drew; Hoboken—(the Lord be praised), no tips.

Where Did Pretty Dorothy Blackburn Come From?

DEAD men tell no tales, nor can they make any protest to the tales of others. Rich Jacob Stout, former president of the New York Stock Exchange, is dead, and therefore can neither affirm nor deny that $150,000 of his fortune was artfully wrested from him in his old age through the potent agency of a "bogus baby."

Did Mr. Stout, at the advanced age of seventy-two, believe himself to be the father of this child, foisted upon him by a designing woman, as the heirs to his estate declare?

Or was he simply generous to a little waif that had won his affections, and to the woman who had charged herself with its care, as that woman now asserts?

It is a mystery which the courts, with rather doubtful prospects, are trying to solve.

The administrator of the estate is G. Lee Stout, a brother. In prosecuting those duties Mr. Stout discovered that his brother had created two trust funds—one of $100,000 for the benefit of Mrs. Catherine P. Blackburn, and another of $50,000 for Dorothy Blackburn.

Mrs. Blackburn is the widow of J. C. S. Blackburn, Jr., son of former United States Senator Blackburn, of Kentucky. The child, Dorothy, is now seven years old.

Mrs. Josefa N. Osborn, a stepdaughter, and chief among thirteen heirs, and the administrator at once went to work to have Jacob Stout's action set aside, on the ground that the old man had been deceived into creating these two trusts. To this end they brought suit, and Justice Blackmar, of the New York Supreme Court, appointed a referee to hear the testimony.

Mrs. Blackburn is a very comely woman, about thirty years old. She is making a vigorous defence. In her answer she tells of the parentage of the child, alleging that it was not her own, and that Stout at the time he created the trust funds knew it was not his nor hers.

"He knew the child had been given to me when it was a little baby," she says. "A woman named Holber, who is now in Germany, was the mother of the child. She did not know what to do with it after the father, whose name was Walters, died. I took the child.

"I took the baby out of sympathy for the woman, and soon became as much attached to her as if she were my own. I gave her the name of Dorothy Blackburn. She is now seven years old, and many times Mr. Stout romped and played with her. He was in the habit of calling on me once or twice a year. I was in the habit of having tea every afternoon at 4 o'clock, in the English style, and he used to like to be there. That is how he came to know the child, and became so attached to her that he created the trust funds for her benefit."

Mrs. Osborn's attorney smiles scornfully in discussing Mrs. Blackburn's explanation. He says:

"We will prove that Stout created the trust funds because he was led to believe that the child was his and Mrs. Blackburn's. We will have no difficulty in proving also that the child was not Stout's and was not Mrs. Blackburn's. Stout was eighty years old when he died, and he was about seventy-two when the child was born. The trial of the case will not last long, I can tell you that."

Mrs. Osborn and her lawyers mercilessly dissect the explanation of Mrs. Blackburn. They call it absurd for her to contend that Stout could have formed such an affection for this child after seeing her only "once or twice a year."

Will the mystery about the baby ever be solved? According to Mrs. Blackburn, there is no mystery—she and a baby waif are both beneficiaries of a benevolent old gentleman. She even names the mother of the baby, although that mother, being "in Germany," is not available for testimony in the New York court. She had no occasion to deceive old Mr. Stout; it was sufficient that the child made its own appeal to the old gentleman's heart.

Could a baby girl accomplish all this—a waif, nobody's in particular offspring—with only two meetings per year at afternoon teas? The heirs [illegible] idea. No, from the heirs' standpoint, old Mr. Stout, by one means or another, was induced to believe that the baby girl was his own and Mrs. Blackburn's.

Why might he not believe such a thing? Many men become fathers at that age. Read Charles Reade's famous novel, entitled, "Put Yourself in His Place."

Old Jacob Stout left an estate valued at rather more than half a million. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars makes quite an agreeable addition to this, when there are thirteen heirs to share it. Doubtless the testimony on both sides will be interesting. Mrs. Blackburn must find consolation in the thought that all the scandalous features are introduced by the other side.

She rears a monument to the disinterested benevolence of Jacob Stout. He visited her only twice a year, at afternoon teas. Does not that dispose of the absurd contention that he could have believed himself to be the father of the baby in the case? Are not lonely old gentlemen's hearts notoriously easy to be won by prattling little ones?

As for little Dorothy Blackburn, will it ever be known whose child she really is, and where she came from?

Edna Goodrich, the Former "Florodora Sextette" Girl, Who Sailed Joyously Home from Paris to Wed a Millionaire—Then Put Her Trousseau in Storage and Sailed Haughtily Back Again.

What Happened to Prevent Edna Goodrich's Marriage?

UL chorus girls recently promoted to where the limelight falls, to particu- their charms, usually go smoothly and at to a millionaire marriage. Notably of several of those, "Tell-Me-Pretty- dora Sextette" beauties.

this mysterious rupture, this sudden put- ween the most beautiful of them all—and her late own and devoted mil- McMillan?

Never before was witnessed such fervor of trousseau-shopping in Paris, such eager ploughing of the seas homeward for the happy nuptials, such a sprint across this continent on the part of an offended fiancee in quest of a personal explanation of her millionaire's chilling telegram, received at the New York steamship pier—and then: Never such a hasty, yet haughty, chase back to New York to make cold storage of a trousseau and catch the next boat for [illegible]

Did Edna Goodrich suddenly change her mind about her millionaire? If so, why?

Did Harry McMillan, that Goldfield millionaire, suddenly change his mind about Edna Goodrich? And if so, wherefore?

Was Edna Goodrich suddenly led to believe, by designing persons, that Harry McMillan's mines were largely of the "salted" species? (Sometimes gold, like beauty, is only skin deep.)

Was Harry McMillan's "nose out of joint" over diverting newspaper cables picturing portly, middle-aged Nat C. Goodwin cavorting over Europe in Edna Goodrich's wake with designs on baffling Dan Cupid, and restoring this all but bride to her favored place in his dramatic company?

Had the millionaire become convinced that the stout comedian had no thought of business, but was personally conducting himself on a Sentimental Journey?

Did the mother of the bridegroom change her mind?

Did the mother of the bride change her mind?

The Sphinx of the Egyptian desert is not more silent upon the subject than is Edna Goodrich; than Harry McMillan; than Nat C. Goodwin; than the families of each about the wedding that had been set for June 10, and that has been "indefinitely postponed."

The secret turns, there is no doubt, upon a telegram which Miss Goodrich received when the steamer on which she returned from Europe docked at New York. As the steamship sailed up the Narrows Miss Goodrich had been bland and gracious and radiant, as becomes a bride. She had chatted with the newspaper men who had climbed aboard from the quarantine tug.

"Yes, Harry and I are going to be married," [illegible] said. "My trousseau is not as magnificent as the cables have said, but it is tasteful and pretty. I think you would like it. I don't know how many gowns there are—perhaps seventy-five, perhaps a hundred. Yes, the date of the wedding is set. It will be June 10, in San Francisco."

She talked of her stage career and alluded to the old "Florodora" days, when she was one of the original "Florodora Sextette," now diffused over the earth as were the tribes after the confusion of tongues at Babel. She abjured the stage and all thereto appertaining.

When a daring one mentioned the name of Nat C. Goodwin, whose leading woman she had been for three years, the group about her expected a frown upon the classic brow. Instead, she laughed.

"Fancy a man with three chins thinking about love!" she said.

Ah—Then it was a Sentimental Journey!

And so was dismissed the man who, hearing the announcement of her engagement to the Nevada millionaire and that she had sailed to buy her trousseau in Paris, took the next steamer for France; who, failing to find her in Paris, had gone to London; who then had sought her frantically in the green lanes of England and among the chateaux towns of France; and who, when asked the cause of this Sentimental Journey, looked as bashful as a boy caught at sending his first valentine, and answered:

"I wanted to know whether Miss Goodrich intended to keep her contract with me to play next year."

The world seemed a glorious place, and San Francisco the radiant centre of it all, when Miss Goodrich sailed up the bay to New York. Her dark eyes were adream with visions of all the happy brides-elect in the world. As the steamer tugged and strained and grated into the slip she was still a statue of blissful content.

It was a small, dirty-faced messenger boy who ran aboard as soon as the gangplank was lowered that changed the whole Edna Goodrich aspect. He sought Miss Goodrich and handed her a telegram. It was a long one. As she read it she turned pale, then bit her lip, then clenched her little hands—then controlled herself with an effort.

"Harry can't meet me," she said to her mother, and the fixed smile changed swiftly to a frown as she read on. Then, with the gesture of a tragedy queen, she crumpled the telegram and thrust it into her chatelaine. Instantly she froze into silence.

"Are you ill, Miss Goodrich?"

"Have you received bad news?"

"Can I do anything for you, Miss Goodrich?"

Miss Goodrich did not hear, or, hearing, she disdained to answer. Turning, she walked away followed by her wondering mother, and her cowed maid. They took the next train for San Francisco.

Throughout the journey the curious asked one another who was the handsome girl who seemed "mad clear through." One, who made the traveller's casual overtures for acquaintance, said that no polar iceberg was ever as unapproachable as she.

"It's Harry McMillan," whispered a Western mining magnate; "the young newspaper fellow that struck it rich two years ago at Rawhide, Nevada."

The porter conducted him to the drawing room occupied by the beauty and her mother. He rapped, lifted his hat, was permitted to enter.

Dinner was served for the trio in the drawing room. When Mr. McMillan emerged at midnight he was pale and his brow was furrowed.

"He went in a young man and came out an old one," said the Western miner.

The party arrived in San Francisco the next morning. The young millionaire courteously escorted the women across the bay from Oakland. Persons on the ferry noticed that the party was quiet and preoccupied, but that Mr. McMillan was exceedingly courteous.

That afternoon the party went to Berkeley to visit Mr. McMillan's mother. That night they dined together and Miss Jeanne McMillan, the bridegroom-elect's sister, was present. The dinner was given in the main dining-room where all who ate might see. It was a most decorous dinner party. The beauty and her fiance sat side by side.

Again he was most satisfyingly attentive. But students of physiognomy declared that the occasion resembled a dinner of funeral baked meats.

Persons who were interested in lovers spoke, while they watched the diners, of the meteoric careers of the pair.

"She began as a chorus girl. She was promoted to the 'Florodora Sextette.' She was raised from the ranks and became leading woman for Harry Woodruff in 'The Genius and the Model.' Nat Goodwin bought the play, called it 'The Genius,' and took over the leading woman. Mr. Goodwin thinks she is a promising actress."

Whereat, those listening smiled. It is well known that few critics have agreed with Mr. Goodwin's verdict. But critics are sometimes moles without the Goodwin admiration of feminine beauty and the Goodwin prophetic eye.

Harry McMillan's career has been as sudden a rise from obscurity as hers. He had been an unpromising reporter on a Butte (Mont.) newspaper until two years ago, when he secured an option on a rich property at Rawhide, Nev. Rocket-like, his fortunes and fame soared to the sky. Harry McMillan became one of the most popular and picturesque young men on the Pacific Coast.

After the dinner, which an observant actress said "was planned with a fine eye for dramatic effect," Mr. McMillan and Miss Goodrich were no longer seen together in public. He departed two days later for his mines in Nevada. She returned to New York and sailed for Paris. Her trousseau was stored in one of the back rooms of a Fifth avenue dressmaking shop.

When she sailed, Miss Goodrich's countenance was as overcast as on her arrival it had been radiant.

"The marriage has been indefinitely postponed," was the only answer of the oracle in this midsummer mystery.

But out of all this mystery there emerges material for a fascinating theory.

Is Nat C. Goodwin's other name Machiavelli?

Does the stout, middle-aged, "three-chinned comedian win, after all?

Is he to be compensated for his heart-breaking chase over Europe—that source of joy to nations—by simply sitting tight and letting his beauteous former leading lady throw herself penitently back into the sheltering arms of his company?

Watch those cables from Paris.

The Strange Dual Life of a Girl Who Likes the Luxuries of Polite Life, Yet Suffocates if She Sleeps Between Four Walls, Cannot Resist the Call of the Wild, and Nature Compels Her to Rove.

The Girl Who Is Jean Rowe in Polite Society and Demetria the Fortune Teller Among the Gypsies.

And as She Is When Executing an Exquisite Dance in a Drawing Room.

A VERY strange case has been discovered by New York specialists, a girl who is civilized in daylight but who turns wild and gypsy-like at night.

Among New York and Philadelphia artists, for whom this extraordinary girl poses, and in her New England home, near Providence, she is known as Jean Rowe.

She is the daughter of a Puritan mother and a Roumanian gypsy father, and her dual nature comes naturally from her strangely mixed ancestry. Part of her life is spent in wandering with the gypsies and part in living according to conventional customs.

But in neither life can she find happiness. When she is with the gypsies the refinement of her New England training craves the companionship of educated people, with the conveniences of bathtubs, knives and forks and plates to eat with instead of paper bags and fingers.

But, on the other hand, when she is living in a house and wearing the ordinary clothes of polite society and doing things that other people do, her heart yearns for the gypsy camp, the woods and her bed on the seat of a gypsy wagon or under the trees.

Though her mother's Puritanical tendencies rebelled with loathing at the bohemian customs of the gypsies, her love for her handsome husband was strong enough to keep her by his side in many of his wanderings. And this was why little Jean was born under an apple tree in a New England gypsy camp.

Her childhood was spent in wandering from place to place and her earliest education was learning how to tell fortunes, for which she seemed to have a remarkable gift.

When she was fourteen her father died, and it was then that her mother determined that she should be sent to school and educated according to the laws of conventional society.

The books which interested her most were geography and astronomy. She seemed to think that these studies brought her nearer to the things she loved—the outdoor world, the stars, the sun and the great planets.

She [illegible] of the seas, rivers and the great forests of the Far West. Math[illegible] made her dizzy, as did spelling and all other branches of study.

For two years she lived with her mother in a quiet New England town near Providence, but a day came when she could stand it no longer. The desire for freedom overcame her, and she fled to a gypsy camp.

None of her mother's entreaties could induce her to return, and she spent the Summer telling fortunes, sleeping out in the open, often on the seat of a gypsy wagon for [illegible] time.

Among the gypsies she is a queen. They recognize her [illegible] and charm of manner, also her beauty endears her to them. But though she loves the poetry, music and picturesqueness of the Roumanian gypsies, there are times when their ignorance and slovenly ways disgust her and compel her to flee to civilized society.

A few years ago she spent a Summer at Hanover, Pa., telling fortunes in a gypsy camp. One of the leading citizens of this town, noting her refinement and beauty, and wondering why she was with the gypsies, when she seemed so different from them, questioned her.

She told him her story. It interested him and his wife so much that they offered her a home with them, hoping to redeem her from the gypsy life. They wanted to make her a lady, and the refined side of her nature made it appear that it would be an easy task.

Accordingly, she left the gypsies. She wore the beautiful clothes her friends bought her, and she would have been perfectly happy were it not for the fact that she was obliged to sleep in a room instead of under the trees.

The room seemed to suffocate her, and many nights, while her friends were sleeping, she stole silently from the house and walked far into the woods where she would lie on the ground and gaze at the stars for hours.

She says that wonderful happiness came to her from sleeping in the thick of the woods, just waking up from time to time to peep at the sky and note its changes. When daylight came she wandered back to her room refreshed.

For six months she lived in luxury, enjoying the comforts of a home as if she had been a daughter of the house. Her friends had grown to love her and began to feel that she belonged to them.

But restlessness again overcame her, and while she was unhappy to leave the friends she loved so much, she could not control the desire to wander, even though it was entirely against her judgment.

To Philadelphia she went first and for the three days which the $50 given her by her friends lasted, she enjoyed that city. When it was gone she found work as an artist's model. She posed for a number of works by the well known sculptor, William H. Grafley, and other Philadelphia artists. But Philadelphia is not a good field for models, and when the few artists there had finished the work begun with her, she became stranded again.

She wandered to Baltimore, where she posed in an art school. By this time she was reduced to absolute rags, and she was weak from lack of nourishment. At last one day, worn out from want and privation, she fell from the model stand.

A young girl, a pupil in the class, who had taken an interest in her, had her removed to her own home. She was taken care of and when her health was restored, Mrs. Ferguson, the girl's mother, offered Jean a position as companion to her daughter.

Jean's civilized spell was by this time returning and she was happy to accept. She felt that this time she could give up her roving life forever, especially as her recent hardships had been so terrible. She enjoyed driving, automobiling, the opera, theatres, fine clothes and every luxury that wealth and refinement could give her. She loved, too, the young girl whose companion she was.

She filled her position gracefully and was happy for nearly a year. But, alas! the gypsy tendencies again began to manifest themselves, and much to the disgust of Mrs. Ferguson, who could in no way comprehend her decision, Jean left her home of comfort again for the gypsy camp. There she remained telling fortunes until last Fall, when she was seized with an attack of conventionalism and came to New York.

The room she chose, after looking at many, was one that contained a grate fireplace, which was the joy of her life. Her closet, instead of being devoted to clothes, as that of most girls would be, was filled with large blocks of wood for her fire.

Dressed in her gypsy garb she would sit before her fire musing for hours. She also enjoyed the steak and chops which she cooked for her dinner over its flame.

The gypsies were of course grieved at losing her. They argued the benefits they could give her. They played and sang to her, gave her their trinkets and money, but the strange thing about these different spells is that she herself cannot control them. They must burn themselves out, so to speak.

She has worked as a model in New York for half a year, and her beautiful figure has won her much success. She loves to pose in an unconventional way. Costume posing does not interest her.

Red is her favorite color. She wears red beads always, and trims her hats and gowns with red. Her room is profusely decorated in red; she says it soothes her, this color which is known to be the most exciting of all colors.

This season she has been again torn between the gypsies and her civilized friends.

A good position as private secretary was offered her at a liberal salary. She could fill it, as she knows shorthand and typewriting.

"What a splendid opportunity for you, Jean," said her city friends. "You will make money and occupy a position of respect." The gypsies, on the other hand, argued in this way:

"Just think of it! Here it is the middle of May and you are still living in a house, actually under a roof! Look at these fine gypsy wagons and think of how we will take care of you; nothing to worry about, and no hats and gloves to wear, and live out under the stars."

The gypsies won again, and Jean is now at a beach, where she will tell fortunes for the rest of the Summer—and sleep under the trees or in a tent on the beach.

Seventy-Five Highly Accomplished Polar Bears Coming to America.

SEVENTY-FIVE polar bears in one group!

This is without question the acme of animal training. It is the greatest "aggregation" of performing wild beasts any one has ever got together. This giant of groups, too, will be seen in America in the near future. Their owner, Mr. William Hagenbeck, a brother of the famous Mr. Carl Hagenbeck, the celebrated animal dealer of Ha[illegible] for an extensive American tour, and, as he modestly declared, "It will be a surprise to America not only as regards number, but what the animals can do."

Only those who have seen Mr. Hagenbeck's wonderful group of performing polar bears can grasp what it means as a spectacle and also appreciate something of the difficulties experienced in getting such a collection together. All naturalists are agreed that one of the most difficult beasts to train and one of the most unreliable is the polar bear. By nature they are suspicious, and although fairly inert as captive animals, are none too willing to exercise themselves at the bidding of man. To train a single specimen of these beautiful snowy white creatures of the Far North is no light task. Imagine, then, what it means to train a whole company of seventy-five. It is the greatest feat ever undertaken and accomplished in the whole history of animal training.

The animals perform in a specially erected arena surrounded by Polar scenery. Indeed, the whole display is an exhibition in itself. The bears form pyramids and groups, climb ladders, drive about in carriages drawn by ponies with monkeys as outriders, draw sledges con[illegible]g their companions, drink out of bot[illegible]d a host of other tricks.

[illegible]genbeck's most docile animal is [illegible]en, the somewhat incongruous [illegible]hich has been bestowed upon [illegible]he company, a very clever [illegible] follows his master about the arena and generally acts the comic as all good clowns do. Many of the bears have been taught to drink out of bottles by holding them to their mouths with their fore feet. It is most amazing and comical to watch an enormous white bear, measuring seven feet in length, sedately sit on a seat, grasp a stone bottle in his great paws, lift it to his mouth and drain its contents, while the band plays a popular song entitled "Have Another Drink." One of the bears, Daisy, is very fond of lying down on her back while drinking. The bears' drinks consist of sweetened water, milk or cod liver oil. All the animals are fond of the former, and few of them object to taking the latter. Indeed, some of them show a preference for it. A couple of gallons of cod liver oil is consumed by the bears every week.

It is a wonderful sight to watch the bears enter the arena. It is almost one endless procession of strolling white monsters. A spectacle that always evokes much applause is Monk's wrestling match with his trainer. Monk is undoubtedly the most intelligent of the whole troupe. Standing on his hind legs he wrestles with his master in quite the approved fashion. Taking up his position in the centre of the mat, he greets his human competitor with a Polar hug. Monk cannot master the knack of shaking hands. Then the contest starts in real earnest, the bear doing his utmost to put the man on his back while the trainer endeavors to prevent the throw.

The whole performance is very lifelike, Monk appearing to put his heart into it, every now and again giving an ominous growl as he endeavors to get a good grip on his companion with his huge paws. To and fro the strange combatants sway until one manages to break away. In an instant they are at it again. This time Monk has got his companion around the waist, the trainer's arm being thrown around the bear's neck. Monk opens his great mouth and snarls, and to the onlooker things begin to look dangerous. But Monk knows the rules and never bites. At the same time he has a knack of digging his claws rather deeply into one's clothes, and to prevent scratches Mr. Hagenbeck wears a very thick leather waistcoat. Even with this stout garment on he gets an occasional scratch. Monk turns the scale at 1,500 pounds, and, as weight frequently tells in wrestling, the bear often gets the first throw. But a throw is not a victory, and on the mat the combatants push and shove until the shoulders of one touch the ground.

But the most interesting and amusing feat, and one that never fails to call for much applause, is the manner in which the bears have been taught to "shoot the chute." The animals climb up an inclined plane until they reach a platform some sixty feet above the ground. Immediately in front of them is the chute, and, to tell the truth, the bears do not care much about venturing on to it. Once on the chute there is no coming back, and it is certainly very comical to watch them fly down into the tank of water below. Some grasp the side of the chute and endeavor to cling there, only to lose their hold when a companion thunders up against them from above. Some reach the water by sliding down backwards, others go headfirst, others sideways, and, indeed, in every conceivable position and attitude. It takes nearly twenty minutes for the whole of the bears to reach their destination, one or more animals being on the chute the whole of this time. Some go down quickly, while others spread themselves right across the course, and only reach the bottom after a more or less lengthy period. Once in the water, however, the animals are instantly at home.

The Romance of the Baron and the Little Toe-Dancer

She Was Highly Indignant When In Broken English and Meaning to Be Polite He Called Her "Little Insect," but When He Said Her "Little Toes Were Twinkling" She Married Him.

BARON HROLF VON DEWITZ, of Copenhagen, unlike Prince Helie de Sagan and innumerable other foreign noblemen, did not come to America to win a great heiress.

Instead he was supremely happy in marrying, a fortnight ago, in Boston, the little toe dancer, Nina Pastorelli.

It was, in fact, her twinkling toes that the Baron fell in love with at first. Afterward he made the psychological discovery that she had a mind.

Now the Baron and his dancing bride are spending a happy honeymoon at the Manhattan Square Hotel in New York before going back to Copenhagen to brave the wrath of the elder Baron Otto von Dewitz, champerlain to the Grand Duke Mecklenburg-Strelitz.

Baron Otto had planned a brilliant match for his son. In fact, the bride had already been selected—the daughter of an Englishman, a South African mining king. But when the young Baron saw her he fled to America. For the heiress had a hare lip, red hair and was as square built as an English navvy.

Though the Baron had no money, he had lofty ideals on marriage and all other subjects. Moreover, he had been in the United States before, and knew that this country furnishes the prettiest girls on earth, and he vowed he would rather have an undowered American girl than the wealthiest bride in Europe.

It was about two years ago when the doughty Baron, ex-Lieutenant in the Danish Navy, came to this country resolved to make a living as best he could and fall in love at the first good opportunity.

When he saw Nina Pastorelli, the pretty toe dancer, as one of the Dancing Daisies, he thought she was a poem of motion. On an auspicious occasion he sought an introduction to her at Mrs. Broughton Brandenburg's studio in New York.

She was so very small and dainty, so pink and white and blond, and took such little mincing steps, that it seemed to the Baron's romantic mind that she must have risen, like an elf new born, from the chalice of a flower.

The Baron, casting about in his mind to find some appropriate English term to describe the girl that so appealed to his fancy, called her "Little Insect."

The girl was furious.

"'Insect,' sir! What do you mean by calling me such a name?"

Then the Baron, overwhelmed, fell on his knees and begged her pardon, declaring he meant that nothing but an insect could be so exquisitely graceful.

The quarrel so dramatically started led to explanations and counter explanations.

The Baron, to his great amazement, found that the "little insect" had a bright, keen mind. He ventured the remark that he had never before known a dancer to have a mind.

This was almost as fatal a remark as calling her "Little Insect," and resulted in further complications. The poor Baron was almost beside himself. In desperation he declared she was the perfect "Psyche type."

This so mollified the little dancer that she graciously forgave the bungling Baron.

Indeed, she really became interested in him, and confided to him that she was not an Italian and that her real name was not Pastorelli, but something very much like Smith, and that she came from Chicago.

In these subtle ways love grew apace.

The Baron marvelled at the girl's golden hair and dark eyebrows. He said her type of beauty was so rare that it would create a sensation in his country.

There are many blond beauties in Denmark, but they are mostly big and ponderous. Think of that Teutonic type, six feet tall, pivoting on a single toe!

At first his thoughts were purely sentimental. Then he began to see dramatic possibilities for his fiancee abroad—for it was not long before the "Little Insect" had shown symptoms of accepting his suit.

He began negotiations with the royal theatre in Copenhagen with a view to inducing them to engage Nina Pastorelli as premiere danseuse. In that event he could return home in a blaze of glory, the proud husband of the leading toe dancer of the realm, and she could be raised by his [illegible] rank to a baroness.

As [illegible] Chamberlain to the Grand Duke Mecklenburg-Strelitz he might even make his "dancing daisy" a member of the royal household.

In the meantime Miss Pastorelli went on with her dramatic work. But she was very lonely without her gallant Baron.

One day she received a letter that said:

"Dear Little Insect:

"What is the use of being miserable separated? We might as well be miserable united. I can hardly pass the day for thinking that your little toes are twinkling so very far away."

At one time Nina Pastorelli would have been provoked at such a proposal. But she had learned from experience that the Baron was incorrigible in his love making.

In spite of all her protests he persisted in adopting that hated term "Little Insect" as his pet name for her. Finally, to settle all controversies, they were married.

Baron Dewitz first came to America fifteen years ago, when he was seventeen years old.

He was strong and square built from his training in the Danish Navy. He had no false pride of rank, and began to earn a living by sawing wood down in Maine. He went from house to house with his wood saw on his shoulder and sawed the cord wood piled up in [illegible] at cottage back doors.

[illegible] he went to Boston and took up literary work. He returned in three years to Denmark and opened up an agency for American bicycles.

When the bicycle business slumped he returned to America and took up literary work again, writing under the pen name of Hrolf Wisby. He became a [illegible] of New York's crack Seventh Regiment.

But his greatest pride and ambition is that his little Dancing Daisy shall dazzle the courts of Europe.

"Here she might have but a mediocre career," says the Baron. "Over there they appreciate art and beauty."

Can Love That Has Cooled Be Rekindled?

IT is not until a man realizes that he is tired of a girl, and never really was in love with her, that he also realizes how foolishly he has acted. It annoys him to find that he has gone so far as to be considered the fiance of the maid, whose whole attention has been given him for a long time—for many of these affairs result in an "understanding" that is the equivalent of an engagement.

Then, not knowing how to get out of the tangle in which he has become involved, he falls back upon the unmanly method of neglecting the girl he has hitherto courted and flattered. True, this is little more foolish than the former recklessness of his conduct, but it causes a good deal of suffering to a woman who has loved innocently and too well and is deserving of better treatment.

A man's methods are often cowardly in dealing with the woman for whom he has ceased to care. He tries to force her to break with him by giving her ample grounds for complaint, but a woman is usually too generous and too loving to take advantage of his devices. Her cry is, "Why are you so changed?"

She cannot understand why the lover who has left her with a fond goodbye can go away and put her out of his mind. She writes him frank, open letters, then pleading, imploring ones, begging all the time that he will tell her what she has done to vex him. He cannot tell her without putting all the blame on himself, without showing that he has not acted a manly part. But even if he could, and is not disposed to, his conduct should show her that his love is dying. The signs are unmistakable.

Is there a woman who, being thus treated, does not know the truth at the beginning? She does; but she will not admit it. Yet all the time, from the moment when the first doubt arose in her mind, she has known it.

There is only one thing to do when a man's love is dead, and that is to let him go. To "win back his love" is next to an impossibility. It is a pathetic sight to see two people, one madly in love with the other, and the other unable to reciprocate. And yet, "Try to forget" is the only advice that can be offered.

A man shows it plainly enough when he has ceased to love. Appointments cease to be attended, he cannot summon up courage to write letters, he is moody and silent, and shows in his manner all that his tongue refuses to say.

If he can get an excuse to go off somewhere away from his fiancee he seizes hold of it and gives her no explanation for his conduct.

The signs of a dead love are unmistakable, and no woman who values her self respect will seek to keep a man by her side who cares for her no longer. The parting will be hard, but afterward she will be glad that she made her decision before it was too late.

How Fate Is Making Monte Carlo's Princely Gamester a Madman.

THE rumor that Prince Albert of Monaco, ruler of the little principality which holds within its borders Monte Carlo, the world's greatest gambling den, is suffering from serious brain trouble is confirmed by the fact that two mental specialists have been hurriedly summoned from Paris to give their opinion on the disorder from which the Prince has suffered for some time. His Highness recently started on a sea voyage on his big yacht, but his doctor had to order his return on account of his condition.

It is singular that this grave mental malady should have overtaken the ruler of the State which fattens on the gamblers of all the world, and grows rich at the expense of reckless men, who in many cases go mad and seek suicide as the only relief from their misery. The Prince himself derives his income from the Casino profits. He has leased the Monte Carlo tables to the Blanc syndicate, and the contract is worth over $250,000 a year for him.

Monte Carlo (and Monte Carlo is, to all intent and purpose, Monaco) is the earth's most beautiful and alluring plague spot. Situated on the blue Mediterranean, between the French and Italian frontiers, on one of the loveliest sites in the world, it is nevertheless the home of terrible tragedy. Many a ruined gamester who has taken his life in his despair has been buried at the Casino's expense, and the management does not trouble to send in any bill to the relatives. All tragic occurrences the Monte Carlo directors do their best to hush up, for such grim advertisements are naturally not relished. Even when the news of a tragedy leaks out the details rarely become known to the public.

It has been estimated that in the first fifteen years of Monte Carlo's existence 3,000 people committed suicide as the direct result of losses sustained at the tables.

From actual statistics kept, it is said that after that period suicides went on at the rate of 200 a year—there are instances where three have occurred in a single day. Any one interested in this subject will find nearly a hundred pages of tabulated suicides in the "Histoire des Crimes et Suicides," giving names where possible, but there is an appalling number of "unknowns"—and details.

A famously typical case is that of a newly married German couple who had been travelling in Italy, partly for their honeymoon and partly on the husband's business. The latter collected $8,000 for his firm, which he was taking back to Germany. They formed the unhappy project of paying a flying visit to the Riviera. They stayed at Nice. The young man, fearing he might be tempted to gamble with his employer's money, handed it to his wife for safety and took only $20 to Monte Carlo to try his luck at the tables.

One evening he was dismayed to find that his young wife was not at the Nice hotel where they were staying. She had disappeared, together with the $8,000 entrusted to her keeping. Information was given to the police, and their inquiries naturally drew them to the gaming rooms, where it was found that a young woman answering the German lady's description had been noticed gambling in bank notes at the tables. When she came to the end of her money she left the rooms in such a state of excitement that one of the paid attendants of the Casino was told off to see that she did not harm herself. He was not quick enough. She threw herself over the terrace, and was picked up dead, and the distracted husband had only the sad satisfaction of taking the body of his young bride back to Germany for interment.

The callousness of the people connected with the establishment is shown by the following single incident:—A man rushed from the tables exclaiming: "I have lost! There is nothing for me but death! I have lost $40,000!" He shot himself on the steps of the Casino. Two or three attendants dragged the body away, and others set to work to scrub the blood off the stones; the play was not interrupted for an [illegible] "Rien ne va plus," was the [illegible] that came from the terrible [illegible]

THE MAN WHO STOLE THE EARTH

Most Thrilling Novel of Love and Adventure Since Jules Verne's Masterpiece.

By W. Holt White.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

The King of Balkania, who has a place at Cookham-on-Thames, where he is known as Mr. Montgomery Jones, is shot at from a launch by an emissary of his enemy, the King of the Sylvanians. Mr. Jones escapes, and himself shoots one of the men in the launch. The affair is witnessed by John Strong, son of Sir John Strong, who comes across the river, pondering on the airship invention of his friend, Joe Langley, and wonders how he can utilize it to win the Princess Diana. Strong asks Mr. Jones for the Princess's hand, and tells him how, by means of Langley's airship, he means to become master of the earth. The King "calls his "bluff." Strong then enlists the airship inventor, Joe Langley, in his great enterprise of winning the King's daughter.

Strong manages to keep a dangerous tryst with the King's daughter, during which he discovers that his enemies have set fire to the airship shed. In rushing to the rescue he is set upon by the King's minions and nearly killed. But he saves his skin and his precious possession by sheer luck.

Strong leaves his bungalow in charge of his old chum, Bellingham, and takes the "Di" up the river to Oxford, where he plans to secrete her, his enlisting the co-operation of Arbuthnot—another college chum—and planning a larger airship.

Determined to see Diana again before breaking with civilization Strong induces O'Gorman, a detective friend, to take him as an assistant to the King's London house where a grand reception is being given. Thus he finds himself in the Princess's presence. He tells Diana that with his armed airship he is about to go to Balkania and besiege Bomberg, its capital city, as a preliminary to "stealing the earth." He will hand back her Kingdom in exchange for her heart. Diana sends him away, warning him that the King may trap him in the house.

Strong is trapped. The King conducts him to an upper room where, refusing to sell his airship, he is held a prisoner. By inducing his guard to drink drugged liquor prepared for himself, he escapes to the roof and is rescued by Langley and the "Di."

Quickly the King motors to Strong's bungalow intent on destruction of all that opposes him—only to find Arbuthnot master of that situation.

As her father walked toward her Diana fell back. Her father continued to walk after her, and she fell back until she reached the door. She spread out her hands and, stretching them behind her, leaned against the door for support.

"I tell you," she said, very slowly and deliberately, "that I will never marry Ludwig."

Then the color suddenly flooded her face, and she burst out passionately: "Or any man, except the man who steals the earth."

Again her manner changed, and this time she flooded the room with peal on peal of laughter. "That! That! That!" she cried, pointing again to Ludwig. "To think that I should marry that!"

And she flung the door open and marched out with her chin in the air; she marched down the passage, leaving the door wide open.

The King closed the door, and then turned to Ludwig and surveyed him sourly and bitterly.

"I am not at all sure," he said, with cutting emphasis, "that there are not certain points upon which I do not agree with my daughter."

Ludwig's pallid face became slightly tinged with red. It was his part, however, to stomach any insult that the King might hurl at him. So he stood with his eyes cast down, listening in silence.

"What I regret most," said the King, "is the fact that you should be the person to witness a humiliation such as this on my part.

"That, however, does not affect the main issue. Diana merely refuses to-day what she will accept to-morrow. With any of my subjects, so with Diana, my word is law. For the present, however," he continued, "we must set this matter on one side and content ourselves with arranging our immediate plans. This refusal of Diana's will not affect my returning to Bomberg to-night.

"The house here will be closed. I shall even go to the length of leaving it without a caretaker. I will have no questions asked concerning the affair of last night. You, too—that is to say, if you wish me to continue as your advocate, must place yourself under my instructions, and remember that my instructions, even though issued to you, will bear no disobedience."

Ludwig said nothing, but made a slight inclination of his head.

"I wish," said the King, coming over to him, "that I could infuse a little spirit into you. A man who drives a car as you do ought to be brave, but you apparently have no initiative. Indeed, it makes it very difficult for me to go away and leave things in your hands.

"But I fancy," the King went on, calmly summing up Ludwig's characteristics with an utter disregard for that young man's feelings, "I fancy that you are dogged, and it is doggedness that does it."

"I took this trouble," the King went on, "to subject your character to this analysis, because I intend that it shall do you good. Perhaps if I place a little more confidence in you that confidence may be justified. At any rate, I shall see. For the moment I have no other course but to leave you here—and your duty is plain. You must return to Oxford to-night and hang upon the heels of Strong.

"I do not suppose he will attempt personal violence, even if you are a little intrusive, and remember that it is absolutely necessary that we should discover the make and the construction of his airship. To that end you had better take with you a competent engineer.

"Mind you, if we can succeed in getting the plans and the specifications we shall have accomplished really all that is necessary. Mark you, I should not object if the airship were to meet with some accident, and think I should not even be displeased if it were destroyed.

"You understand me?" he asked, and he looked Ludwig narrowly in the eyes.

"Perfectly," said Ludwig.

"That, however, cannot cripple Strong entirely. When a man has made one thing he can make another, and it is the next airship that I dread. This affair is merely a toy; the second will be a fighting machine. Good by."

At this moment a servant entered the room and placed a telegram on the King's table. He picked it up and tore it open, then crushed it in his hand.

"The insolent cub!" he said, for the message which greeted him was this:

CHAPTER V.

Making a Stir in the World.

Strong, having finally declined to treat in any way with the King of Balkania, marched on up the stairs and stepped along the corridor on the first floor, whistling snatches from a comic opera of the lightest sort.

At the end of the passage he threw open a door of the sitting-room which he had ged for the use of himself and his who were to be his aides-de-camp, with a cheery "Hullo!" the giant, was seated by the window gazing out; Langley was busy with a paper and pencil wrestling with a chemical formula; Arbuthnot, the bland and lazy, lay on the sofa with his feet drawn up and contemplated the world through a cloud of cigarette smoke.

"Gentlemen," said Strong, "our first duty is plainly breakfast, and after that we will take a holiday until this afternoon. I feel that as the brains of this concern, I really need a rest. I have hardly had half a dozen hours' sleep in the last three days, and before this evening I have to map out the largest campaign on record—the conquest of the earth."

He pulled a chair to the table and sniffed with keen enjoyment the fragrance of the kidneys and the devilled chicken which he had been careful to order some time before.

He took a mighty draught from a tankard of beer, which at breakfast always stood him in the stead of tea, and then he heaved a mock sigh.

"You'll be interested to learn," he said to the other men, "that I have just received the honor of a visit from his Majesty of Balkania. It appears that I have so upset him that he was anxious to come to terms, but really, for the fun of the thing more than anything else, I did not feel disposed to grant them. Metaphorically, I banged the door."

The other men clamored for further details of the meeting, and then discussed the events of the past night, and concerning them it is true Strong felt some little concern. When he had boarded the "Di" Langley had jumped her up three thousand feet, and then they had raced west for Oxford in a bee line. It was the first straight stretch of any distance in which they had indulged, and Strong chuckled with enjoyment as he noted that his pedometer registered two hundred miles an hour.

Fifteen minutes, indeed, going as the crow flew, brought them above the river as they neared Oxford; then Strong, taking charge, had dipped and they had sunk swiftly, but at the last gently, into the water of the Isis.

But as they drew near to the earth they were conscious of two laborers going to their work in the early dawn who were rooted stock still to the earth surveying their descent with surprise, but they could only calculate by the attitude of their figures, for the distance was too great and the light too uncertain for them to have any view of their features.

Referring to this interview at the breakfast table, Strong discussed it in all its bearings, the more so because he, in common with the King of Balkania, had seen the stupid upturned face of the constable when the "Di" had leapt away from the tower. "The constable," he said, "they would hardly believe, except for the fact that our departure took place from the house of the King of Balkania, and in view of all the circumstances of the past few days Scotland Yard would certainly not overlook the matter, but, true, not very much might be said then. But what I am thinking about is the chaw-bacons who saw us alight. Fortunately the trees along the bank hid us from sight when we took the water, otherwise the completeness of our discovery would have been the more complete. In fact, in view of what has happened, I am debating in my own mind what it is best to do—whether to still stick to silence or whether to come out with the truth."

Langley stirred uneasily on his chair. "Surely, you do not mean to tell the public about the concern now?" he asked. "If two and two were pieced together it might be extremely awkward. I am thinking of the jewels stolen from Lady Stapleton's, and of the dead man." He blinked at Strong through his glasses.

"What," said Bellingham.

Arbuthnot laughed. "Bit of a joke," he said, "though anyway I do not know how you would get over the dead man. I should like to see you in the dock Strong, leading the new and as yet unwritten law of the air."

Strong laughed, too, but rather shortly, and rose from the table.

"Exercise, my dear Arbuthnot," he said, "judging from that gradually accumulating figure of yours, is what you mostly need. I therefore propose to allow you to potter about with me all day on the dear old Isis. I fancy that I could sleep the sleep of the just if I found a comfortable punt.

"As for Bellingham," he continued, "he had better come too, and Langley, I fancy, won't care to remain behind."

"And a nice little boatload to shift about," said Arbuthnot, grumbling, as he rose and stretched himself.

They went down to the river, and Strong, in spite of protest, insisted on remaining there until 4 o'clock. He had something at the back of his mind which he did not mention to the other men, and he desired to see if his suspicions would be fulfilled before he revealed his plans. He was thinking that when the evening papers reached Oxford in the course of the afternoon, he would see there more or less circumstantial accounts of his remarkable departure by airship from Park street, and his equally remarkable arrival at Oxford.

Nor was he wrong. As he strolled back along the High, the newsboys, busy here as they are in London, were shouting themselves hoarse, and Strong, purchasing the evening papers, read in them what had so disturbed the King of Balkania on his return to town.

He read that the affair was regarded as a great mystery. Scotland Yard, after the closest investigation, and in view of other information which had come to their knowledge, were disposed to regard the tale of the policeman as being, in the main, accurate. Newspaper men had apparently been busy, for there were long interviews with the two yokels who had seen the "Di" descend. Oxford therefore was at present the centre of the great wonder of the day, and Strong, strolling along, reading the paper as he went, smiled to himself to think of the general consternation he was bringing about.

"Strong, strolling along reading the paper, smiled to himself to think of the general consternation."

As he neared the hotel he reflected that it would not be in the least surprising if he already found awaiting him there a deputation from Scotland Yard. But on second thoughts he saw that this was hardly likely, inasmuch as there was nothing to connect himself with the mysterious business, unless, for the sake of throwing people off his own track, the King of Balkania, being pushed for an explanation, had referred the police to him.

His first thought was of Old Bill, upon whose integrity and affection for himself there depended his whole immunity from an interrogatory persecution. Strong therefore pointed out the paragraphs contained in the evening newspapers, and detailed Arbuthnot to go down to the wharf to insure that Old Bill was true to his trust.

Then he went on to the hotel and waited for Arbuthnot's return when he suddenly declared his intention to Bellingham and the others of holding a council of war. For once he became quite business-like and formal, and bade them all be seated round the dining table in the centre of the room.

"Gentlemen," he said, "and I trust you will excuse the formality of my address, "the time has now come for me to disclose my plans, and it is for you to say whether you will accept them or whether you think it wiser to have nothing to do with my dangerous enterprise. However, I feel it in my bones that you will not leave me in the lurch. You are all, I think, now sufficiently acquainted with the affair for me to say very little of what has passed. Our concern is with the future.

"I decline to deviate one hair's breadth from my declaration that I intend to steal the earth, and the way in which I propose to carry out this decision is as follows. Thanks to a blameless life on my part, I have sufficient money lying by to defray the cost of the airship which it will be necessary to construct in order to complete our arrangements. Langley's part is only that of inventor.

"Arbuthnot, for the present, will be not only the commander-in-chief of my forces next to myself, but the fighting arm as well. Bellingham's part," here he looked at the vacuously smiling nobleman, "is really more exacting than any of ours. I am going to borrow his yacht, the Aphrodite. Not just at present, it is true, but by-and-by, as soon as the airship is ready for use—that is, of course, if Bellingham is willing to lend her to me."

"Certainly, what," said Bellingham.

"Mind you, my dear fellow," Strong went on, talking now directly to Bellingham, "I want you to realize that, once having begun to take a hand in this business, you will not be able to withdraw without probably sacrificing the lives of Langley and Arbuthnot and myself.

"Langley estimates that six months are necessary in which to construct our new ship. That means that in six months and a day, if the work is finished to the hour, we shall be outlaws—outlaws with our hands against every man, and every man's hand against us.

"Then our first move will be to annex the kingdom of Balkania, and this, if I am not mistaken, will simply fall into our hands. The only arms that will be necessary will be compact but high explosives in the shape of hand grenades, a careful distribution of which would in a very short time reduce the citadel of Bomberg to ashes. And I do not suppose that, if the Government of Balkania finds itself face to face with accepting me as its new monarch or having its cities wiped out, the present King of Balkania's Ministers will take long to make up their minds."

Arbuthnot whistled.

"Pretty sweeping, isn't it?" he asked.

"More sweeping than you think," said Strong. "In six months' time I shall be the new broom which will begin to sweep the earth. Bomberg will simply be the beginning—the small beginning—but until I have annexed Bomberg," he continued blithely, as though he were announcing plans for a Summer jaunt, "it will be necessary to have a base, and at the outset that base would be, with Bellingham's permission, that excellent yacht Aphrodite. But I only propose to use that base for a very short time, because I have good reason to think that our ideal refuge, the place where we can undertake repairs and replenish our supplies, is merely waiting for us to take possession of it."

"Mind you," said Strong, "you will now probably think that I am telling you a fairy tale, but all fairy tales are simply a matter of tradition, and most traditions have a reason. There is no such thing as smoke without fire.

"Now, for some time past I have been turning over in my mind the traditions of the Ring of Nissa, which my father told me last year when he came back from the Carpathians. My dad, you know," he added with a smile, "is one of the most persistent and hardy of mountaineers, though his age is close on to seventy.

"Now, last Summer the dad was out climbing around a place with the jaw-breaking name of Drechobeca. Now, a couple of leagues or so southwest of Drechobeca there is a ring of glaciers; this is called the Ring of Nissa. So far, in spite of all the efforts that have been made to scale them, only one of these mountains has been climbed. And then not very much was learned. From the inner edge of it, so to speak, it drops absolutely sheer for a thousand feet or so, and on the other side there rises a second mountain, not so high as the one which was scaled, but sufficiently immense to hide the view beyond. Thus, though the outer rim of this circle of mountains has been scaled, no one knows what is contained within, but there is a tradition that there lies in the circle of these hills a wide and pleasant valley, peopled by dwarfs.

"Now, all legends grow with time, and so I suppose we may cut out the dwarfs. But geographically my father declares there is no reason why there should not be a fertile if wild valley within these hills. He for his part believes that there certainly is.

"Well, I am going to see. As soon as the new airship is constructed I shall make a bee line for the Ring of Nissa, and if the valley is there, well and good; we shall have an unassailable fortress which we can hold against the world if we are only a handful.

"There we shall be able to repair and refit, and even do further building. Of supplies there need be no anxiety. The explosive which I propose to use is a simple one to manufacture and quite understood by Langley. He was working the formula out this morning. Therefore, with the airship and such an explosive, we are complete masters of the situation. We have only to hang over the head of a city to take it."

Arbuthnot had listened to this long recital with his face aglow. The audacity of the thing appealed to him immensely, and his faith in Strong was complete. Langley's face, on the other hand, had grown somewhat paler than usual, and his heart failed him a little at the thought of the colossal undertaking upon which they were about to embark.

Bellingham was without fear, but certainly not without surprise. He was so completely lost in wonderment that even his precious eyeglass had fallen from its accustomed hold.

"Gad, Strong," said he, holding out his hand, "you are wonderful, simply wonderful."

Strong laughed easily, and took the proffered hand.

"No, my dear chap," he said, "the wonderful part of this business does not rest with me. Langley's the man we have to thank for it. Langley is the man who invented the ship, and Langley is the man who, I may now inform you, has made two other discoveries which make all our modern scentists look absolute fools.

"This modest and retiring young friend of ours," he said, leaning an affectionate hand on Langley's shoulder, "is the greatest scientific genius of modern times."

"No, no," protested Langley, "that is not true. I have invented nothing new. I have simply improved on what other people have done."

"Modest now, as always, you see," said Strong, laughing. "And now to reveal the great secrets which Langley and I have been hugging to ourselves for the past three months. First, Langley has mastered the thing after which every electrician has been striving for the past decade; he has discovered the storage of electricity."

Arbuthnot, now almost crazed with excitement, rose from his seat and thumped Langley on the back until Langley coughed and edged away.

"But there is more to come," said Strong, "and something almost as wonderful. He has improved on the present wireless telegraphic system until he has produced an apparatus which will transmit and receive messages for a distance of 400 miles, and yet the whole concern is so compact and so silent that it would attract no more attention than an ordinary typewriter."

"Good gracious!" said Arbuthnot; "you don't mean those queer-looking boxes we brought away from the Bungalow?"

"Yes," said Strong, "those are the things I mean. Just get one, and I will show it to you."

THE SUMMER "SHEATH" AND ITS "UNDERNEATH"

by Mrs. Cholly Knickerbocker.

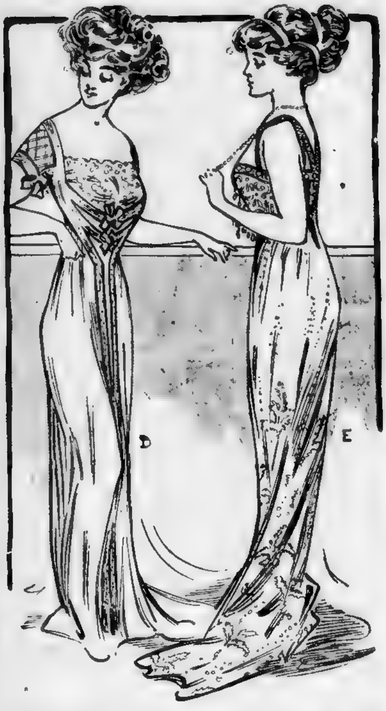
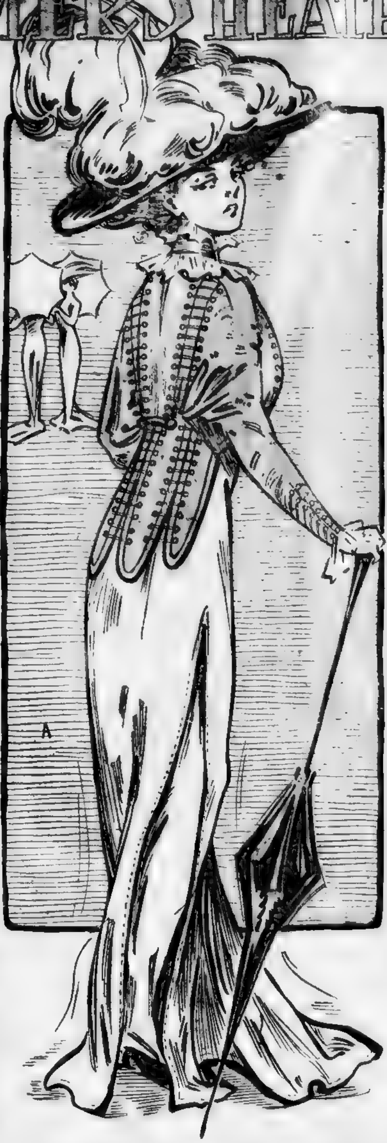
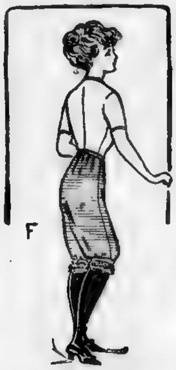
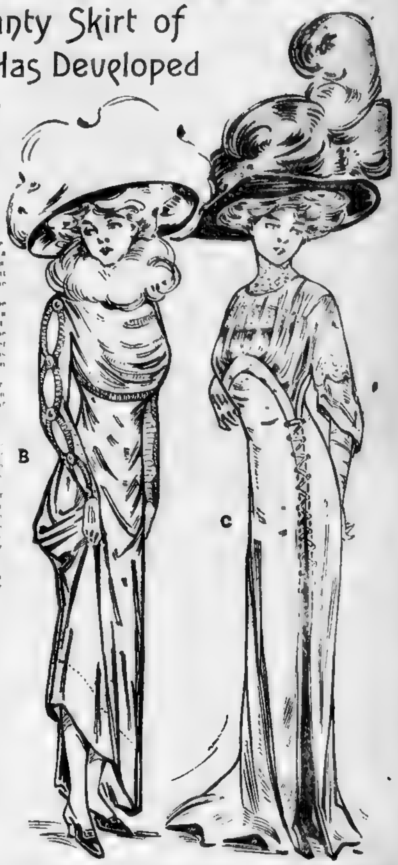
How the Scanty Skirt of the Winter Has Developed Into the Split Skirt of the Summer.









A—The Split Directoire Skirt Which Is Shocking the Conservative People of Two Worlds.

D—Evening Dresses Grow More Audaciously Clinging.

F—Oil Soaked Corset Bones and Skimpy "Knickers" Help to Construct the Figure of the Moment.

WHAT an extreme! What a fuss! Legions of hands uplifted. Eyes, too, in pious horror lest they should view the awful sight. A million voices chanting disapproval and disgust in French, in English, in good downright American. And all because of what?

Just because woman, dear capricious woman, has dared to eliminate a few unnecessary yards of swathing material from her skirt and, worse still, has dared to split up that same skirt for half a yard or so at the side. In the slang of today, "Ain't it awful, Mabel?"

Horrible! Shocking! I quite agree with you (with a smile behind my hand). But, after all, what could the poor girl do? Like the woman of Du Maurier's story who tearfully said she'd like awfully to sit down, but her dressmaker said she couldn't, without the split in the sheath skirt its wearer would be condemned to eternal standing. And that standing indefinitely becomes a trifle monotonous one's friends who live in New York's Harlem and travel in a perpendicular position each day, via the Subway, can testify. So do not judge too harshly.

That the Directoire modes—the sheath skirt and the slashed skirt worn over a petticoatless form—are the most startling things in the way of fashions that have been launched in many moons, there's no denying. But have they been launched? Isn't it rather a case of flags flying, bands playing, the champagne bottle smashed on the bow—and the ship stuck fast on the ways? One swallow doesn't make a Summer, nor do three dressmaker's models parading at a French race course create a fashion.

But of one thing I'm certain—it's going to be a grand thing for the comic opera choruses.

For some time we have heard and read of fashionable French women daring much in dress. Of wonderful brocades tightly wound around chiffon-clad forms, of limp supple satin caressing and outlining the whole figure, of scarfs of gauze forming the costume. Decadent dress, it has been called, and who will say it is misnamed?

Lately, we learn with surprise, of dresses being made to lift at one side, disclosing a foot and ankle clad in [illegible] jewel-studded slipper and flesh-colo[illegible] [illegible]. After all [illegible] only [illegible] of the scissors and behold, the [illegible] skirt! Oh, no! I wouldn't [illegible] surprising viewing the recent trend [illegible] fashion to see smart Parisiennes going [illegible] the limit of the Directoire style. But [illegible] how well it will be [illegible]. In picturesque luxurious surroundings [illegible] softened [illegible] and appropriate [illegible] and will [illegible] startling costumes be[illegible] [illegible] The movements will be the result of long and careful study before a mirror in the solitude of their boudoirs. Their poses, too, will be carefully thought out, for gowns modeled on these extreme styles require most delicate wearing.

But here! Imagine a figure in a robe Directoire rushing across in front of a [illegible] or sprinting down a subway platform. The only possible setting would be the marble palace "cottages" and velvet lawns of Newport. Who knows? Perhaps we may see them there before the season is over.

In the meantime just the ordinary everyday woman is taking several reefs in her skirts, if she makes any pretence of keeping up with the fashions, and she is impressing upon her home dressmaker that she can't save enough from the skirt to [illegible] a sleeveless coat. She reads with awe of the bride who had nineteen pairs of knickers—silks, satins and pongees—in her trousseau and not a single solitary frilly feminine petticoat. What a pity! But at the first opportunity she sneaks off and invests in a pair of tights to wear under her new satin evening dress. When the bill comes in and her husband raises his eyebrows at the item "tights," she murmurs "bathing!" and he doesn't know that the fateful words "flesh colored" preceded it.

Now is the day of triumphs for the lean woman. As I've said before, it's really vulgar to have what is commonly called a "good figure." The slimmer, the more straight up and down you are the better. Clothes abroad suggest the uncorseted figure. If corsets are worn they are of the most pliable description, with the front bone omitted, for the figure drooping languidly, either sitting or standing, is now the fashionable pose. As a matter of fact, only a small percentage of women can afford to appear without their "stays," as the English call them.

In America corsetieres are modifying the armor plate in which they have insisted on encasing the female form divine for some time. While corsets are still built extremely long over the hips and below the waist both back and front the bust is short, an extension of coutil, or of whatever material the corset is made, confining the flesh below. One corset boned with whalebone which has been given successive baths of oil to render it pliable is having a vogue just now, as it gives a supple outline, while at the same time apparently reducing the wearer's size.

With the sheath skirt its wearer may have all the will in the world to wear petticoats, but she hasn't the room! Positively these skirts are so glove-fitting that the wearer of a petticoat would be instantly [illegible] little unpreventable wrinkles [illegible] would show through the tightly stretched outer fabric. So it's tights for her.

These she wears over her corsets to veil the ending of the corset. Sometimes she wears a single under garment of chiffon, made princess fashion, so that there may be no line of ending at the waist. French women have, with their usual ingenuity regarding clothes, invented tights having woven slits just below the turn of the hips, through which a ribbon is threaded, attaching a petticoat of plaited mousseline de soie. This underskirt appears in the slit of the Directoire skirt, veiling the ankle and limb.

The illustrations on this page give a very good idea of this much-talked-of style of dress. The accessories of the period have been tentatively put forward for some time. The tall Directoire walking [illegible] picturesque [illegible] when properly [illegible] has been [illegible]. Now the Directoire hat is being exploited by fashionable milliners [illegible] in the shape with which we are familiar from illustrations of the dress worn during the time of Napoleon.

These hats are quaint things, of the poke bonnet family, adorned with three nodding [illegible] plumes [illegible] bunches of posies and always with [illegible] which tie under one [illegible] demurely under the chin. [illegible] worn by [illegible] the Newport smart set [illegible] they [illegible] with garden [illegible] [illegible] sticks, [illegible] Directoire.

HOW I TOOK MY WRINKLES OUT

After Massage Cream and Beauty Doctors Had Failed.

BY HARRIETT META.

Trouble, worry and ill health brought me deep lines and wrinkles. I realized that they not only greatly marred my appearance and made me look much older, but that they would greatly interfere with my success, because a woman's success, either socially or financially, depends very largely on her appearance. The homely woman, with deep lines and furrows in her face, must fight an unequal battle with her younger and better looking sister.

I, therefore, bought various brands of cold cream and skin foods and massaged my face with most constant regularity, hoping to regain my former appearance. But the wrinkles simply would not go. On the contrary, they seemed to get deeper. Next I went to a beauty specialist, who told me she could easily rid me of my wrinkles. I paid my money and took the treatment. Sometimes I thought they got less, but after spending all the money I could afford for such treatment, I found I still had my wrinkles. So I gave up in despair and concluded I must carry them to my grave. One day a friend of mine who was versed in chemistry made a suggestion, and this gave me a new idea. I immediately went to work making experiments and studying everything I could get hold of on this subject. After several long months of almost numberless trials and discouragements I finally discovered a process which produced most astounding results on my wrinkles in a single night. I was delighted beyond expression. I tried my treatment again and lo and behold, my wrinkles were practically gone. A third treatment—three nights in all—and I had no wrinkles and my face was as smooth as ever. I next offered my treatment to some of my immediate friends, who used it with surprising results, and I have now decided to offer it to the public. Miss Gladys Desmond, of Pittsburg, Pa., writes that it made her wrinkles disappear in one night. Mrs. M. W. Graves, of Bridgeport, Conn., states: "There is not a wrinkle left; my friends say I look twenty years younger. I consider your treatment a Godsend to womankind." Mrs. James Barse, of Central City, S. D., writes: "The change is so great that it seems more a work of magic." I will send further particulars to any one who is interested absolutely free of charge. I use no cream, facial massage, face steamings or so-called skin foods; there is nothing to injure the skin. It is an entirely new discovery of my own and so simple that you can use it without the knowledge of your most intimate friends. You apply the treatment at night and go to bed. In the morning, lo! the wonderful transformation. People often write to me, "It sounds too good to be true." Well, the test will tell. If interested in my discovery, please address Harriett Meta, Suite 915 P, Syracuse, N. Y., and I will send you full particulars.

Journal-American-Examiner Patterns—No. 367.

NO more graceful home jacket could be devised than this pretty model developed in black and white dotted Swiss. The simple shaping is effected by shoulder and underarm seams, the fullness falling in soft folds from below the tucks that are taken up on each side the centre front.

The tucks in the back extend to the waist line, and a belt of the material encircles the waist, giving that trim look, so essential to a garment of this kind.

The square cut neck and elbow sleeves are finished with beading run with black ribbon velvet. If preferred the sleeves [illegible] extend to the wrist, completed by [illegible] cuffs. Lawn, flowered dimity, cotton, cashmere and albatross are all suitable for reproduction.

DORMITORY THIEF FRIGHTENED AWAY

[illegible] Thursday Hoare and his wife quarreled because, as she declared, he was not supporting her. The wife left the house, telling him she wanted nothing further to do with him. Hoare had no [illegible] himself so his wife gave him a fifty cent piece from the small amount she had managed to save.

[illegible] she became worried, fearing [illegible] hungry. She started to their [illegible] at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Margaret Rice, the landlady, went to Hoare's door and knocked, but received no answer. She opened the door with the pass key and was horrified to find Hoare stretched out dead on the bed with his throat cut. A blood-stained razor on the bed told the story. On the table lay the 50-cent piece that Mrs. Hoare had given him Thursday. Either the man had refused food without spending the money or else he had deliberately starved himself before ending his life.

Mrs. Hoare was prostrated when the news was broken to her. "I was sorry for him," she moaned. "I was going to give him some more money. I wanted to have a talk with him. Poor Will."

Hoare was thirty-seven years old and, like his wife, was of English birth. Mrs. Hoare will try to get money to give him a burial, starting her burial fund with the little bit she had meant to give him on her return last night.

Harvard to Take Snapshots of Sun in Eclipse Today

Moon Comes Between the Earth and His Solar Majesty, Beginning at 10:08 A. M.

Preparations have been completed at the Harvard College observatory in Cambridge for taking photographs of the eclipse of the sun which occurs to-day.

Beginning at 10:08 a. m. the moon will appear between the sun and the earth and for two hours the surface of the sun will be more or less obscured. The eclipse will start at the western edge of the southern part of the sun and move in a westerly direction.

The moon moves the space of its own diameter in one hour. As a result of this, and its speed with the movement of the earth in the opposite direction, the eclipse will be over at 1:14 p. m.

This eclipse will be visible throughout the United States. As the moon will be at the part of its orbit farthest away from the earth, no part of the earth will be in total darkness. The centre of the shadow will be observed in the cities of Mexico, Tampa and the Bermuda islands.

Elevated Car Telescoped; Passengers Rescued by Firemen Over Ladders.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, June 27.—In a rear-end collision between a seven-car train and a three-car train on the Third avenue "L" late to-day at 101st street, twenty-five persons were injured, and a panic occurred, during which women were trampled upon and children were crushed against the sides of the coaches.

The three-car train had left the Ninety-Ninth street station, crowded. For some reason which has not yet been explained, the train halted at 101st street.

The seven-car train followed, and as it left the station the motorman put on almost full speed, thinking his fellow-motorman in the other train would whizz along, as the tracks were clear. Before he could jam down his brakes the larger train crashed against the rear car of the preceding train and almost telescoped it.

Immediately there was screaming and a stampede. Men and women, perhaps 300 of them, rushed for the doors, or tried to get out the windows. In this crush many were injured.

During the panic the third rail became short-circuited and pedestrians below ran into hallways to escape the shower of sparks.

A fire alarm was sent in by the police and ladders were hoisted to the "L" structure. The firemen worked like mad, taking down the endangered people one by one.

From windows that had been shattered crept men, women and children, cut and bruised by the jagged glass. They warily walked along the footpath which abuts upon the third rail.

Fire started in the bottom of the rear coach of the forward train, but the firemen were quick in their work, and in fifteen minutes they had conquered the flames.

BURGLARS LOOT HOUSE IN MALDEN

Gems Valued at $300 and Odd Fellows Jewel Taken from Ex-Mayor Hastings' Home.

Jewelry valued at $300 and an Odd Fellow's past grand master's jewel valued at $100 were stolen last night from the house of ex-Mayor William A. Hastings of No. 3 [illegible]ham terrace, Malden.

The thieves forced an entrance to the house through a rear window and completely ransacked the house. Mr. Hastings discovered the robbery about midnight when he returned home and found the house [illegible].

The family has been away for some weeks and he has been living alone. The Malden police are working on the case.

BAY STATE MEN TO SUPPORT DOUGLAS

QUINCY ON A STILL HUNT

For Vice President, William L. Douglas of Massachusetts.

A dispatch to the Boston Sunday American last night from Denver said that the Massachusetts delegation will undoubtedly support W. L. Douglas for the Democratic nomination for Vice President.

Mr. Bryan's reported declaration that he has as yet no personal choice, but that he would prefer to have an "Easterner" on the ticket with him, is said to be helping the Douglas suggestion in a decided way.

The Hon. Josiah Quincy, ex-Mayor of Boston, has been in Colorado two weeks. Other Boston politicians said last night that they thought they could discern the practiced hand of Mr. Quincy in the sudden reappearance of the Douglas candidacy. Some of them declare that Quincy carried the Douglas boom out to Denver with him, kept it under cover until the psychological moment, and brought it forth to public view just as soon as Mr. Bryan had mentioned "Easterner." Mr. Quincy was given a good deal of credit last night for his opportuneness.

Williams Approves.

It was also said that George Fred Williams, Mr. Bryan's personal representative in New England, would not be averse to seeing the name of Douglas of Brockton on the National ticket, even though it came with a Quincy benediction. Mr. Williams and Mr. Quincy, politically speaking, have been unfriends for many years. Mr. Williams's friends said that nothing like this would stand in the way of Douglas. Mr. Williams holds the millionaire shoe manufacturer in the highest regard, personal and political, it was said.

In a sense, Democratic politicians say, the Hon. Josiah Quincy has been "up to his old tricks." They said this more in praise, some of them, than disparagement. They recalled how, in 1904, Mr. Quincy "beat" the Bay State delegation to St. Louis just as he has beaten the thirty-two Massachusetts votes to Denver this year. In 1904, as in 1908, Mr. Quincy was three weeks ahead.

In 1904, Massachusetts was for Richard Olney for President, until the delegation got to St. Louis, and Mr. Quincy got to the delegation.

Quincy's Hand Is Seen.

The delegation of 1904 was pledged to Mr. Olney under the unit rule, but Mr. Quincy, on the ground early and close to the engineering department, was happily in a position to let the boys know on their arrival that it was "all Parker" and that they had better get from under with neatness and dispatch. Most of them got from under with alacrity. The Olney boom passed into the Land of the Never Was.

It wasn't nearly so hard to find folks who thought they could account for Mr. Quincy's dexterity last night as for the change that must have come about in the plans of ex-Governor Douglas, if it is a fact that ex-Governor Douglas is countenancing the Douglas "movement."

Three months ago, after his return from a Winter cruise in Southern waters, Mr. Douglas gave the public to understand that he was done with politics forever, that the simple life attracted him more than ever, and that under no circumstances would he be a candidate for second place on the national Democratic ticket.

Mr. Quincy's friends, taking it for granted that Mr. Quincy and none other can be responsible for the sudden Douglas movement at Denver, say it is quite impossible that Mr. Quincy can be acting without Mr. Douglas' knowledge and consent.

The chairman of the Democratic State Committee, James W. Synan, of Pittsfield, who is a delegate to Denver, said last night:

"Would Help the Party."

"Personally I feel very kindly to ex-Governor Douglas and would be glad to see the Democratic nomination for Vice President come to Massachusetts. Governor Douglas has certainly demonstrated his ability as a vote getter in this State, and, while it seems improbable that the party would come so far East for its candidate for Vice President, still I would like to see ex-Governor Douglas the man. I would want, however, a unanimous choice on the part of the Massachusetts delegation. I feel that all the delegates are kindly disposed toward Governor Douglas, but we have no word from him, and I believe that we should get this first of all."

Thomas J. Collins, secretary of the Democratic State Committee, said:

"Ex-Governor Douglas would make a very strong candidate for Vice-President. Massachusetts would be honored in his selection and his nomination would help the Democratic party in the East."

A prominent Democrat who never talks for publication said last night: "Josiah, the same old Josiah, is out in Denver, and this Douglas story comes on while Josiah is there. Wherever there's the prospect of a barrel, there you'll find Josiah."

LINEHAN SAYS HE'S OUT FOR CONGRESS

South Boston Senator Notifies His Friends He Is After O'Connell's Seat.

State Senator Frank J. Linehan of South Boston is notifying his friends that he will run for Congress this year in the Tenth District against Joseph F. O'Connell. The announcement was not entirely unexpected.

Mr. O'Connell has not yet completed his first term. He was nominated two years ago, when William S. McNary came home to remark that he had had about enough. After a hard battle for the nomination, with Edward L. Logan of South Boston, Mr. O'Connell won over Edward B. Callender, Republican, by 18,979 votes to 14,621.

The Tenth Congressional District is made up of Wards 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17 of Boston, the town of Milton and the city of Quincy.

"I am going to run against O'Connell," Senator Linehan says, "and I'm going to beat him."

Congressman O'Connell refused last night to be stampeded. He said he didn't care to make any comment on the report until he had seen it made authoritatively.

Senator Linehan has served in the State Senate for two terms. Before that he was a Boston Alderman.

ADLAI STEVENSON OUT FOR GOVERNOR

Springfield, Ill., June 27.—Former Vice-President Adlai Stevenson of Bloomington will make the contest for the Democratic nomination for Governor at the primaries on August 8. Stevenson petitions are being circulated to-day.

MELROSE PAIR WED DESPITE 2 STATES

Melrose friends of Arthur Everett Small and Miss Marion Campbell Barbour, both formerly of that city, are intensely interested in the story of the marriage in Washington, D. C., of this young couple, and the difficulties that beset them in the way of getting a marriage license, even though they were accompanied by the mother of the bride-to-be.

The bride is only seventeen years old, and the District of Columbia wouldn't wed them. The old cavalier State of Virginia was discourteous, and it remained for staid old Maryland to sanction the marriage within her borders.

Mr. Small is hindered in traveling because he is a cripple, having been so from a boy. He goes about in a wheel chair. The obstacles he encountered in getting a license for [illegible] and his pretty fiancee were enough to discourage an ordinary man, to say nothing of one hampered as Mr. Small is by his physical misfortune.

Turned Down by Clerks.

Nothing daunted, however, Mr. Small took himself and his bride-to-be and his respective mother-in-law from one jurisdiction to another till he found one marriage law that suited him and thus secured his bride.

Arthur E. Small is twenty-five years old and the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Small of Florence street, Melrose. He was graduated from the Melrose High School in 1901 and from Harvard University in 1905. He took up law, and three months ago was appointed to the immigration service at Washington.

His boyhood sweetheart has been Miss Marion Campbell Barbour, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Barbour, neighbors of the Smalls on Florence street. Marion was graduated from the Lincoln grammar school in Melrose in 1906, and a year later entered the High school, remaining there till Christmas, when she moved to Washington with her parents.

It was known that one reason for the removal of the Barbour family to the Capitol was the intended marriage of Marion and Arthur Small, which was planned for July 2. Invitations for that date had been issued.

Decided to Wed Quietly.

The youthful couple decided, however, to be wedded quietly, the parents being agreeable to this change of plan.

Small applied for a license, but was told that the District of Columbia laws require a girl to be eighteen years before wedding. Mrs. Barbour went with Small to the license office to show that the parents consented to the match. But the license was refused.

Then they went to Richmond, Va. There they found that the girl must be twenty-one years old or else must have a written consent of the parents. Mrs. Barbour was there to write her consent, but Mr. Barbour was not. The couple appealed to the court. Two judges differed in opinion, and the couple decided to take no chances with such an obdurate State.

Someone suggested Rockville, Md., as the nearest place in another State. Forth to Rockville they all went. And there the couple were married by the Rev. Thomas H. Campbell, a Methodist clergyman.

This was last Thursday. The happy couple returned to Washington and received the chidings of their friends for being married so secretly. On July 1 Mr. Small starts on a tour of inspection for the immigration department. He will take his bride with him and make it a honeymoon journey.

MAYOR ON VACATION AT PROVINCETOWN

Mayor Hibbard is at Provincetown for a five weeks' vacation. He will return to Boston July 4 to preside at the exercises at Faneuil Hall, but after that until early in August will return only for official business of importance.

10,000 AT OUTING OF ODD FELLOWS

Rebekahs Aid in Making Field Day at Point of Pines Successful.

Ten thousand Odd Fellows, wives and friends gathered yesterday and last night in the third annual field day of the lodges of Eastern Massachusetts, and with the cooperation of the Encampment and Rebekah branches of the order, made the event at the Point of Pines most successful.

Ball games, running races, exhibition drills, band concerts and dancing, followed by fireworks in the evening, made up the programme, and, with the various side shows, dodgers, [illegible] and games of skill scattered about the grounds, the [illegible] a [illegible] park of [illegible]

Major George [illegible] Emerson was [illegible] all day long, and was busy at keeping the crowd in good humor. He was [illegible] by W. J. Moore, who had charge of the athletic events. Major George H. W[illegible] made a hit with his drill of a battalion of patriarchs.

Fat Men Make Fun.

The fat men's race created much fun. It was won by William W. Schonfeld. Neptune Lodge of Revere had the champion ball team, easily vanquishing Dorchester Lodge by a score of 5 to 2. After winning this game the Neptunes crossed bats with the Middlesex Lodge twirlers and laid them away to the tune of 10 to 5.

The 100-yard dash was won by G. W. Jones of Ermine Lodge, 220-yard dash by J. M. Magrath of America Lodge, fifty-yard dash for boys by H. H. Hersey and fifty-yard dash for older boys by Ernest Cotton.

The Rebekahs were responsible in a great measure for the success of the day and late in the afternoon they conferred the degree of [illegible] on a number of the Odd Fellows.

Dr. [illegible] W. Plummer had a corps of white-gowned nurses were on hand with a large hospital tent located on the beach, but as the day was cool and the games passed off without accident, the hospital service was not called on to show its efficiency.

Grand Master Attends.

Grand Master William A. Hastings and suite were present, as was Major H. W. F. Cate of the Encampment, who visited with the subordinate officers of his battalion.

The officers of the committee who were responsible for the success of the outing were: [illegible] J. Southwick, president; William J. Schofield, first vice; John H. Joyce, second vice; Miss [illegible] M. [illegible], secretary; Charles H. Green, treasurer, and Major Daniel S. Knowles.

Those having charge of the sub-committees were William J. Moore, Edgar H. Emerson, John L. Howard, Harry Green, Charles Carter, Warren H. Morgan, N. J. Southwick, Theodore L. Bearse, [illegible] S. Knowles, William W. Sch[illegible], Mary [illegible] Southwick, Dr. F. M. Plummer, Walter F. Baswell, Norman Rassle, Arthur J. Poole, General O. C. Emerson, Miss M. Fielda Cripps, Major George H. W[illegible], George F. Harding, General E. H. Emerson and John H. Joyce.

MYSTERY IN TRIP OF ELIJAH'S BARK

Portland, Me., June 27.—After lying at anchor in the harbor since February 1, the bark Kingdom, the Rev. Frank W. Sandford's private yacht, which came from St. Thomas, Danish West Indies, is to sail from this port in a few days, but the exact date and where this mystery ship is going are not known to anyone in this city or to anyone except those on board or probably some of the disciples at Shiloh.

The craft is in command of Captain Moses, but he has refused to say where they are bound.

When she arrived here last February there were forty-six people on board, including seventeen women.

BABY FALLS 75 FEET TO STREET; DYING

Catchy ragtime airs played by a hurdy-gurdy are likely to be the last music that little Mary Lubinsky, three years of age, of No. 557 Main street, Cambridge, will hear on earth.

While a street piano was playing in Main street yesterday afternoon Mary leaned far out the window waving her little hands and arms in glee.

She lost her balance and fell seventy-five feet to the sidewalk, striking on her head and fracturing her skull, and sustaining concussion of the brain and internal injuries.

Her mother was in an adjoining room. She called her little one, and, receiving no answer, rushed to the winodw and saw her baby far below and a crowd gathering.

Rushing down the flights of stairs at breakneck speed the frantic woman snatched up the child from the ground and darted to the nearest drug store.

A police ambulance came on the run. Mother and baby were carried to the Cambridge Relief Hospital. On the way Mrs. Lubinsky held her darling in her arms.

"Mary! Mary! Speak to me, my darling," she cried time and again.

Once and only once the white eyelids opened and a beam of love shot out of the innocent blue eyes.

"Mamma," came the faintest whisper. Then the little eyelids dropped and baby was so still, so still.

Roosevelt, at Bier of Cleveland, Paid Tribute to the Dead

Cincinnati, June 27.—Judson Harmon, attorney general under Grover Cleveland, returned to-day from attending the Cleveland funeral in Princeton. Mr. Harmon was at his Summer cottage in Charlevoix, Mich., when he heard of the death of Cleveland. He hastened to Princeton without taking time to change his clothes.

President Roosevelt just before the funeral summoned the members of the dead President's two cabinets into the chamber of death and delivered to them with his characteristic energy and force a few remarks on the life and death of Mr. Cleveland. Mr. Harmon said it was probably the only approach to an eulogy preached at the funeral.

Around the bier, with heads bowed, stood former Postmaster General Hoke Smith, former Secretaries David R. Francis, Vilas, Richard Olney, John G. Carlisle, Herbert and Harmon. All had been summoned to the bier by President Roosevelt. The Chief Executive, pointing at the coffin, told of the good deeds and the faith in which Cleveland had peacefully died.

"It was an impressive, as well as a tactful tribute," said Judge Harmon.

CITIZENS SAVE OLD TREE.

Pottsville, Pa., June 27.—Confronted by armed resistance from Yorkville citizens, the borough authorities to-day failed to cut down a big Spanish oak tree which has stood on Mahantongo street for more than 100 years.

Tom McCarthy, the Doves's latest recruit to the pitching forces, was the hero of the diamond matinee at the South End grounds yesterday afternoon, as he was the whole thing in beating the Phillies in the first game of the series. The score was 4 to 1 and McCarthy scored two of those credited to the winners, while he connected for two safe hits out of three times up, one of those being a double over the centre fielder's head.

That a youngster in the box could make them bite the dust caused the Phillies to get sore and they got madder as they came up in each successive inning and met the same fate. It was not till the curtain was about to be rung down that McCarthy weakened just a bit and the lone tally of the visitors came across the plate.

Before the game was under way the Phillies were big favorites with the wise pickers, especially as McQuillan, their star pitcher, was on the mound and the fans even could hardly expect the Doves to come back so strong after playing such a hard series in New York, but all calculations were smashed and the Doves came to the scratch in fine shape, aiding McCarthy to win his game with the proper stick work and the high type of fielding.

The little pitcher did not look like a formidable proposition when he faced the heavy stickers of the Phillies, but he started off well by fanning the first man who faced him. Then when the second walloped a two-sacker it looked like the beginning of the end to those who misgauged the kind of stuff McCarthy was made of.

Phillies Try to Rattle McCarthy.

The Phillies tried every method to rattle the youngster. They howled from the bench in defiance to Umpire Rigler and took desperate chances on the bases to score, but came to grief. Six hits were all they could collect and they were so far apart that they were harder to find than the key in the Hidden Not Lost mystery.

There were no flies on the twirling of McQuillan, Billy Murray's star, who made a record earlier in the season for winning quite a number of contests in a row, but it was evident that he had been overworked, as he failed to last, and the final time up for the Doves was his Waterloo, as he was bumped all over the lot, a triple, two doubles and a single being the execution done to his delivery and enough runs were made to put the game on ice.

It was a strenuous battle for the whole distance, with the pitchers holding command of the situation till the end was in sight when the stickers began to slow a bit. The home team was particularly shy on hitting, as there was only one safety marked up in five innings, the batters going out in order.

Twice the Phillies made an assault on third base going to the eighth, but were frustrated each time. Then they got busy in the eighth and twice men were thrown out at the plate when they tried to tie the score up.

Boston's one run in the sixth looked good enough to cop the prize, but to make things sure three more were added in the ninth, and it was lucky, too, as the Phillies would have got on even terms and made the game go into extra innings.

Doves Late in Hitting.

The Doves started off by hitting the ball in the air for distance, which presaged that some rapping would be forthcoming later and it did only very much delayed. Both teams had their eyes on the ball, as each pitcher only registered one strike-out apiece, and by a coincidence both gave the same number of base on balls in the same inning, but it was more costly to McQuillan, who forced in the Doves' first run by passing the batter with the bases filled.

The lack of scoring gave the crowd little chance to get thrilled up as the goose eggs kept piling up, and they waited for the break, when it had to come before the time limit was up, and they got their fill in the last session.

First up was McCarthy. He immediately punched the ball over Osborne's head to the centre field fence and if he had been a fast runner would have easily made third, but stood on second. Beaumont spanked the first ball to far right centre and sprinted like the wind before stopping at third, while McCarthy trotted over the plate. Beaumont did not make a foolish attempt to score on Browne's out, Knabe to Bransfield, but waited for McCann, who lifted a long fly to centre and then scored.

Captain Kelley hit the ball on the trade mark, smashing through the diamond over second and went all around the bases to the plate on Dahlen's terrific clout to the fence in left centre, on which he got two bags. Then the bombarding slowed and Hannifan made the third out, but the game had been clinched.

There was some apprehension when McCarthy walked Magee the first up for the Phillies in the ninth and Bransfield swat-

Special to the Boston American.

New York, June 27.—After having won the game the Red Sox tossed it away to the Yankees this afternoon, Elberfeld's men walking off the field victorious, 7 to 6, with only one man out in the ninth.

After the Yanks had scored in the eighth, Deacon McGuire should have taken Cicotte out of the box, but the "knuckle ball" man was kept at it, with the result that before the eighth ended the locals had made three tallies. In the ninth a single, a sacrifice, a base on balls and two more singles did the business.

But if Cicotte lost the game for Boston, Lake won it for New York. Newton essayed to fool the visitors, but the Deacon's swift youngsters got to him right off the reel. Three singles and a base on balls for the first four men up settled Newton's hash and Elberfeld sent him to the stable.

Lake There With the Stack.

Lake came in to stop the free hitting, and in a measure he succeeded, although the Sox got to him good in the fourth. The score was 6 to 0 when the first half of the fourth ended, and it looked like an easy win for Boston. But Lake drove a two-bagger after two were out, and then a pass and two singles scored two runs.

Things ran along until the eighth, when Lake came to the front with another double, a man being on first, with one out. A force-out and three singles followed, and three runs came across the plate.

In the ninth Lake again drove in the tieing run, and paved the way for Niles's winning single, so that it will be seen that he was pretty near the whole cheese.

New York might have won the game in the eighth, but for a rank decision by Silk O'Loughlin. With three runs in, two on bases and two down, Ball shot a grounder to Gardner, who pulled Unglaub off the base with his wide throw. Ball was clearly safe, but Silk called him out. Elberfeld rushed at the arbitrator and for his choice language was sent off the field. The crowd hissed and hooted the umpire for ten minutes and there was nearly a riot. Seldom have New York fans so strongly protested against a decision.

ELBERFELD ORDERED OFF.

Elberfeld sneaked to the New York bench during the excitement that went with the ninth inning, but the umpire spotted him and drove him out of sight again. In the end, however, the Kid manager was very happy.

Thoney started the game with a single and Sullivan followed suit. McConnell drew a base on balls and Doc Newton was promptly canned. Gessler kept up the swatfest by driving a safe one to right which scored Thoney and Sullivan. Gardner, who played third in place of Lord, fanned, but Unglaub was safe on Niles's fumble. Wagner put up a sacrifice fly to Hemphill and Gessler raced home with the fourth run. Criger was out, pitcher to first.

The Yanks looked dangerous in their half when Niles walked and went to third when Gessler muffed Keeler's fly. Moriarty fanned and Hemphill walked, filling the bags. Ball struck out and Stahl hit weakly to the box.

There was little doing until the fourth, when with one down Cicotte singled, Thoney also singled, and Sullivan was safe on Ball's error, filling the bases. McConnell drove a single to left, scoring Cicotte and Thoney. Gessler and Gardner were easy outs.

Yanks Tally Twice.

New York got back some of the six runs in the last half. With two down Lake doubled to left, Niles was passed, Keeler and Moriarty singled and two tallies were recorded.

In the eighth, with the score 6 to 2 against them, the Yanks got very busy. Conroy walked, Blair popped to McConnell. Lake hit on the left field line for two bases, scoring Conroy. Niles forced Lake, but Keeler, Moriarty and Hemphill singled in succession for two more runs. Then came the decision at first which banished Elberfeld and started the crowd hooting the umpire.

In the ninth Stahl led off with a single and Conroy sacrificed. Blair walked. Lake scored Stahl with a single and Niles sent

HARVARD EIGHT NOT TO COMPETE ABROAD

No More Foreign Crews Can Compete in Henley Regatta, Say Stewards.

London, June 27.—There is a disappointment in store for the Harvard crew which defeated Yale for the college championship of America because the Henley stewards say that no more foreign crews can compete at their regatta, and besides the entries closed June 1; therefore, they could make no exception of the Harvard crew even if they did wish to compete.

The same situation exists in the matter of getting in the Olympic regatta and competing against all the eights sent to London from various countries. The entries closed for the Olympic event on June 1, though the committee made an exception in several cases, allowing them till June 30. The Harvard authorities who sent over their entry after defeating Yale must have been under a misapprehension that the last day of this month was the day of closing for all crews.

Secretary James E. Sullivan of the American A. A. U. thinks the same as the Olympic committee and does not see where Harvard can get into the big regattas, but suggests that a race might be arranged with either Oxford or Cambridge.

Mr. Stuart, the stroke of the Cambridge crew, says that there is little chance of Harvard meeting either of the English universities, as the men have practically quit training and will be members of different crews which compete at the Henley and Olympic.

The Harvard crew was to sail next week for England, but may defer the voyage under the circumstances.

SYRACUSE VARSITY EIGHT FIRST AT POUGHKEEPSIE

Scant Length Separates Winner From Columbia and Cornell Crews.

Poughkeepsie, June 27.—Syracuse won the big 'varsity eight race over the four mile course here. Columbia was second, Cornell third, Pennsylvania fourth and Penn. fifth. A scant length separated the first three boats.

The weather was more of an uncertainty among the spectators when the crews plunged oars for the great race of the day than had been evidenced during the early hours. When the crowds saw the shells in position at the stake boats and had a good opportunity to size up the men, the certainty of the rooters were changed to doubt. It was hard to pick from the three favorites, Syracuse, Columbia and Pennsylvania. The men looked strong, they worked like the fine mechanism of a watch, and endurance was written in their every action.

Syracuse, the prime favorite, got away quickly. The crew used a more steady stroke than did the four-oared crew. Columbia also held to the long stroke. Pennsy worked along in the same manner. The men realized the value of inches and contested bravely. Before a mile was covered the strain began to tell. Rowing became a labor exquisitely torturous. The stroke became more deliberate and as the blades left the water they jerked in fashion that showed well the [illegible] determination and desperate resolution of the crews. This was the same with all of the eights.

Crews Set Gruelling Pace.

Fortunately the sun had just dropped behind the hills on the west shore and a cool shadow spread over the surface of the river, otherwise the pace was gruelling enough to wear the heart out of almost any of the crews. The excitement on the observation cars was intense. College yells re-echoed through the valley and startled birds from the wooded hills. When the race was close the spectators became frantic. It was worth traveling a long distance to taste some of this brand of excitement.

First mile—Wisconsin hit up a great spurt and gained half a length. None of the crews changed strokes to overcome the lead. They held steady and depended on strength. Pennsy forged to the front, strong, splendidly in form.

Columbia crept out as Wisconsin dropped to third. Syracuse was fourth. Cornell was last up to this point. It seemed that the fight was between Pennsylvania and Columbia.

Second mile—Wisconsin began to crawl forward with a [illegible] stroke. The crowd gaped with astonishment. Pennsylvania still held the lead. Syracuse seemed to weaken a little. Cornell was content to trail to bunch. They were reserving strength. The shells were bunched prettier than in any previous year.

Third mile—It became a heart breaking grind. There was no water between the shells. Syracuse pulled to second place. Wisconsin began to sprint. At 3 1-2 miles with the exception of Cornell the shells were nearly even. Wisconsin sprinted for the pace. Columbia came out splendidly and contested. Syracuse took it all within a quarter of a mile distance, Cornell began to forge ahead.

Last mile—Pennsylvania moved for the spurt. A man in Wisconsin dropped. He recovered but had no strength. Cornell lagged for Pennsylvania. Syracuse took the lead. Wisconsin quit at three miles.

A length would have covered the difference in the three leaders for the last mile, and at the finish. Excitement was more intense than in many years. No more glorious race ever was seen on the Hudson.

After it was possible to reach the crews by word, it was learned that the shells during the last quarter mile had not moved from relative positions as much as two inches. They might have been bound by a steel brace so firmly did they ride on to the finish.

The remarkable feature of the race was the tremendous strength of all the crews with the exception of Wisconsin. The Western rowing machine also was sturdy beyond the ordinary. It was most unfortunate there was one weak joint.

Old Man Courtney Delighted.

Old man Courtney was delighted with Cornell. He had been dolefully predicting a very bad race. He is wearing a smile this evening.

It was one contest at Poughkeepsie that gave the crews proper percentage in strength, nerve and endurance.

The race ended in proper form. No one crew had an advantage over another. No one can complain. The best team won, the next best was second, and so on down the line.

Syracuse won the four-oared varsity race which opened the regatta. The start was at 3.07, and Cornell led for the first mile, but hit a stakeboat coming under the bridge and did not finish. Pennsylvania was second and Columbia third. Pennsylvania was disqualified for fouling, however, giving second place to Columbia. Time—Syracuse, 10:52 4-5; Pennsylvania, 10:57 4-5; Columbia, 11:03 2-5.

The freshmen eight-oared race came next, and Cornell won, with Syracuse second, Columbia third, Wisconsin fourth and Pennsylvania fifth. Cornell took the lead at the start and held it to the bridge, here Syracuse caught up and passed the Ithacans. In the final struggle, however, the Cornell youngsters went to the front again and won.

VAN VLECK KNOCKED OUT OF BOX BY CRIMSON NINE

Special to the Sunday American.

New York, June 27.—Harvard sunk another gaff into Yale's quivering flesh this afternoon when the Crimson won the deciding ball game by a score of 9 to 5. It was a joyous two-hour session for the Harvard contingent who yelled themselves red in the face from the time Yale went to pieces in the third inning until the last armed foe expired.

Van Vleck, who made monkeys of the Crimson a few days ago, tried his hand again, but the Harvard men fell on him in the very first inning, only a sharp double play preventing havoc. It was in the third that Van went to pieces. After he had butterfingered a couple of bunts the Harvard batsmen changed their tactics and began driving the ball. Two singles, followed by Aronson's tremendous home run cleaned up [illegible] and Van was as badly off as [illegible] was in the Yale shell the other day.

Van Vleck Knocked Out.

He was taken out of the box and Rose finished the game. Had Rose started off in the first inning things might have been different, for he pitched an excellent game. Harvard got three runs off him, however, making one or more safe hits in every inning he pitched except the seventh.

Hartford, the left hander, started off for Harvard. Yale couldn't touch him, but he became very generous with his passes in the fourth inning, giving four [illegible] their base. These, with an error, allowed Yale to score twice. Hartford stayed the inning through, but it was thought best to substitute Hicks in the fifth. Yale found Hicks for a hit or more in each inning and got three more runs by slow process. Harvard was out to win, however, and Yale really had no chance after the Crimson had scored those six tallies in the third.

Big College Crowd on Hand.

There was a vast crowd of college men at the Polo Grounds to see the final baseball battle of the year between the two old rivals. The yelling from 15,000 throats was continual, but of course the Harvard men made the most noise. The Yale shouters were pretty quiet after the third.

Thousands of pretty girls occupied seats in the grand stand. With rosy cheeks and eyes of blue, it was hard to tell which side they were rooting for. Most of the male contingent were college men, but there was a good-sized crowd of regular New York fans, who cut out the league game to-day with a view of seeing some excitement among the collegians. These "regulars" got their money's worth, and they found themselves yelling with the rest, although they didn't care which team won.

Yale Game to the End.

It was a sorry day for Eli. The Yale blue was very anxious to win in order to atone somewhat for that defeat at New London. The players were game to the core and used every means to turn the tide of battle. But Harvard was out to win and would not be denied.

The Crimson [illegible] batted like fiends. McCall got four [illegible] and a [illegible] in five times up. Harvey, who followed him on the batting list, did even better with three singles and a three-bagger. Aronson only made one hit, but it was a clean home run which sent two men across the plate ahead of him and broke the Yale back.

Yale fielded brilliantly in spots, pulling off three splendid double plays. Tad Jones and Wylie changed places in the fifth inning, Jones going behind the bat and Wylie going to first. Harvard played steadily all through and never lost her head.

Harvard Gets Six in Third.

Both teams did not do much execution till the third inning, when Harvard got together in her half and pounded out six rounds and won the game right there.

The foot of the Harvard list was up as Hartford stood at the plate and he got a

MacLean Beats Moran in Fierce Bike Race

Two foes never waged such bitter warfare as did Jimmy Moran and Hugh MacLean in their twenty-five mile motor-paced match race on the Revere cycle track last night, which MacLean won after a gruelling race by a trifle over a lap.

It was not surprising that the time of 37:00 1-5, was the fastest ever ridden behind the small motors as the men set a terrific gait and held the 2,500 fans spell bound.

MacLean led for the whole distance, but by less than half a lap till the sixteenth mile, when Moran dropped his motor when MacLean was trailing him some distance in the rear. Before Moran could get into his stride, MacLean passed him, but he never could after that.

The men started from opposite sides of the track, MacLean getting the best of the pistol, and in the first mile he caught up with Moran and challenged him, but Moran was not to be easily passed.

MacLean fell back for a fresh attempt and in the second mile went up on his rival, but was forced back after a hot brush.

On the fifth mile MacLean went up again and they had it out for several laps, Moran holding MacLean high on the bank. MacLean got by, but before he could get down on the pole, Moran, by a great spurt, caught him and forced him back. MacLean saw it was useless and yet he was determined, and on the eleventh mile came up against and was almost by, when Moran frustrated him once more amid the cheers of the frantic fans.

Moran thought that his motor went wrong in the sixteenth, and slacked up an instant. Before he could tack on again, MacLean saw his chance and slipped by, but after that he could do it again, as Moran balked him at every attempt.

Considering the fight that MacLean made so many times to pass Moran, his riding was wonderful, for in spite of the energy wasted in fighting Moran, who had the pole berth, he had enough in him to finish the whole distance at express speed, though he was wobbling a little in the last five miles.

Seventeen amateurs appeared in the five-mile open and there were so many tumbles by the field but eight were left to go for the prizes on the last mile. There were spills on every mile, in which riders and wheels were mixed up on the track. C. Connolly was the winner, getting a big lead at three miles, and the field could not catch him as he avoided the spills. His brother Tom was one who fell and was ruled off the track afterwards for jockeying to prevent his brother being caught.

Drobeck beat T. Connolly and Helander in the ten-mile motor-paced race by two laps, Connolly barely getting away from Helander by five yards. The summaries:

Half mile, handicap, amateur—Won by Goodrich, 90 yards; second, Mundy, 75 yards; third, Farren, 90 yards; fourth, La Montague, 60 yards. Time, 58 2-5s.

Five mile, open, amateur—Won by C. Connolly; second, T. Pansey; third, A. S. La Montague; fourth, C. W. Hayes. Time, 12m. 26 3-5s.

10-mile motor pace, amateur—Won by Peter Drobeck; second, T. Connolly; third, C. Helander. Time, 17m. 23¾s.

BIDWELL WON IN PITCHERS' BATTLE

With Bidwell, the former crack English High School pitcher, in the box for the Charlestown Knights of Columbus, and "Sid" McMullin, formerly the Melrose High star twirler, for the Melrose B. B. C. team, the Charlestown delegation defeated the Melrose team on Melrose Common yesterday, 7 to 3.

The Melrose team was a brotherly aggregation, being composed of four sets of brothers, many of them former High School players. Up to the sixth inning Melrose held the visitors, but a combination of errors through shortstop, first base and second base in that inning gave the game to Charlestown. Score:

Home run—J. Waldron. Three-base hit—A. Cassell. First base on balls—Bidwell (2), McMullin (3). Passed ball—J. Waldron. Struck out—By Bidwell, 10; by McMullin, 8. Umpire—Wilson. Time—1h. 40m.

NEEDHAM HEIGHTS TAKES THE LEAD

With 79 runs for five wickets down the Mohairs apparently had the game well in hand, but the last five wickets fell for only 12 runs, Sparks taking four wickets in 15 balls. Needham Heights now leads the league.

Gov. Hughes' Detectives After Race Track Bettors

Sheepshead Bay Race Track, June 27.—Governor Hughes, acting in his own behalf in an effort to ascertain if betting was being carried on at the race track to-day sent twelve detectives to the Sheepshead track where they made many trips between the paddock and grand stand, making observations of all suspicious persons who were pointed out to them as bookmakers. The appearance of the twelve men in the enclosure was the scene of the wildest confusion among the bookmakers, who in defiance of the law, have been accepting bets on horses orally as well as on the credit system.

The word of the visit of the twelve detectives spread with great rapidity among the bookmakers and bettors and many of them closed up their books, declining to accept bets even from their friends.

Passing through the grandstand, where they made many close observations of the conditions existing there, the men, who were working in groups of three, visited the paddock, where they closely scrutinized every person of whom they had the least suspicion.

In several instances they were witnesses to oral betting and, on several occasions before their identity became known, even attempted to lay money on the horses themselves. It is not known, however, if their attempts were successful. Since the passing of the racing bill making the accepting of bets on horseraces a felony, Governor Hughes has been informed that betting has been continually carried on in open defiance.

The men were sent to the track at his own orders and they will report their observations to him in person within a few days. What action the Governor will take following their report is not known, but it is generally believed that he will send State detectives to the tracks to completely close up betting.

ONE AMERICAN CAR IN GRAND PRIX

Paris, June 27.—Only one American car has been entered for the Grand Prix at Dieppe to be held July 6 and 7. The car will carry red and white colors. Competitors of five other nations have entered three cars.

Americans in Paris are not taking extraordinary interest in the race, though a number of automobile parties are being made up. Herman Harjes will take a party of friends to Dieppe in two motor cars. Elliott Sheppard will also take a party in his car, including the Robinsons and other New Yorkers.

ATHLETIC PARK AT BAR HARBOR

Bangor, June 27.—An added impetus to athletic sports at Bar Harbor is given by John S. Kennedy of New York, George B. Dorr and Dr. Robert Armory of Boston, Clement B. Newbold of Philadelphia and Fred C. Lyman of Bar Harbor, who have loaned for track and field purposes a large area which they had intended to serve as the terminal grounds of an electric railroad between Bar Harbor and Ellsworth.

Finding that the road would cost about $2,000,000 at this time, its construction has been postponed, and the thirteen acres of land to have been used for terminal purposes will be converted into an athletic park, with quarter-mile track, 220-yard straightaway path, football field and baseball diamond.

BIG $5,000 RACE AT READVILLE OFF

Late yesterday afternoon President J. M. Johnson of the New England Breeders Association declared off the $5,000 free-for-all trot scheduled for Readville on July 4, the reason being that Jack Crabtree, acting in behalf of his sister Lotta, has withdrawn the noted mare Sonoma Girl, 2:05¼, from the race, and Alta McDonald had asked the privilege of substitution in the place of George G., 2:05¼, the gelding Major Delmar, 1:59¾, as George G. has been showing a little lame forward in his work.

It was thought best by Mr. Johnson that there be no race rather than to have the public fooled in seeing a cheap affair. With Sweet Marie (2:02) and Wilkesheart (2:06¼) the only ones to face the starter, little interest could have developed in the result.

Major Delmar is far from being right, even though McDonald had been permitted to substitute him, as yesterday in a workout, accompanied with a runner, it was all he could do to turn Readville in 2:11, the final quarter in 33s.

GAME WON IN NINTH.

ATHLETICS, 6; SENATORS, 0

Philadelphia, June 27.—The Athletics shut out Washington this afternoon in the first of the series by the score of 6 to 0. The feature of the game was the remarkable pitching of Jimmy Dygert, the Athletics' twirler, who allowed Cantillon's men only two hits. The first of these was made by Street in the second inning. The second was a scratch affair by Clymer in the ninth with two out. The surprise of the game was the blowing up of Long Tom Hughes, who heretofore has been most successful against the Athletics and whose wildness was mainly responsible for his own defeat. The score.

FALL RIVER MANAGER HAS TUSSLE WITH UMPIRE O'BRIEN

Lowell, June 27.—In a game marked by wordy exchanges from start to finish, Lowell defeated Fall River, 9 to 5, at Washington Park this afternoon. At times the air was blue with language, and [illegible] Umpire Joe O'Brien to protest [illegible] his [illegible]

[illegible] Umpire O'Brien went over to Manager O'Brien of the Fall River team and ordered him off the grounds. On Friday the pair had a run [illegible] and apparently the umpire had [illegible] Manager O'Brien refused to go, whereupon the umpire grabbed him and started to run him off. The manager resisted and the Fall River players came running to his assist.

Three officers ran out on the grounds and the scrappy [illegible] manager consented to surrender. A few minutes later when [illegible] the latter [illegible] was safe. [illegible] Captain Conner questioned the decision [illegible]

"[illegible]" asked Umpire O'Brien. [illegible]

Flinn was in the box for Brockton. Good fielding on the part of both teams was a feature of the game. Score:

CAPTAIN LEONARD OF HARVARD

NORTH END UNIONS WIN OUT IN ELEVENTH

After eleven innings of long drawn out, exceedingly rocky baseball, the North End Union A. C. succeeded in defeating the West End House A. A. at the American League Grounds yesterday afternoon by the score of 6 to 5. It took just three hours and fifteen minutes to play the game, which was filled with disputes by both teams from the first inning to the last.

Both pitchers twirled well, each getting twelve strikeouts, and with decent kind of support Terry might have won out, as he kept the North End Union's eight hits pretty well scattered. Burke won his own game by his fine triple in the eleventh inning, scoring on Wein's double.

Axe and Frazer put up the best game for the West End House, Rosenthal's single scoring Axe from second in the ninth with the run that tied up the game. Crissafi and Gardella played the best game for the North End Unions. Some of the decisions of Wendell, who umpired the game, were miserable. Score:

JOHNSON WINS OWN GAME WITH HOMER

Plymouth, June 27.—In a game abounding in long hits the Plymouth Cordage Company defeated the Cohasset nine here to-day by the score of 5 to 3. Both pitchers were hit hard, but Johnson was steadier and fanned thirteen men.

R. Ford's batting and fielding and "Dud" Dean's long hits were features. Fish caught a grand game for Plymouth, nailing every base stealer.

Johnson, besides pitching fine ball, knocked out a home run, driving in one run ahead of him, winning the game. Gannon's remarkable fielding was a distinct feature of the game, getting three assists from centre field. The score:

McCabe Gets a Single.

McCall smashed a single to left, scoring Hartford, and Harvey came up with another of the same kind to right, and he put Leonard and Garrigan across the plate. Aronson, the heavy hitter, then put a climax on the banging by knocking out a home run, the ball going into the left field bleachers, and McCall and Harvey crossed the pan in front of him. Yale decided to make a change of pitchers then, and Rose was replaced by Van Vleck. Briggs went out on a grounder to Fels, and Tad Jones got Simons unassisted. Williams threw out Currier, but the bunch of six runs looked like a mountain.

Yale started to get a few in the fourth, and gave Harvard a small scare. Tad Jones started off with a single, but died stealing second.

Hartford in the Air.

Dines got a gift of first and Murphy made the second out, but Williams was the recipient of a transfer. Hartford seemed to have an ascension and walked both Wylie and Malley forcing in Dines with a run. Clifford reached first on Simon's poor throw, Williams scoring, but Wylie was nailed at the plate when he tried to score, too.

Harvard got the two runs back in her half of the fourth. After Hartford filed out Lanigan walked. Tad Jones fumbled Leonard's grounder and McCall came up with a single, scoring Lanigan. On Harvey's little tap to Rose Leonard made a desperate try for the plate and got it. McCall and Aronson, the next two batters, went out at first.

Hicks went in against Yale in the fifth and the first man up, Fels, singled. Then two went down, but Dines got a safe rap scoring Fels.

In the sixth Yale got another tally when Williams cracked out his homer. He was the first up, the next went out at first and then Hicks fanned two. Harvard drew one in the eighth on a single by McCall followed by Harvey's double. Yale also counted one in the last inning on two singles and an error by Lanigan in left. The score.

MANHAT'S 7TH STRAIGHT.

The Manhattans won their seventh straight game by defeating the crack Washington A. C. (colored) semi-professional team in a closely fought contest. Foster's triple and double with two men on bases each time, a catch by Carey for the Manhattans, Ray's fielding and Brown's hitting for the Washingtons were the features of the game. Score:

NOTES OF THE GAME.

It was a well deserved victory for the new comer McCarthy, who was making his bow to a Hub crowd.

He will get a name as a hitter, too, if he can maintain such stickwork.

That fast playing of Bill Dahlen cut a big figure in the result. Bill had fourteen chances with only one slip up and that was a hard one.

No two players work better together in the league than Dahlen and Ritchey and the team should lead in reeling off double plays.

Smith showed his pluck when he put the ball on Eddie Grant as he was diving into the plate. He nearly broke Smith's hip, but Harry hung to the ball.

Rigler should have cut out that talk from the Phillies' bench. They got away with a lot of chin music.

Titus got his team after him in the eight when he failed to reach second while McQuillan was being run down between home and third.

McQuillan acted afraid of McGann in the sixth with second and third occupied and walked him, filling the bases. It proved a bad move, as McQuillan could not get them over for Kelley and forced in a run.

Some of the bookies had the Phillies a 1 to 2 shot and did not get bit very hard.

COAKLEY BEAT CUBS.

Chicago, June 27.—Coakley was too much for the World's Champions and the Cincinnati Reds beat the Cubs by the score of 4 to 1. Coakley held the Cubs to four hits, two of them came in the first inning, one a double, and gave Chicago its only run. Lundgren held the Red's runners until the fifth, when Huiswitt, Lobert and Mitchell doubled, and with the aid of a single the Reds scored three runs. Lobert hit a home run in the eighth, which was very much of a fluke. The ball alighted just over the infield, but got away from Slagle and Sheckard and what should have been a single or an out, was converted into a homer. The score:

CRESCENT NINE WINS 5TH STRAIGHT GAME

The Crescents defeated Malden-Quincy 3 to 2, at Crescent Field yesterday, making the fifth straight win for the Revere beach nine. The visitors out-batted the home team, but Nelson had perfect control, and received fast support at critical points. Cronin, Noonan and Reardon played fast ball for Malden Quincy and Kimball, Cyr and J. Cox excelled for the Crescents. The score:

FIFTEEN DOLLARS

For the choice of 96 sack suits and coats and trousers, custom made for $40, $45 and $50, and which were formerly marked $18, $20, $25. There are 2 good [illegible] reasons for these special reductions: 1st, we desire to largely reduce stock before July 4th, 2nd, every progressive house spends a certain amount for advertising. Instead of paying out large sums for printer's ink, we are giving values that will set people talking. This is the best sort of advertising. These coats and trousers and suits are in serges, homespuns, worsted velours, etc., in blacks, blues, browns, the new tan and olive, gray green, bronze gray and other desirable shades. All the above offers mean values twice as great as any ready made house can give.

TO SNAPPY DRESSERS—To those high class dressers who pay the tailor $50 to $100 for their garments we offer at $18, $20, $25 and $30, some 500 suits and coats and trousers, which were custom made by those tailors of 5th avenue, New York, who are recognized as CREATORS OF FASHION for $50, $60, $75 up to $100. Our success is based on WHAT WON'T FIT ONE MAN WILL FIT ANOTHER, and in the many garments here we are sure to have your exact size. If alterations are necessary to improve the fit, we make them free of charge.

We mention three garments out of an assortment of over 2,000.

$15 FOR the choice of 2 blue serge suits, one single breasted [illegible] conservative sack, the other 2 button double breasted sack, both tailored to perfection [illegible] and recent arrivals from Lawrence, 701 Broadway, N. Y. Custom made for $45 each.

New York, June 27.—Confident in their hopes that they can add new laurels to the name of the United States in the athletic world, serenely sure that they can crush all opposition, no matter from what country it comes, and cheerfully expectant, the eighty members of the American team to contend in the Olympic games in London next month sailed this morning on the steamship Philadelphia for London. Among the big, brawny men who lightly tripped up the gangplank of the Philadelphia this morning were many world's champions in various branches of sport, and the crowd which gathered to say goodby and to cheer the athletes upon their way turned loose a din which drowned even the whistle of the giant liner.

Last Word at the N. Y. A. C.

There was a gathering of the team in the gymnasium of the New York Athletic Club last night for roll call and such last word preliminaries as had been forgotten in the bustle of preparations for departure. Every member answered to his name save three who had been duly excused by the committee. The men last night retired early and without exercise, planning to rise early this morning and board the boat in the cool of the early morning.

Matt Halpin was one of the busiest men about the dock this morning. Halpin is manager of the team, and for a time there have been dire rumblings of troubles. It was said, unofficially of course, that some of the members of the team were displeased with Halpin and were quite discouraged. However, if any such feeling had existed it was dead this morning. There was not the slightest indication of a reaction of any kind. As Halpin boarded the ship in the midst of a group of the team he declared to the reporters that he had no fears over the outcome of the London games.

Athletes as Stokers.

When Halpin was asked for the names of the members of the team who are crossing as stokers because they could not get there any other way, Halpin remained silent. However, he said:

"Those men are overweight and the work will not hurt them. On the contrary, it will take off some of the fat and fit them better than they would otherwise be for the tests."

As the men swarmed aboard the brass bands which had come down to the dock struck up some stirring music in which many voices joined. "America" and "Dixie" and "See the Conquering Hero Comes" caught the crowd just right.

Giant Horr Is Sad.

One of the saddest figures last night in the New York Athletic Club gymnasium was M. Horr, the giant weight thrower of Syracuse University. Horr had his heart set on the trip, but the committee, the university and the Irish American Athletic Club refused to send Horr for technical reasons. However, Horr declared that he would find a way yet to contest.

5,000 SEE GAMES AT LOCUST ST. GROUNDS

At the Locust street grounds yesterday the Columbus Day Nursery held its second annual field day before a crowd of 5,000 interested spectators.

Many of the events were closely contested, and kept the crowd on its toes most of the time, so fiercely did the boys fight for supremacy.

Frank Sheehan and Jimmy Lee were the big stars of the day, and both were in the pink of condition and won their contests in easy fashion although having big handicaps to overcome, especially so in regard to little ginger-top, who was in rare form and set the gathering wild with his splendid running.

In the Marathon race for boys, there were twelve at the starting point at Marine Park, and James Leonard, fifteen years old, was the victor, covering the distance of two and one half miles in eighteen minutes. Joseph Boris, Joseph P. Hurley, Rexford O. James, Fred Brothers and William Oliver finished in the order named. Summary:

The team race between the first and second teams of the South Boston A. A. was won by the first team, composed of Ray, McVicar and Ford in 1m. 15 seconds.

This offer has been taken under consideration.

EASTERN Y. C. HAS IDEAL RACING DAY

Marblehead, June 27.—The Eastern Yacht Club sailed their special open race for Classes M, N, P, Class Q and Sonder klasse for special prizes, here to-day. The weather was ideal for light weather boats, [illegible] southwest wind was blowing [illegible] through the race.

By the course the boats were given a beat to mark 2, a reach to mark 3 and a reach home.

The Dorello had an easy time in her class, beating the nearest boat by about 13 minutes. In Class N P were John Greenough's new Onda II and Tabasco III. The Onda II was an easy winner over the Tabasco II, by nine minutes.

In Class Q the Eleanor, Archelles and Essex had it out and the Eleanor won out, beating the Archeles by two minutes, and the Essex five minutes.

In the Sonder Klasse there were six starters, the Vim, Corinthian, Spokane II, and Bandit, Manchester and Elien. In this class it was a close race between the Elien and Manchester the former winning by twenty-six seconds over the Manchester, with the Bandit, Spokane II, Vim and Corinthian in order. NEW BAY STATE Y. C. OPENS ITS SEASON

The New Bay State Yacht Club at Beachmont was opened yesterday afternoon and had its first race in a series of three, the other two to be held to-day, in the dory class, to pick the boats that are to represent this country in the International championship dory races to be held at Marblehead later in the season. The race was close and exciting throughout, but nine minutes separating the first and last boats and was won by the Barbara, which led the Teaser across the line by thirteen seconds. The Elizabeth F., the boat which now holds the championship, was in the race, but made a poor showing.

The championship was won by the Elizabeth F. at New Brunswick, last year, when owned by Charles Ruhs, one of the youngest skippers in the country, but who since that time has sold the boat, which is now sailed under the Bay State Yacht Club's colors, by Brown and Dudley. The club also had a motor boat race, yesterday, which was won by the Edith M., owned by L. Laribee, which beat out the Petrel III, owned by T. J. Harrison, by 5 seconds. Summary:

BARBARA PROVES BEST OF DORIES

The Bay State Yacht Club of Revere, held their opening-day race yesterday for Class X dories, to decide which four boats would compete in the Inter-State races at City Point next month.

The wind, a brisk Easterly, sent the fast-sailing dories over the course of eight miles in fast time, in spite of a choppy sea. The Barbara got the start and kept her head to the finishing line, the Teaser finishing eight seconds behind.

Two more races will be sailed to-day and those finishing among the first four on the percentage will be selected to defend the title. Summary:

GLAZE SCORES VICTORY IN HIS FIRST GAME FOR GRAYS

EASTERN LEAGUE RESULTS.

At Providence—Providence, 3, Montreal, 2.

Providence, June 27.—Eight and a half innings of sizzling baseball developed a winner in the Grays to-day, the score at the end reading: Providence, 3; Montreal, 2.

Ralph Glaze, the ex-Red Sox twirler, made his debut in a local uniform and twirled splendid ball. He had the Royals breaking their backs in wild efforts to hit his slants. Steam poured from the seams and the balls looked like peas as they came curling up to the plate.

Casey's men escaped a shut out on account of the loose fielding of the Grays early in the game. Montreal got to him for six well scattered hits.

Bumpus Jones essayed to stop the winning streak of the locals, but a streak of weird fielding on the part of himself in the third led to his undoing. The Grays shoved two runs over in that session and Abstein's triple in the eighth pushed across the deciding tally.

A one-handed catch by O'Neill was the feature. It was planned to play a double-header and a start was made, but the [illegible] was called in the first of [illegible] [illegible] allow Montreal to catch a train, [illegible] standing 2 to 1 at the time in the Royal's favor. LYONS' HOMER WON GAME.

The original Madison A. C. of Charlestown defeated the strong Holyokes of Cambridge at the Sullivan Square playground by the score of 12 to 10. The Holyokes started a batting rally in the third and fifth innings which netted them nine runs, but the Madisons settled down and played fast ball. With the score a tie and a man on first Lyons sent the ball over the left fielder's head for a home run, thus putting the game on ice.

STONEHAM HIGH LOST.

Stoneham, June 27.—Stoneham High, winners of the Middlesex League pennant, were victims of the locals this afternoon on the Pomeworth street grounds by a score of 13 to 6. The batteries were: Stoneham Town team, McHale and Sullivan; Stoneham High, Bachellor and McLaughlin.

WATERTOWNS DEFEATED

Winchester, June 27.—The Winchester team put it onto the Watertowns on Manchester field this afternoon by a score of 8 to 3. Badger excelled for the winners.

CRICKET AT LOWELL.

Brockton Boy Hopes to Beat Quaker [illegible] at Ar-[illegible]

Whether Tommy Quill of Brockton will ever reach the championship in his class will be definitely settled Tuesday evening when he faces Young Erne of Philadelphia at the [illegible] A. A. of B[illegible].

At the last meeting between this pair, which the referee declared [illegible] Quill [illegible] rounds [illegible]

Quill is one of the best boxers that New England [illegible] all the earmarks of a coming champion, as he is a good hitter, is aggressive, and powerful as an untamed bull. He is also blessed with the belief that he is superior to any one at his weight, and is absolutely fearless in the ring.

Quill's comparatively poor showing against Young Erne at their last meeting may have [illegible] fact that Tommy's [illegible] in the fourth [illegible] Erne [illegible] suffered defeat in consequence.

Erne is so clever that it is hard for an aggressive lad like Quill to corner him. He is so agile on his feet that he dances around like a will-of-the-wisp, but he is always ready to mix it up after he has [illegible] his opponent [illegible].

This event being the last week's show to be held at the Armory Club during the warm weather, the [illegible] have arranged an exceptionally attractive preliminary card.

JOHN O'CONNELL PUTS NEW RECORD FOR MYSTIC PARK

By ED. COGSWELL.

Before the usually big crowd the chestnut trotting gelding John O'Connell, driven by H. B. Ralston, yesterday afternoon lowered the record of the Mystic Park Speedway for both trotters and pacers in the weekly matinee of the Fellsway Driving Club to 30¼ seconds, and in accomplishing the feat defeated the prominent [illegible] Axtelloid.

While the event required four heats, yet this would [illegible] been necessary had not the win[illegible] broken badly in the third heat, which Axtelloid was in this way able to capture handily in slow time. From the [illegible] the word was given by Rance Wentworth in the [illegible] heat it was seen that John O'Connell was clearly master of the situation in the matter of speed.

Bonnie Belle in Close Drive.

The most closely contested race of the card was between Bonnie Belle and Major P. The former secured the blue ribbon in straight heats, but in the final trip the finish was head and head, in fact those sitting in the bleachers opposite the wire thought that Major P. just nipped first position, but the judges saw it differently by a nose.

The second heat of the Journeyman-Major [illegible] race proved a corker. The latter had been [illegible] badly, but in this trip she [illegible] a pace all the way, and Fred Rideout had all [illegible] could do to land Journeyman by a short head. In the following heat the little [illegible] was again [illegible] and there was nothing to it.

It is likely that Ame would have got the second heat over Baron S. in the first race of the day, but a running break during the heat was sufficient to penalize her had she been slightly in the [illegible]. Just after the word in the initial [illegible] one of the reins parted on May Barnes, and what looked to be a serious accident was happily averted by the spectators near the starter's stand catching the trotter by the head.

George H. Would and Wouldn't.

An interesting and peculiar thing occurred in the race between Royce W. and George H. Both were entered as pacers. In the first [illegible] heats, C. Tsang who was up [illegible] had [illegible] in heading [illegible] H. [illegible] of the rail [illegible] Perkins [illegible] the honors [illegible] George H. was persuaded to lower the [illegible] of the gelding.

When the word was given in the third heat it was noticed George H. was on a trot, and trot he did [illegible] a major to the very end of the [illegible] winning by two lengths. This operation he repeated in the fourth heat, and the time was [illegible] seconds faster than he ever paced in a race since the beginning of the matinees.

Perkins looked so happy returning from the wire that a small boy with a bump of humor called out to him: "Dan, you are laughing so we cannot see your face!" The [illegible] set the crowd roaring.

However, the gelding evidently forgot that he had ever trotted when it came to the fifth and deciding heat, as try he might Perkins could not keep him from pacing, so it was Thyng after all that had the last laugh through winning the race with Royce W.

Joe B. took four trips to nail his race, [illegible] the third to Winnie Wilkes. Rose Martin simply had to jog three times the length of the course to wear home the blue ribbon over Robinhood. Sidney Metzinger, too, won without an effort.

An exhibition not on the programme was given by Charley Thyng stepping the pacer Young Clon, 2.13¼, in 30½ secs. He reeled it off like a [illegible] being prepared for a journey down the "big line," in place of being the veteran he is.

It is hoped that by next Saturday the speedway will have been oiled so that the dust will not sweep in clouds over the spectators when the horses pass. A committee has been appointed by the driving club to attend to the affair. Summary:

SIX-HEAT RACE AT FRANKLIN FIELD

Before the largest crowd ever assembled on the Dorchester Speedway, Franklin Field, yesterday afternoon ten exciting trotting and pacing races were [illegible] under the auspices of the Dorchester Driving Club.

The feature race of the afternoon was in Class B, trotting. This race was between Baron Patch and La Gazelle. La Gazelle won the first two heats, F. O. Guild putting his mare over the wire by a nose in each. W. J. [illegible], owner of Baron Patch, drove [illegible] and captured the next two. In the fifth heat both finished together and the judges were forced to call it a dead heat. When the word was given for the sixth and final heat the crowd was on its toes, cheering [illegible]. The horses [illegible] down the track and [illegible] as they neared the wire Baron Patch forged ahead and won the [illegible] was given [illegible] for [illegible] driving.

OLD COLONY WINS INTERCITY MEET

Brockton, June 27.—The first intercity matinee races held in this city took place this afternoon at the Brockton Fair Grounds, when some of the speediest horses of the local Driving Club and the Old Colony Driving Club were pitted against each other. Some exciting brushes were [illegible] and comparatively good time was made.

Twelve races were on the card and were witnessed by a big crowd of lovers of horseflesh from this and other cities. Old Colony carried off the honors of the afternoon, having scored 40 points to the local club's 37. H. C. Thayer's fast Astro L. was a conspicuous figure on the track and reeled off some good time against Ford's Willie John, but had to be contented with second place. The summary:

EMPIRE FIRST IN FIVE HARD HEATS

Fall River, June 27.—Four exciting races furnished good sport for the members of the Fall River Driving Club at Riverside Trotting Park this afternoon. In Class C it took five heats to decide the winner. Joseph Buffington's Empire won this race and it was an interesting contest between this horse and B. F. Skiff's Gus.

Quin L. was disqualified in the second heat for failing to score down at the order of the starter. The two starters in Class B made an interesting race of it, even though George F. Comstock's Dutchman won in straight heats over C. H. Sears's Star Artist. The summary:

FAIR PLAY CAPTURES THE CONEY ISLAND

New York, June 27.—Fair Play won the Coney Island Jockey Club stakes at Sheepshead Bay this afternoon, running a mile and a half in time that equalled the track record. The race was one of the grandest contests seen on the track this season, and the victory of Fair Play was all the more meritorious because he was conceding ten pounds to the second and third horse.

Angelus went [illegible] in front and cut out a terrific pace [illegible] when Dorante, the favorite, [illegible] The others ran [illegible] bunched [illegible] the far turn [illegible] and went after Angelus, [illegible] in the middle of the turn. Dorante then took the lead and Fair Play and [illegible] began to close. These three turned [illegible] and head into the stretch. In the [illegible] followed Dorante fell back beaten. Fair Play [illegible] hung on and Fair Play was [illegible] beat at the end to win by a length [illegible] Hessian, who beat King James a [illegible] a half. Results:

FIRST RACE [illegible] Highweight Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward, $600 added, six and one-half furlongs, main course. Westbury, [illegible] and 6 to 1, won; Rosebend, 142 (Notter), 6 to 5 and 1 to 2, second; Demund, 119 (W. Miller), 6 to 1 and 2 to 1, third. Time, 1.19. HECLA A. C. HAS MADE FINE RECORD

West End Team Scored Nine Victories Out of Eleven Games This Season.

One of the best known and fastest nineteen-year-old amateur teams around the Hub is the Hecla A. C. of the West End, which boasts of a record of nine wins out of eleven games played so far this season. The team has met and defeated some of the strongest teams around Boston, [illegible] the West End House A. A., [illegible] dons of Somerville and the Andrews of South Boston. Considering the fact that all of these boys' games have been with [illegible] considerably older than themselves [illegible] that all but two of the games were played on foreign diamonds, they have [illegible] quite a remarkable showing.

The [illegible] is managed by Mr. [illegible], [illegible] broad smile shows his pleasure at [illegible] rate his team is travelling at the present time, and that is going some, despite the difficult schedule he has laid out for them. McMahon captains the team and is on the receiving end of the battery, where his steady work, throwing the bases [illegible] coaching has done a great deal toward [illegible] the games.

In Courtney the team has one of the best pitchers [illegible] around here in years, with [illegible] of speed and a good assortment [illegible] he keeps the batter guessing [illegible] and so far this season has two shut-out games and one two-hit game in his list of victories. Bill Kenney of this year's English High school team is holding down the first station and is putting up a [illegible] good exhibition of initial sack work. Chase covers second and although diminutive, plays his position well and is an excellent base runner. Cronin at short covers an acre of ground, and time and again has electrified the crowd with some of his spectacular plays. McDonald, the popular player who has received so many votes in the Boston American Amateur Baseball contest, is playing the game of his life at third and the ease and grace with which he handles bunts and hard hit balls has earned for him much of his popularity.

In the left garden McDermott is handling hard drives like a professional and his long swings have scored many runs. The centre pasture is ably filled by Lamphier, who takes everything that comes his way in grand style and Grant, who plays in right field, has yet to make his first error. Not a man on the team is batting under .250 and, when [illegible] the bases, take advantage of any little miscue that will give them an extra base.

To show their appreciation of the fine showing the team has made, a number of their friends and admirers subscribed and gave them a beautiful Summer cottage at Stoughton, where their annual banquet will be held this year.

SCOTCH PICNIC, AUG. 8.

The Boston Caledonian club holds its annual picnic on Saturday, Aug. 8, and as usual will have some of the biggest attractions in the world. The yearly Scotch festival is the big event in the athletic world and awaited with great interest.

GLIDDEN TOUR LOOKS PROMISING GOOD ROADS MEETING AT BUFFALO

ANNUAL A. A. A. TOUR WILL BE A RECORD BREAKER

Auto Makers Taking Greater Interest Than Ever in the Long Contest.

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Little can be properly [illegible] of the probable number of entries in the sixth annual A. A. A. tour, owing to the fact that many owners and manufacturers make up their minds to compete at the very last moment. Chairman Hower places the actual entry list at forty to fifty cars, while newspaper men and publicity experts confidently put it at least seventy-five.

The number of non-contesting cars will be unusually large this year and it is safe to say that hundreds of automobile parties will make Buffalo their headquarters on July 9, for the convention which precedes the start of the tour will attract many. The makers are also taking a greater interest this year in the tour than was the case last year, as the sixth annual is an event in which competition is brought down to the finest point, every car carrying observers who must be men who have been connected with the trade for at least six months, and directly connected with the makers who nominate them.

The real truth will now be ascertained in regard to the showing made by each car and in regard to the effect of tire troubles. There will be no skylarking about the test, and as all makers sought just such a contest their entries will be received in greater numbers than ever. The early entry list has no bearing on the final results, for entries invariably come in late for just such an event. There are already in hand eighteen entries and inquiries which point certainly to forty more, while many will enter finally who have not been reckoned upon at all up to the present time.

Schedule Makers Here.

The schedule makers in a Pierce Great Arrow car of sixty-horsepower arrived in Boston last Tuesday night, having made the trip from Albany in a day, covering 197 miles in the rain. In five days seven days of the route of the A. A. A. tour was covered, a distance of nearly 1,080 miles. In three days the capitols of Pennsylvania, Harrisburg; of New York, Albany, and of Massachusetts, Boston, were made, a total distance of 614 miles, and over every sort of road. Daylight to daylight running was done and morning starts were [illegible]. [illegible] was not the slightest trouble with the car [illegible] the schedule makers to cover their immense mileage. They [illegible] schedule makers for the reason that their time made from point to point will be taken into consideration by the touring board of the American Automobile Association in arranging a schedule for the tour itself. The car is being driven straight through the route and then to Buffalo to start upon the tour itself with Teddy Dey at the wheel.

The present journey started a week ago last Thursday, and the first day netted 227 miles to Pittsburg, two days' run in the tour itself. On the second day the tour was made to Bedford Springs over as vile a piece of road as was ever laid out for a [illegible] and a road that will tax both the cars and the drivers to make. The third day's run of the Pathfinder after a hard a day was over the Alleghany Mountains to Harrisburg, 127 miles. Then started the hard work for the next day brought the tourists to Delaware Water Gap, 227 miles, and then a run was made to Albany, 192 miles, and to Boston the following day, 170 miles, by the route followed, a total of over 585 miles in three days through three great States. It is planned to continue the strenuous trip to the completion at Buffalo next Monday night, a total of 2,000 miles for the journey and made in ten days.

Throughout the trip the tourists have made a perfect run to date, having never touched the motor and having had but two punctures. The great engine has never skipped once, and the grand average of 22 miles from Albany to Boston in the rain is evidence that the car has run steadily.

Glidden in Tour.

Charles J. Glidden, donor of the trophy will be a Glidden tourist this Summer as usual and will start with the caravan of cars from Buffalo. Mr. Glidden will be the guest of F. B. Hower, chairman of the A. A. A. touring board and manager of the contest, and will ride in his car, starting every morning half an hour before the first contestant and setting an even pace. No contesting car will be allowed to pass the chairman's car. This is a rule to prevent racing.

It is hoped and expected by the officials of the tour that less trouble than ever will be experienced through the tourists being held up by the speed traps. Many places will practically abolish the speed limit for the occasion and make a gala day of it. The State of New Jersey, which is being severely avoided because of its harsh laws, it is hoped by the motorists will serve as an admonition to those who do not sympathize with such contests and do not, like the majority, enter into the sporting spirit of them and assume a lenient attitude for the time being.

The official list of entries is as follows: For Glidden trophy: No. 1, Charles Clifton, Great Arrow; No. 2, Charles Clifton, Great Arrow; No. 3, J. W. Maguire, Great Arrow; No. 4, R. M. Owen, Reo; No. 5, E. H. Parkhurst, Peerless; No. 6, E. H. Parkhurst, Peerless; No. 7, F. H. Pickin[illegible], Peerless; No. 8, R. M. Owen, Premier; No. 9, R. M. Owen, Premier; No. 11, Gus G. Buse, Thomas; No. 12, H. H. Franklin, Franklin; No. 13, John Wilkinson, Franklin; No. 14, G. H. Stillwell, Franklin.

Autos at Revere Beach.

The Metropolitan Park Commission has amended to take effect on July 1, the rule governing the use by automobiles of the driveway of Revere Beach Reservation between Revere street and Revere Beach parkway, so that automobiles are allowed on this section at all times except during the hours from 2 to 11 o'clock p. m. on the following days, namely: June 17 and Saturdays, Sundays and legal holidays occurring between June 16 and September 14 inclusive. Heretofore automobiles have been excluded from this section during the hours from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. on all days during the period named. The principal effect of the new rule, therefore, is to open the reservation to the use of automobiles at all times except during certain hours of a comparatively small proportion of the Summer days.

The exclusion of automobiles from this section of Revere Beach at certain times at least, seems a matter of necessity. Revere Beach was taken in 1895 for a public reservation under the park act, which contemplated the construction of driveways as incidental features only, the main purpose of the act being to provide areas upon which the great body of the people who could not afford private conveyances might stroll about and find recreation. At that time, however, it seemed possible to provide for pleasure travel in vehicles consistently with the main purpose for which the reservation was designed, and consequently the present driveway from Revere Beach to Revere Beach Parkway was constructed.

This additional feature was purely complementary to the riding and driving public and was not a matter of public necessity, since this section of the driveway is paralleled at a distance of about a hundred feet by Ocean avenue, a town highway. At that time, also, the enormous crowds which frequent Revere Beach and the present extensive use of automobiles were not anticipated. Since then, however, conditions have greatly changed.

Danger at Certain Hours.

At certain hours of all pleasant days during the Summer season many people are about and continually crossing the driveway, and the presence of an unusual proportion of children among them multiplies the element of danger. On certain warm days, particularly Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, the crowds of men, women and children are so large as to render the operation of automobiles upon the driveway extremely hazardous, even at the lowest rate of speed possible. This is particularly true at times when the tide is high and the public are thus driven from the beach proper and concentrated upon and alongside the driveway.

In view of the peculiar conditions attending the public use of this reservation, the commissioners believe they would be justified, as heretofore, in excluding automobiles from this driveway during certain hours throughout the Summer season. The commissioners are aware, however, that Ocean avenue is only a fifty foot street, including sidewalks, and is partly occupied by car tracks, that it is the landing place of many thousands of people who come by the electric cars to visit the reservation or Wonderland and other neighboring places of amusement, and that the consequent congestion upon the street is very bad and constantly growing worse.

This is a condition for which the commission is in no way responsible and which would be remedied by widening and improving Ocean avenue. Nevertheless, pending such widening and improvement, the commission are desirous of exhausting every expedient to facilitate travel through this territory, and to relieve the congestion on Ocean avenue as much as possible. With this in view they have determined to try the experiment of allowing automobiles on the driveway of the reservation at all times except during the hours and days mentioned. In doing this the commission hope that the paramount rights of the public traveling on foot upon the reservation will be recognized by automobilists, and that it will be found possible to continue the new rule without injury to those rights. In order to insure this result, however, it will be necessary for automobilists to operate at a very slow rate of speed along this section and to observe strictly any warnings or directions given them by police officers on the route.

FROM CHICAGO TO CAPE ANN BY AUTO

A big Packard car brought a party of tourists to the city yesterday. The travelers are President C. R. Erwin of Lord & Thomas Advertising Agency of Chicago, and members of his family and friends. They are on their way to Mr. Erwin's Summer home at Cape Ann, and will make the entire trip in the automobile, thus combining the delights of the road and the opportunity for the widest view of the picturesque scenery through which they will pass.

Mr. Erwin said that the trip had begun most satisfactorily. He could not even report tire trouble—pointing to the one extra tire still secure in its casing as evidence of his good fortune in this respect. The car is equipped with the Goodyear Detachable tire on the Goodyear Universal rim.

No extraordinary effort at speeding had been made, but the Warner Autometer showed that the party was [illegible] ahead of its schedule by which a week is allowed for the trip.

Mr. Erwin is at the head of the largest advertising agency in America, and consequently one of the most [illegible] barometers of the country's business. "All effects of the panic have disappeared—have been forgotten in fact," he said. "Prosperity's line of march has been taken up, and we expect a heavier Fall season than ever. We are already in the midst of preliminary work, having begun some of the greatest advertising campaigns ever put out, for firms who are confidently staking hundreds of thousands of dollars on the prospects of the big buying demand. As we see it, this means good times for everybody."

CHARLES HILDEBRAND ILL.

Sales Manager Charles C. Hildebrand of the Stevens-Duryea Company was taken suddenly ill while on a visit to New York City last Tuesday. He was fortunately accompanied by J. W. Bowman of Boston, who took every means in his power to relieve and care for Mr. Hildebrand. Mr. Hildebrand's condition is not serious, it being brought on by the excessive heat of Tuesday last and the fact that he has been working decidedly hard for the last few months. He is expected to be up and about again in a few days.

GETS NO. 13 IN THE GLIDDEN

Some of the superstitious are always on the lookout for that poor unfortunate who draws number thirteen in an event like the fifth annual reliability touring contest. This time it has fallen to John Wilkinson, chief engineer of the H. H. Franklin Manufacturing Company. Number thirteen will therefore be carried by his six-cylinder Franklin.

In talking of this so-called hoodoo number Mr. Wilkinson cited several instances where thirteen had proven to be a sure sign of luck. A very illustrative case was that of the Franklin Company, with whom this number has frequently figured ever since the beginning of their business career, the first year's output amounting to only thirteen cars, from which there has been a steady growth in the business of this company, they now ranking among the leading automobile manufacturers of the country. And if the same good luck follows this car in the Glidden Tour as has attended itself to the Franklin Company, Mr. Wilkinson believes a perfect accounting will be made by his car.

BIG AUTOS MATCHED.

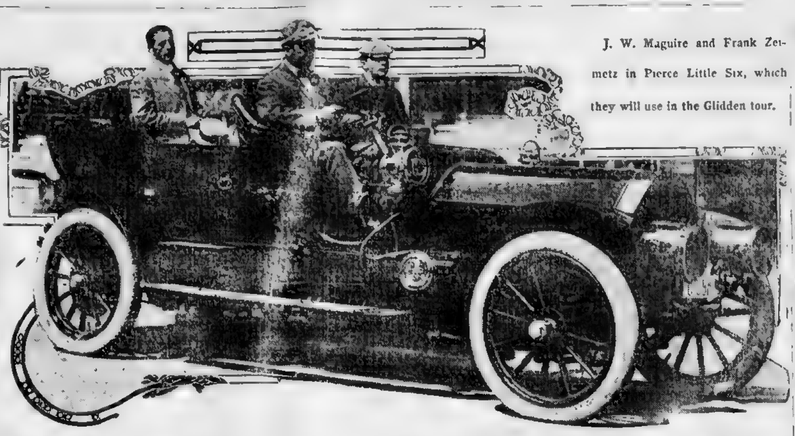
WINTON YACHT WON.

In the Lakewood Yacht Club races at Cleveland last Saturday Alexander Winton's Lala was an easy winner in its class of motor boats. The Winton racing boat, equipped with twelve cylinders, was scheduled to race, but had no contenders and therefore did not start.



J. W. Maguire and Frank Zeimetz in Pierce Little Six, which they will use in the Glidden tour.

PLAN NOW FOR NEXT YEAR'S SHOW

Parisian and American artists are now engaged in designing posters and scenic effects for the ninth International automobile show under the management of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association, which will be held at Grand Central Palace, New York, December 31 to January 7. H. O. Smith, chairman of the A. M. C. M. A. show committee, and General Manager Alfred Reeves, intend to give the motoring public a complete surprise so far as decorations are concerned.

"It's a safe bet that the Palace will take on a far more beautiful appearance than ever before," says H. O. Smith. "Decorating schemes have already been submitted and others are in process of perfection that will turn the Palace into a veritable fairyland. It is our intention to have the Palace show eclipse anything of its nature ever held before. Everything that money and artistic effects can do will be embodied in the next show. We are giving all artists, designers and decorators a free rein, and I expect that this competition will give us the best there is in them."

WORK ON PARKWAY.

Because work was progressing on the Long Island Motor Parkway while nothing was being said, it seems likely that there may be more of the roadway completed for the Vanderbilt Cup race than the public has been led to expect.

Chicago Auto Club Won't Accept A. C. A.'s Invitation

Secretary Gorham of the Chicago Automobile Club authorizes the statement that at a recent meeting of the board of directors of that club the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, that the Chicago Automobile Club respectfully decline the invitation of the Automobile Club of America to withdraw from the Illinois State Automobile Association and thereby from the American Automobile Association and to join with the Automobile Club of America in an effort to control American motor racing."

In connection with the above action, it may be stated that W. F. Searill[?], one of the directors of the Automobile Club of America, went to Chicago recently as the representative of the last mentioned club, and laid before the directors of the Chicago Automobile Club a plan whereby such club could associate itself with the Automobile Club of America in an effort to regain the control of racing, once held by that club, but in 1902 voluntarily surrendered by it to the national governing body, the American Automobile Association. After full consideration, the Chicago Automobile Club, which has a handsome club house in the business center of the western metropolis, and whose membership is large and representative, rejected the New York club's proposition unanimously as above announced. It is understood that this action was based upon the following consideration:

What Club Declined.

"That control of motor racing cannot in the United States be vested in any one or even in several clubs, but only in an organization which is national in its character and thus able to command the confidence and support of American manufacturers; that the invitation of the Automobile Club of America ignored the civic pride of the members of the Chicago Club, in that it involved an admission on the part of the Chicago Club that the Automobile Club of America was so far the premier club in the United States as to be the only club through which the Chicago Club could communicate with foreign bodies, and that there was already a national body existent in the United States which had had control of racing for several years, had associations and clubs in a majority of the States, enjoyed the support of the associations of manufacturers and was truly national in its character."

The action of the Chicago Club and the unanimity of its directors thus becomes important and, it is thought, makes unlikely any further efforts of a similar nature.

Support the A. A. A.

In this connection it should also be stated that advices received from the directors of the American Automobile Association in practically all of the large cities of the country, including Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Pittsburg, Buffalo, and Kansas City, indicate that their clubs are loyally supporting the American Automobile Association and are opposed to any movement like that suggested to the Chicago Automobile Club.

Still further, the statement is authorized that reports given out in New York some weeks ago to the effect that there was an alliance between the Automobile Club of America and the Chicago Automobile Club were not founded on fact, the two clubs having merely agreed to extend reciprocal club privileges to the members of each, an entirely proper relation even though one club is not a member of the national body.

Whitten-Gilmore Co. Found That Advertising Paid

The true value of advertising is being really appreciated by the Whitten-Gilmore Company, which last week carried a large advertisement on the Chalmers-Detroit in the BOSTON AMERICAN. The announcement of the marketing of the Chalmers-Detroit and the fact that the Whitten-Gilmore Company is to handle the agency must have attracted considerable attention, as during the past week something like 300 applications for catalogues of this car were received by the company and six bona fide orders for cars were received, together with deposits. In speaking of this great advertising achievement Mr. Gilmore said yesterday:

"I have always felt that there was some real honest value in advertising, but never before have I witnessed such an exhibition as that which followed our announcements regarding the Chalmers-Detroit. Our mail has multiplied immensely and we have been forced to take on additional stenographers just to answer the queries brought forth by the announcement of a week ago. Advertising certainly pays, and especially when one advertises a staple and valuable proposition like the Chalmers-Detroit, which is the best thing that money can buy, and which car is certainly destined to play an important part in the motor industry of America. We feel that the money we have spent in advertising has been well spent, and particularly so this last advertisement, which has brought forth so many replies and proven conclusively that the market is in a strong, healthy condition."

WHITE STEAMERS AT OYSTER BAY

On the return of President Roosevelt to his Summer home on Saturday, the two Government White Steamers resumed service at Oyster Bay, the "Summer capital" of the nation. The two cars are now operated on the same schedule as last year, making the first trip to Sagamore Hill at seven in the morning and the last trip after midnight. There is but little [illegible] during the day when the cars [illegible] engaged on some official mission.

Last season the two cars went through the four months' season with a record of never having missed a trip and never having been late. Even aside from the strong prejudice in the very highest official circles against all automobiles except White Steamers, the record made last year by these cars ensured their being chosen for the work again this year, and the offers made by numerous other manufacturers received but scant consideration.

SAVANNAH PLANS FOR GREAT RACE

Savannah, June 27.—Although the Grand Prize automobile race to be run at Savannah on Thanksgiving Day is in the hands of the Automobile Club of America of New York as far as entries, details, rules, officials and the actual management is concerned, the Savannah people have entire charge of preparing the course, arranging for accommodations for visitors, ad[illegible] for the race, building the grandstand and [illegible] spaces and all the [illegible] of the contest.

Last week they named a steering committee as follows: Captain Davant, chairman; Mayor George W. Tiedeman, George [illegible], Harvey Granger and [illegible] Frank C. Battey of the Savannah Automobile Club. That committee went to work at once with the energy which has characterized all the efforts of the Savannah people along these lines. Sub-committees will be appointed for division of the labor, to arrange to secure accommodations and attend to all details of transportation and care of contestants and press visitors.

It is said that the general arrangements at Savannah will be the most complete [illegible] for an event of that [illegible]. The grandstand will be enlarged and facilities generally increased. The timing will [illegible] expensive and complete of any [illegible].

BEST TO BUY TESTED AUTO

"That old time philosopher who urged against being the first to try the new or the last to discard the old," remarked a veteran owner, "uttered a caution that automobile owners ought to heed. The man who buys a new model, a car fresh from the designer, buys an experiment; the man who sticks too long to an old car misses the finer points of improved cars. Any model of any make is better in its second year than its first. The designer's beautiful theories are then modified by a year's service on the road, under widely varying conditions, in the hands of all sorts of users, and the improved model reaches a real excellence that was impossible before it had thus been put to the test. It will be a good thing for buyers this year not to be carried away by offers of cheap prices for new models; better buy a tested, proved and improved car and pay more for it, because the investment is certain to be less disappointing."

AUTO TRADE REPORTED GOOD

Trade conditions continue good in most of the sections of the country. The large cities of the East probably see as little of this prosperity as any centres. But even there, gains in the number of inquiries and sales are markedly on the increase.

Early announcements of 1909 products may be expected. It is known that several manufacturers who have been in the habit of waiting until very late in the season to show their hands have decided this year to make early statements. Should this become the rule the late shows will become more and more retail selling propositions.

AUTO BEAT HORSE IN ARMY TEST

The sending of an army dispatch on regular roads by an automobile is no new thing; but the latest test at General Grant's camp, at Pine Plains, N. Y., was a contest across plowed ground, wheat-stubbles, and fields where fences had to be torn down. The contestants were an orderly Studebaker touring car and an officer on horseback. The distance was 10 miles, and not only did the automobile get across that rough country far ahead of the horse, but was able to make a dozen more trips like it, while the horse was exhausted.

The army authorities were so pleased with this remarkable performance that they bought this Studebaker for further dispatch carrying. This is probably the first formal recognition that the automobiles have had by the United States Army. The car was the same kind and type as the one which carried the army dispatch from New York City to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, last Winter, and passed the New-York-to-Paris racers who had started six days before.

TESTS MADE IN LUBRICATION

Various ingenious methods of instructing drivers in the art of properly caring for the machines under their control have been designed by enterprising sales managers, but perhaps none is equal in merit to that recently put into effect by a British manufacturer as covering the requirements of sane and successful lubrication.

The operations incident to this have been divided into four groups covering operations which should be performed daily, those which may be carried at weekly intervals, those which are of semi-monthly frequency and those which have to be gone through once or twice a year. A series of photographs have been prepared illustrating graphically the operations in each of these groups, and the series is being embodied in a forthcoming issue of the usual instruction book.

The brevity and force of instructions so propounded reflects great credit on its originator and is of particular interest because the maker in question has instituted a competition for chauffeurs driving his cars, in which the decision rests wholly with the persistence and success with which lubrication is carried out.

OPEN CONTEST UP LONG HILL

Will Be Held in New York July 8 by the Riverside Motor Club.

New York, June 7.—An open hill climbing contest under conditions so severe as to render it the most notable event of the kind ever held hereabout will take place in this city on Wednesday, July 8. On that day and date the Riverside Motor Club will conduct a contest or series of contests up the circuitous Depot Lane Hill, starting at the Boulevard Lafayette and ending on Fort Washington Heights, near the Arrow Head Inn.

The hill is the steepest and likewise the most tortuous within the city limits. From base to crown the distance is about three-eighths of a mile, and the grade averages nearly 15 per cent. In the climb are three sharp turns, the whole course being practically a double "S." The road surface is fine macadam.

Permit to use this course was granted by the city yesterday. As a matter of fact the contest was suggested by two city officials, who raced their cars up the ascent to the inn at the top and then offered to enter a match if a contest should be promoted. In the list of events decided upon yesterday are eight class contests, as follows: Gasoline classes up to $850, $1,250, $2,000, $3,000, $4,000 and over $4,000, a free for all and a class for taxicabs carrying four passengers.

Bronze plaques patterned somewhat after the trophy in the recent Long Island and kilometer trials are to be the prizes in each event. Starts will be from a standstill, the entry fee will be $10 for each car in each event and entries will close July 8 with George Brown at the Gilsey House.

WU TAKES TRIP IN STUDEBAKER

Wu Ting Fang, minister from China, recently made a trip from Chicago to South Bend, Ind., in a Studebaker car and spent a day in South Bend inspecting the immense plants of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, the Oliver plow works and the Studebaker vehicle and automobile factories, each the largest of its kind in the world.

At the Studebaker factory, Minister Wu was entertained by President J. M. Studebaker, seventy-five years young, and Mr. Studebaker took him for a trip through the works, which Minister Wu says he will never forget and never expects to duplicate.

President Studebaker seated the Chinese minister in his Studebaker electric, and together they drove in through the broad factory gates, through the wide factory aisles with the busy machines and workmen on either side, and on to one of the great elevators, and were taken to the roof, where they continued their trip over the roadway and bridges, nearly a quarter of a mile long, which makes a complete circuit over the roofs of the great vehicle plant. Whenever they came to a building which they wished to inspect, the car would be driven on to an elevator and descending would make the circuit of the desired floor and return to the roof again by way of the elevator.

Although the trip was a dizzy one, President Studebaker's perfect control of the car seemed to inspire Minister Wu with confidence and he enjoyed the very unusual trip.

TIRE MAKER NOT ALWAYS TO BLAME

Sometimes the front tires will wear abnormally and the blame may be put upon the tire manufacturer, while it is really due to the wheels running out of parallel, and consequently there is rubbing on the ground as well as rolling. One frequently sees a garage attendant move a car from one place to another, wrenching the front wheels round by means of the steering wheel with the car stationary. As the steering gear enables one to put a great deal of power into turning the front wheels the stress on the steering arms is very great and consequently they are liable to be bent, and in fact do become bent out of shape with much handling in this manner.

Attention has very often been called to the ill effects resulting from steering the front wheels with the steering gear wheel when the car is stationary, and it is a practice which should never be allowed under any circumstances. Although steering gears are called irreversible, and they are as a rule, the front wheels can be taken in both hands and pulled across to the required angle, especially if the steering wheel be set over in the right direction. This of course does not strain the arms in the least.

AUTO ENGINEERS MEET IN DETROIT

At the meeting of the Society of Automobile Engineers, held in Detroit the past week, a paper was read by Otto Heinze on magnetic ignition, illustrated with lantern slides, showing the progress made in gas engine ignition during the last twenty-five years. This was very interesting, as Mr. Heinze knows his subject thoroughly. At the St. Louis Fair he had on exhibition a spark coil capable of throwing a forty-inch spark. The action of the spark in this instrument had caused electricians to reorganize their theory that a spark jumps through the shortest gap.

By placing a curved plate on one of the electrodes and a ball on the other, Mr. Heinze found that the spark instead of jumping across directly, and thus following the shortest line, followed the curve of the plate for some distance before jumping across. Whether this discovery can be utilized in the spark plug to make the spark flutter is a question. It is interesting, nevertheless.

BAY STATE AUTOISTS TO HOLD BIG RUN

Will Have Annual Outing at Newcastle on Friday and Sa[illegible]

[illegible] interest [illegible] manifested in the run of the Bay State Automobile Association to Newcastle on Friday and Saturday [illegible]. This is to be a reunion of the members and their families, and will [illegible] prove as [illegible] as those [illegible] before. Many of the members from out of town are to be present [illegible] two days of festivities.

[illegible] Mr. W. W. Burke of New York [illegible] from that city to Newcastle [illegible] with their old friends of the Bay State. Mr. and Mrs. W. [illegible] before their removal from Boston [illegible] movers in the Bay State, Mr. Burke being one of the founders and charter members. While here they will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. A. [illegible] of the committee.

Secretary [illegible] of the committee is in receipt of requests for reservations from [illegible] number of [illegible] and a success [illegible] guaranteed. A. Measure, who is to captain the bachelors in the ball game, is looking for excellent material, while the Benedicts are saying nothing, but just looking over the field to see what of their number are capable of playing the national game.

BIG AUTO RACES AT ELKWOOD PARK

No Expense Being Spared to Make Course Safe for High Speed.

New York, June 27.—No expense is being spared to make the Elkwood Park course safe for the highest speed on the occasion of the Fourth of July meet. Both turns will be banked to a height of more than four and a half feet. This contract has been awarded to Samuel Smock, who has had an extensive experience in track building, and who has several gangs of men working on it. These men will continue from now on until July 1, when Mr. Smock assures those behind the movement that the contract will be completed. Every precaution possible is being taken to avoid accident. The grand stand, which has been standing for years at Elkwood track, is being reinforced and enlarged to prepare for the visitors.

The programme is by far the most interesting and exciting so far offered for a track meet. The ten-mile amateur event is practically filled now, unless the organization decides to run it in heats. M. Robert Guggenheim, who has joined with Messrs. Lewisohn in preparing this meet for the benefit of Long Branch, was the first to enter this class with his Renault; William B. Anderson, with his Mercedes, followed, Col. Max C. Fleischman, of Cincinnati, and Alfred Lincoln Seligman were among the early entrants to send in their applications.

Fred Lewisohn will be the honorary referee and Dr. J. R. Overpeck, of the Quaker City Motor Club, of Philadelphia, has consented to act as referee and take charge of the meet. This will be Dr. Overpeck's first [illegible] in or near New York. He has presided at most of the important meetings at or near Philadelphia.

AUTOS USED IN GERMAN ARMY

European Governments are taking an active interest in the matter of securing commercial vehicles for use by their armies, and the budget commission of the German Government has decided to report favorably on a bill to authorize a fund of about $500,000 to provide for the organization of an automobile transport corps for the army. It is not planned to use all the money in buying vehicles outright, but rather to create a reserve force of these heavy vehicles that will be at the call of the army in time of need.

The idea is to make arrangements for the reservation for the army of the heavy vehicles used by express companies, wholesale merchants and dealers who have heavy hauling done by motor driven wagons and trucks. The plan includes a subsidy arrangement under which manufacturers and owners of such machines would keep them in readiness to be used in emergencies by the Government and have the vehicles used during the regular army manoeuvres, after which the owners would again assume control of them.

A. C. OF A. TOUR OVER.

The pleasure tour of the Automobile Club of America, which comes to a conclusion in New York City this morning, has proven decidedly enjoyable to all who participated. The route lay through an ideal country and there was not a single day when every one of the tourists did not thoroughly enjoy themselves. The arrangements were most satisfactory, and no confusion whatever was experienced. The party was small in comparison with some of the previous tours, but that did not interfere with the true enjoyment and success of the same.

AL. REEVES IMPROVING.

Alfred Reeves, general manager of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association, who was successfully operated upon for appendicitis last Monday, at St. John's Hospital, Yonkers, N. Y., is on the road to recovery and is expected to leave the hospital during the first week in July.

Well-Known Boston Cartoonist to Reproduce His Drawings on Stage—Other Bills for Week.

"Wallace Goldsmith, the Boston newspaper artist whose sporting [illegible] have made him particularly well known to the newspaper reading public, [illegible] his bow in vaudeville at Keith's Theatre this week. He will do a series of original drawings, among which will be some of his famous baseball characters.

Ralph C. Herz of "The Soul Kiss" fame will give a character monologue. Clara Blandick, Richard Sterling and Marianne Thurber will play "The Band Box," the sketch originally presented by Mrs. George Gould in the Hotel Plaza, New York, by a society and art [illegible] Miss Thurber was a member of the original cast. Others [illegible] this week include Sadie Jansell, [illegible] the Karl Barleben String Quartet, the Four Riegos in acrobatics, Catherine Hayes and Mabel Johnson in "A Dream of Baby Days," Bob, Tip & Co., gymnastic [illegible] Willie Hale and Buster, jugglers and xylophonists, the Evans Trio in a [illegible] song and dance, Gaines and Brown, [illegible] James R. Waters, the "Singer of the Ghetto," and new kinetograph pictures.

Farce at the Boston.

"Mrs. Temple's Telegram," said to be one of the funniest farces written since the days of "The Private Secretary," will be given at the Boston [illegible] English [illegible] the experiences of Mr. [illegible] who is forced to spend the night on the top of a Ferris wheel car on account of [illegible] His efforts to explain [illegible] to [illegible] suspicious wife and [illegible] that are absolutely amusing.

Miss [illegible] will play the role of Mrs. Temple. Other parts will be [illegible] George Parker as Jack Temple, Wilson Melrose as Frank Fuller, [illegible] Edwardes as Captain Sharpe, Walter Walker as Wigson, William Hasson as John Brown, Mary Sanders as Dorothy, Olive L. Oliver as Mrs. Fuller, and Rose [illegible] as Mrs. Brown.

Plenty of Laughs.

In spite of hot weather, sticky weather and all [illegible] to keep people out of doors, the [illegible] continues filled with patrons. "A Knight for a Day." The laughs in [illegible] drive away the blues. [illegible] and Miss May Vokes, [illegible] keep the nimblest wit keyed [illegible] following the comedy action.

Miss Carolyn [illegible] prima donna, is encored [illegible] song success. The music of [illegible] its strongest factors [illegible] the melodies are being sung and whistled about town.

Comic situations [illegible] concerning [illegible] and Johns than the [illegible] and the well the [illegible] brigands in [illegible] of the play. The [illegible] are refreshingly pretty and the staging and costuming are as they should be in a smart up-to-date production.

Romance and War.

The military type always appeals on the stage and the Bowdoin Square Theatre has placed an excellent melodrama for the week in "A Rough Rider's Romance," in which love and war are combined with sensational effect.

The scenes are laid on the island of Cuba during the Spanish War. A beautiful girl, Anita, is [illegible] through the drama. This role is played by Miss Charlotte Hunt. A dashing American officer wins her hand, though she is sought by many rivals.

The heroic part of Lieutenant Ford will be played by Harold Claremont, who makes a splendid foil to Miss Hunt. Other members of the company will fill the remaining roles ably. Entertaining moving pictures are to be shown.

Where Burlesque Rules.

The Palace Theatre stock company, materially strengthened since it began this Summer season, has two absurdly funny burlesques for the week. One is called "Reilly's Speech." The other is "Chinese Servants." Both have good comedy, clever specialties and tuneful music.

The comedians and the pretty girls, who are favorites with burlesque patrons, will inject plenty of snap and verve into the two skits. In addition, there will be several good olio numbers, and the Palacescope will also contribute its entertaining share.

Austin & Stone's Museum.

A lively midsummer show, with plenty of breezy features, will entertain patrons of Austin & Stone's Museum this week. Sandow and Lambert, the physical culture exponents, are prominent on the bill. Glenfield, the ventriloquist, will please the younger ones particularly. Olivette, in illusions, Feeney's Boys' Orchestra and other acts round out the show hall programme. In the theatre there will be two shows [illegible] to the museum standard.

Majestic Closes.

The Majestic Theatre closed last night its 1907-1908 season of forty-eight weeks. This house has offered some splendid plays for the public the past season, as shown by the following resume of bookings: July 29, "The Green Bird"; September 2, "Fascinating Flora"; September 21, Blanche Bates, "The Girl of the Golden West" and "Madame Butterfly"; [illegible] 14, "The Lancers" [illegible] Loftus); [illegible] Lane's" [illegible] Rancho," [illegible] San Carlo [illegible] ber 30. SONS OF IRELAND IN NATIVE SPORTS

A [illegible] field day of the Knights of St. Brendan at Locust street grounds, next Saturday, the principal attraction will be [illegible] championship [illegible] New England. [illegible] arrangements [illegible] carnival [illegible] charge is now hoping for a [illegible].

In the football games the Young Irelands of Worcester and the Erin's Hopes of Boston will compete. The Tipperary men and the Knights of St. Brendan are also matched. The two winners of the preliminary games will play for the championship. In the hurling matches the Young Irelands will play the William O'Briens of Cambridge. The Shamrocks will play the winners.

Michael J. Skinner will have charge of the Gaelic games. Visitors will come from Lowell, South Framingham, Lawrence, Lynn, Haverhill, Providence, Worcester, Manchester and Brockton, as there are a number of County Kerry people in the above cities. President P. J. Sullivan will head the reception committee.

The Kilkenney Men's Association will meet next Sunday at 164 Canal street. The committee appointed to make arrangements for an entertainment to help the fund for a memorial to the late John Locke, poet, author and Irish patriot, will offer a concert and lecture to be held in September. Hon Joseph F. O'Connell will deliver the lecture. John Locke was a Kilkenney man, author of "Dawn On the Irish Coast." The Kilkenney Men of New York are acting in conjunction with the Boston association for the erection of the memorial.

F. M. Donnelly has been appointed correspondent for this association.

In addition to the regular business, a musical and literary entertainment will be given next Sunday afternoon.

The County Limerick Club at their annual election of officers selected Denis F. Keating as president; Stephen Griffin vice president; Henry Keating recording secretary; David M. O'Connell financial secretary and Nicolas J. O'Shaughnessy treasurer. The president will appoint the other officers and delegates to the Central Council.

* * *

The Mayo Men's Association has chosen the following officers: Joseph J. Thornton, president; Patrick F. Hastings, vice-president; Denis J. Carroll, recording secretary; James McAndrew, financial secretary; Martin J. Mulroy, corresponding secretary; Joseph J. O'Toole, treasurer; John A. Brett, sergeant-at-arms; Edward Gaughan, sentinel; James H. Curry, Martin J. Mulroy, Patrick F. Hastings and Hugh Raftery, delegates to Central Council. The auditors are Owen Needham, Martin J. Giel and M. F. O'Malley. The newly elected officers will prepare a special programme for the educational hour held by this club at each meeting. The next meeting will be held Sunday, July 5, at No. 12 Kneeland street.

The County Galway Social Club has rejected the suggestion of holding one meeting a month during the Summer. It was decided that the Gaelic entertainments, a feature of this club's social hour, were too valuable to be interrupted.

A sick and death benefit fund will be started as soon as a committee appointed for that purpose reports.

The County Fermanagh Club has voted to organize a Ladies' Auxiliary. The club now meets in its new quarters in Vernon hall.

* * *

* * *

The County Louth Association, Knights and Ladies of St. Bridgid, will meet on the fourth Tuesday evening during July, August and September. At the next meeting the new constitution and by-laws will come up for adoption. The meetings will be held in Appleton hall.

* * *

The Ladies of St. Finbar will meet the second and fourth Tuesday evenings of each month in Sever hall, Paine building. At the next meeting July 14, a reception and social will be tendered the Knights of St. Finbar. The committee in charge of the reception is Miss May Fleming, Mrs. Theresa O'Conner, Miss Katherine Curtin, Miss Katherine Ryan and Miss Katherine Daily.

* * *

The Antrim Club will meet to-night in Paine Building. After the business meeting a reception will be tendered all former residents of Antrim. A select programme of song, story and recitations dear to the hearts of Irish people will be given.

* * *

The Knights and Ladies of Roscommon will hold their regular monthly meeting in Investigator Hall to-night. This meeting will be a very important one. President T. J. Finnegan desires a full attendance. The meeting will begin at 8 o'clock sharp.

The questions of an employment bureau, a [illegible] sick and death benefit, and the report of the Irish industrial committee will come before the members.

The football club will submit its schedule for the season. Captain Michael Kenney will give a talk on "Gaelic Sports."

* * *

At the meeting of the Tipperary Men's Association in Phoenix Hall next Sunday afternoon President Daniel B. Kiley will announce the several committees to continue the policy adopted by the club this Summer. A hurling team may be organized.

* * *

The County Carlow Club will meet to-night at Paine Building. President Thomas Skelton has made arrangements to initiate twelve new members. A concert will be given by some of the talent in this club.

* * *

County Council President Patrick J. Crotty will not call a meeting of the delegates before the first of next month. The various subcommittees working on plans made by the County Council Convention on Irish manufactures, and Gaelic athletics, are working hard and report that affairs are in splendid condition. For this reason the president does not deem a meeting before that time necessary.

FALLS FROM WAGON; FEAR FATAL RESULT

2 KILLED, 1 FATALLY HURT UNDER ENGINE

Cincinnati, June 27.—Conductor Hays, aged twenty-eight, and Engineer Francis, aged thirty-three years, were killed by being caught under an engine of the Pennsylvania railroad to-night when it ran off the track and tipped over in the heart of the city. Fireman Carpenter was fatally scalded.

DIES FROM TRAIN WRECK.

COMPLAINT READ TO THE SELECT MEN
EVANGELINE E. McELROY

Oh, it's easy work to stop a rooster crowing,
You can cure him mighty quick
And he might consent to listen
If you handed him a kick;
For the bird most pertinacious,
If he's anyways sagacious,
Will sit right up and notice
If you land upon his slats.
But a rooster and a baby
Are some different and, maybe,
You'll allow a baby's crying
Is another breed of cats.

Cock-a-doodle-doo!

Evangeline McElroy's pet bantam rooster is still crowing in the McElroy coop at No. 80 School street, Brookline, adjacent to the town library.

Evangeline is crying now and then, when she feels like it, as any three-year-old girl will.

The crying and the crowing, if they happen to occur, still drift through the town library windows in spite of the protest of Miss Louisa M. Hooper, the displeased librarian.

And Secretary Ed. McGettrick, of the Brookline Board of Selectmen, isn't any nearer than he "was before he was," as they say, to abating the rooster and the baby, and the crowing and the crying.

There is provision in the Brookline town ordinances for abatement of nuisances that are a menace to public health or an unbearable and unnecessary annoyance to the public peace of mind.

Possibly Secretary Ed could abate the rooster, as Miss Hooper desires, if he could prove that the rooster crows unduly.

But abating a pretty baby girl is another story. The late King Solomon holds the record to date for finding the happiest solution of a vexing baby problem. But even Solomon in all his wisdom could hardly have found within the statutes an answer to the present argument.

Can't Stop Rooster Crowing.

Mrs. Robert D. McElroy, mother of the interesting Evangeline, has an emphatic answer for her side of the case, however. She said last night:

"I can't stop the rooster's crowing unless I wring its neck. I don't intend to do that. The rooster and its pretty speckled mate are my child's pets, having taken the place of a puppy dog which died. The child was heartbroken over the dog's death and as she is now greatly interested in the rooster and the hen it would break her little heart to kill them. I will not do that. Yes, I am still holding the fort, and I intend to hold it, too.

"Evangeline is very much taken up with her pets. She sits by the coop for a whole hour at a time watching the rooster. She keeps as quite as a mouse while looking at them. She is very fond of feeding them. The only reason we got them was because of the grief of her cousin, Ethel, and herself over the puppy's death.

Evangeline Not Cry Baby.

"Those women in the library across the fence make me tired. It is absurd for them to complain of the rooster's crowing and Evangeline's crying as being a nuisance. I can't conceive how the occasional crowing of the rooster disturbs them or makes them nervous provided they have their minds concentrated on their work. The rooster crows but seldom and I never notice it while about my housework. I [illegible] see how they [illegible] the crowing unless they [illegible] make a special point to hear it.

"As for Evangeline being a cry baby, that is not so. I am sure that she cries less than any child of her age in Brookline. She gives me but little trouble. Of course once in a while, of an afternoon she gets fussy when I want to take her into the house for her regular nap. Sometimes she cries at that time, as any tired child would do under the circumstances, but the crying is never loud or prolonged and no fair minded person could justly call her crying a nuisance."

When the reporter called at the McElroy home, which backs up on the town library property, baby Evangeline was sitting on the little tar papered hen house. She was throwing grass between the wires into the coop to her pets. Evangeline is an extremely well mannered little lady. She has beautiful [illegible] eyes and [illegible] as well as the average child of five. She is the only child in the family.

Miss Hooper, the librarian, said: "I do not care to discuss the matter. I am very sorry it became public."

TENNESSEE VOTE STILL IN DOUBT

Memphis, Tenn., June 27.—With polls not closing in Memphis, Nashville, Chattanooga and other cities until 9 p. m., the result of the Democratic gubernatorial primaries between Patterson and former Senator E. W. Carmack is in doubt.

Early returns from Shelby County, out of Memphis, indicate Patterson will carry this county—the largest in the State.

Women and children, organized by the W. C. T. U., furnished the spectacular feature of the day, parading and singing before the polls opened.

By virtue of the Pendelton Law liquor is sold legally only in Memphis, Nashville and Chattanooga, all other sections being dry. Carmack advocated extending the law to three cities. Patterson opposes this plan.

USED HIS SHOE AS WEAPON IS CHARGE

A new Weapon under police notice last night when William Boyle was arrested on a charge of assaulting his 15-year-old son with a shoe.

The lad is in the Relief Hospital with his head and neck cut and bruised, showing that a shoe can be a nasty weapon if big enough in size and rightly applied.

TWO WOMEN BURNED BY OIL EXPLOSION

Manchester, N. H., June 27.—Two women were painfully burned as the result of the explosion of an oil stove at No. 9 Laurel street shortly after 7 o'clock tonight. The house was ruined and the tenants lost all their possessions.

[illegible] troops have joined the [illegible] and they lower floor of the house where the fire started, and Mrs. Albert Lemay, a widow with five small children, living on the second and third floors, were badly burned. They were taken in by neighbors and are now under the care of Dr. J. Franklin Robinson.

Mrs. Folsom was preparing supper on the oil stove when suddenly it exploded. Her clothing quickly caught fire and she ran screaming for help. She ran up the stairs to the apartments of Mrs. Lemay and into the kitchen. Mrs. Lemay, tearing up a piece of carpet, tried to smother the flames eating Mrs. Folsom's burning clothes. In doing this her own clothing and the furnishings of the room caught fire, but she was able to quench the fire in her own dress, which was woolen and burned slowly.

The two women both dashed down stairs and neighbors rushed to their aid. They were taken into nearby houses and Dr. Robinson was called.

In the meantime the burning oil set the lower tenement on fire and the upper floor was also burning. When the fire department arrived the entire building was ablaze and it was devastated before the flames were extinguished.

The building which is owned by Frank C. Green, was not insured and his loss is placed at over $500. The loss on the furniture in the two tenements is placed at $600, not insured.

MAGEE (THAT'S HE) HOOKS BIG SALMON

SAVES PRESS AGENT'S JOB

Four Feet Long Was This Finny Monster of the Deep When George W. Dragged Him in.

Oh, George W. Magee, Boston theatrical man is he, has just caught a salmon four feet long and we can prove it.

How do [illegible] know? [illegible] Magee's sending [illegible] splendid photograph of himself [illegible] a four foot salmon. Magee is up along the Penobscot River. Salmon come from the Penobscot, and there you are.

G. Magee is better known as Proprietor George W. Magee of the Grand Opera House. He recently departed on a well-earned vacation, faithfully promising his imploring press agent that he would keep him posted on anything of news value.

Woozly Days for Press Agent.

Days passed and the press agent didn't hear a darn thing from Magee and was nearly crazy, there being nothing to slip the papers about Magee or the Grand Opera House, now that the house was closed for the season and Magee away for the same dull period. It was awful, Mabel, awful.

Some more days passed and nothing doing from Magee. And there was the sad Summer season [illegible] slowly on and the press agent had [illegible] and he was wondering if he could start a yarn about Magee being lost in the wilds of Maine and get away with it.

The press agent was just looking at a map of Maine to pick out a good place in which to lose Magee and have searching parties out when [illegible] this photograph of Magee and salmon.

The press agent wept for joy. "Dear old George," he said, "I [illegible] knew he wouldn't forget me. And what a perfectly lovely fish [illegible]."

The more the press agent looked at the fishy photograph [illegible] the kindness of Magee in [illegible] that salmon and then writing [illegible] the more grateful he was to Magee.

The press agent says that salmon was four feet long over all and weighed 24 pounds, [illegible]. He was an open-faced salmon with [illegible] smothered in [illegible] like the [illegible] mashed potato. When it came to real climbing this salmon had a Thomas 40 looking like a one-horse dray and on the level (level going) you couldn't see him for dust.

Photographer's Swell Job.

We regret that space forbids printing a reproduction of this photograph in a seven column layout, with attractive decorative border. But it's a bird of a photograph of a fish. The salmon, four feet of ham [illegible], is one of the salmonest looking salmon that ever came out of the Penobscot.

The photographer did a great job in catching the salmon, i. e., with his camera.

Magee is going to spend the Fourth with Judge Brackett at Brackett's Claim, New Hampshire.

Then he is coming back to the whirl of business life and close up his bookings for the coming season at the Grand Opera House. The coming season at the G. O. H. is also a subject fruitful in interesting matter for the public press, but it is not fitting to be discussed here, this being only a fish story.

STARTS TO-DAY ON "DARE-DEVIL" ACT

"Dare Devil" Babcock, as he is known in teh amusement world, puts on his bicycle loop-the-loop and jump the gap act at Wonderland to-day.

Assistant Manager Perry, had boked him to start his engagement to-morow, but by a new arrangement, Babcock will start in to-day for the benefit of the big holiday throng, expected at the park.

"Dare Devil" Babcock's apparatus alone is enough to cause wondering atention. It stretches 125 fet along the Wonderland arena and towers forty-five feet in the air. It costs $5,000 and loks it.

It's a hair-raising feat that Babcock does with his bicycle on the "loop-the-loop." He rides down a steep track two feet and ten inches wide, following a black [illegible] slope at breakneck speed. He shoots through a trap in the loop, springing the trap by striking a certain plank with his bicycle wheel. He swirls inside the loop, up over and down the opposite curve. There another trap opens, letting [illegible] rider and his wheel [illegible] to a short stretch of track with an upward hook at the end. The up-throw of this dual hook sends rider and wheel high in the air over a twenty-foot gap to the final stretch, where he comes to a stop.

And it's all over in a flash, so fast does the man spin around the loop, through the traps, across the gap and to the home stretch.

They've got a new wrinkle at the big Dark-Town show in Wonderland. It isn't exactly a wrinkle, however. It's water, real water. They use it in putting out the fire on the steamboat.

They had fun enough with that fire and the red-shirted firemen and the red-painted hand tub, without any water play.

Now they've got water, genuine, wet water, for the hand tub, and the extra fun they have with that liquid is a caution to underwriters.

MARRIED 50 YEARS; CELEBRATE MONDAY

Mr and Mrs. Henry Cornell, formerly of Chelsea, will celebrate the golden anniversary of their wedding at the home of their son Henry J. Cornell, No. 57 Tremont street, Revere, to-morrow night.

Since 1874 the couple lived in Chelsea, until the fire, when their home at No. 181 Central street was burned.

Mrs. Cornell was Miss Elizabeth Hartwood, and the couple were married at Shoreditch Church, London, Eng., June 27, 1858.

The couple have four children and seven grandchildren. One of the children is Alfred F. Cornell, a former member of the Chelsea Board of Aldermen. The others are Henry J. Cornell, Mrs. Alexander Robertson and Mrs. Annie Gifney.

Mr. Cornell, who was the founder of Mayflower Lodge, Sons of St. George, and has been its secretary since its inception twenty-five years ago, is seventy-three year and Mrs. Cornell is aged seventy-four.

AID WORKING BOYS BY BIG LAWN PARTY

FRATERNAL ORDERS HELP

Festival for Benefit of Home Makes Record for Attendance and Quality.

The annual lawn party of the Working Boys' Home, Newton Highlands, was held yesterday on the Cedar street grounds, [illegible] affairs of the [illegible] both in attendance and the quality of the attractions.

The affair commenced at noon and lasted till a late hour. The spacious grounds were festooned with strings of colored lights and the various booths were attractively arranged and decorated.

Various fraternal organizations lent their efforts toward the success of the affair. Among these were the Newton branches of the A. O. H., the Ladies' Aid societies of the Newtons and Boston and the Massachusetts Order of Catholic Foresters.

In the afternoon there were athletic events. A 100-yard race for girls was won by Gertrude Shine, with Ellen Sullivan second and Ella Ryan third; shoe race for boys, won by William Manning; second, Joseph Hughes; 100-yard dash, won by Joseph Gilden, second, Harry Caswell; 440-yard dash, won by Harry Caswell, second, George Thomas; mile run, won by Vincent Camus, second, Thomas Worthington, third, Timothy Murphy; half mile relay race, won by Gilden, Boudrot, Dorney and Thomas.

After the races the big crowd was treated to a balloon ascension and parachute drop. The aeronaut dropped from his balloon from a height of 2,000 feet and came down nearly a mile away. He was [illegible] by landing on a [illegible].

[illegible] in charge of the affair and [illegible] tables were as follows: [illegible] Thomas J. Lyndfutoff, [illegible] committee on attractions [illegible] Bernard D. Farrell [illegible] Green, Frank Hurley, Walter Finke, Michael J. Murphy, Edward H. Powers, John O'Halloran; dancing, Mrs. Alice K. [illegible] Mrs. Thomas Delaney [illegible] Miss Rose Maguire [illegible] Banks, wheel of fortune [illegible] Ryan, Chinese laundry [illegible] McNamara [illegible] table [illegible] Mahoney, Miss Sarah Hurley, [illegible] Michael J. Mahoney, William [illegible] cane board, John O'Halloran, Miss M. Elizabeth [illegible] grab bag, Miss Mary Dillon and [illegible] centre, Miss Cather[illegible] Ryan, [illegible] Miss Sarah [illegible] Mary Rogan, Mollie Cadahan; matinee vaudeville, Mrs. Anastasia Coughlin; athletic events and evening vaudeville, Newton Council 167, K. of C.

The A. O. H. table was cared for by representatives of Divisions [illegible], 54, 27, Ladies' Aid divisions 31, 10, 29, 22, 8 and 32. The orders represented at the M. C. O. F. table were St. Bernard's Court, [illegible] Court 60 and Newton Centre Court 201. William P. Sweeney was in charge.

THOUSANDS ENJOY ST. COLUMBKILLE'S ANNUAL FIELD DAY.

The annual field day of St. Columbkille's Catholic Church, Brighton on Rogers FField, Brighton, all day and evening yesterday, was very successful, several thousand people being present. Rev. Joseph V. Tracy, D. D., P. R., pastor of the church, was one of the guests.

Games and contests for the children were held, and in the afternoon the Brighton and Brookline Councils, K. of C., played ball, Brookline winning in ten innings, 9 to 7. Father Tracy presented Manager "Eddie" Cahill of the victorious team a silver cup.

The tug of war between the married and single men was won by the former. There was dancing in the evening. "Charlie" Daly, the old Harvard athlete and Frank A. McGrath had charge of the athletics.

The Brighton, East, table was in charge of Mrs. George Muldoon, assisted by Miss Mary Craig, Miss Anna Hickey and Mrs. William McDonald. The South table was in charge of Miss Nellie Knight, the ice cream booth, Miss Elizabeth Keefe; the West table, Mrs. Fred Cross and the Oak Square and Fanueil table, Miss Hannah Shaw.

The general committee was headed by Rev. George Reardon, Rev. John F. Madden and Rev. Augustine S. Hickey.

Fifteen thousand men, women and children attended the annual lawn party given yesterday afternoon and evening by the Young Ladies' Charitable Association of Boston in aid of the Free Home for Consumptives in the spacious grounds surrounding the institution at No. 428 Quincy street, Dorchester.

This year the admission fee at the gates was cut from twenty-five cents to ten cents and the result was the sale outright of 15,000 tickets before the party began.

An interesting feature of the day was the presentation to Miss Dorothy Forbes, for the association, of $50 in gold by Moy June, a Chinaman, in behalf of the Chinese Merchants of Boston.

Yesterday afternoon fully 3,000 children of Boston flocked to the lawn party where they were entertained by twenty-five children of the Dorothy Dix Hall Association.

The crowds of the home were decorated with red, white and blue bunting, all the forms of wheels and [illegible] in the evening hundreds of Chinese lanterns were lighted.

Teel's Band gave enjoyable concerts.

The eighteen tables and their managers were as follows: North Dorchester table, Mrs. M. J. Crotty; Mission Church, Mrs. J. D. Doyle; Liberty, Mrs. Eugene D. Sullivan; South End, Mrs. Douglas J. Sexton; Brookline, Mrs. Annie McGuire; Jamaica Plain, Mrs. Elizabeth T. Norden; Malden, Mrs. J. E. Connolly; Milton, Miss Martha Walsh; West End, Miss Agnes Kelley; Back Bay, Mrs. Annie Dolan; Back Bay, Jr., Miss Lillian Demetry; Charlestown, Mrs. Ellen A. Crafty; St. James, Mrs. P. J. Shea; Nurses, Miss Mary Crowley; East Cambridge, Miss M. E. Barry; Broadway, Mrs. Mary J. Manning; South Boston, Mrs. Mary Mahoney; and City Point, Miss Nellie Mahoney.

In the series of five athletic games the 100-yard dash was won by Daniel Melville, the shot-put and the potato race by Edward Hayden, the mile jump by Thomas Skinner and the mile run by Walter Meade. The challenge cup was awarded Thomas Skinner.

Rev. Alfred Atwood, rector of the Congregational church, was in charge of the outing.

A. O. H. MEET TO ELECT STATE DELEGATES

Division 27, A. O. H., will meet to-night in Hibernian Hall to elect delegates to the State convention at Lyn in August.

MISS NORA L. GAGAN, WHO IS TO BE LED TO THE ALTAR TUESDAY

POPULAR 'PHONE GIRL TO BE BRIDE

One of the prettiest of June weddings, which will prove of special interest in telephone and State House circles, will take place in St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, Tuesday, June 30, at 9 a. m., when a nuptial mass will be celebrated and Thomas Matthew Devlin of East Boston will lead to the altar Nora Loretta Gagan of South Boston.

Miss Gagan, the bride-to-be, was connected for a number of years with the Tremont Exchange of the New England Telephone Company and resigned her position to take charge of the switchboard of the Boston American shortly after its installation, leaving behind her a host of friends in the telephone company to testify to her popularity.

Thomas M. Devlin, the groom to be, is a popular resident of East Boston, where he is prominent in church, military and social circles. He served in the Spanish-American war in company H of the Ninth Massachusetts regiment, is a member of Roxbury Camp of Spanish War Veterans, and was one of the early members of Grady Camp of East Boston. He is conected with the teaching staff of the Sunday school of the Sacred Heart Church and is a member of the Royal Arcanum of East Boston. Mr. Devlin was a student at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Baltimore, Md., and was two years on the staff of the Boston City Hospital. For the past year he has been connected with the State Board of Charity as a visitor and probation officer.

AERONAUT BONETTI DROPS INTO OCEAN

The double ascension of airship and balloon at Paragon Park yesterday attracted a great crowd and was successful in everyway. Signor Bonetti, the aeronaut, landed in the water and was rescued without injury to himself or his balloon. Lincoln Beachey's airship performance was one of the finest spectacles possible.

Prof. Bonetti's war baloon was cut loose at 5.30, on a schedule time and with light winds prevailing went up so rapidly that an altitude of approximately 3,000 feet was reached before a counter air current was met about a mile northwest of White Head, which sent the balloon back toward its starting point.

The parachute drop was made over White Head, Bonetti landing in the water and being rescued by a steam launch held in readiness for such an emergency. The parachute and emptied balloon were soon afterward recovered.

When it was announced that the balloonist was safe, Lincoln Beachey's airship arose from the recreation ground in the park and, ascending 100 feet, circled round under perfect control, over beach, park, [illegible] and land [illegible] returning to its starting point without the slightest accident.

BAND CONCERTS BEGIN FOR SUMMER

Free band concerts begin for the season in Boston today with a concert on the Common at 3.30 o'clock. To-night there will be concerts at Albany and Dearborn streets. Other concerts scheduled are at Winthrop square, June 30, and Ashley avenue and Bread street, July 2.

CIVIL SERVICE MEN WANT MORE PAY

Claiming that their services compare unfavorably with the salaries paid to other departments in Boston, the classified civil service employes at the navy yard have drawn up an appeal to Secretary of the Navy Metcalf, requesting that he use his influence to affect legislation that will give them more pay.

CITY PLAYGROUND GIVEN SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, June 27.—Nathan D. Ball has offered the city as a memorial to his late father-in-law, Emmerson Wight, a large tract of land on Wendell and Rutledge avenues, to be used for a public playground. The tract comprises six acres, and is valued at $40,000.

JOHN D., JR., PLANS TO BOOM ICE STOCK

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, June 27.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has come to the front in Wall Street in the last few days as the reputed owner of the [illegible] block of American Ice stock outside of the holdings of Charles W. Morse.

Mr. Rockefeller is understood to have purchased this stock in the open market, some of it as low as $3 a share, last October, after he had received reports as to its value from experts who were permitted to examine the books in his behalf.

Since Mr. Rockefeller [illegible] up the [illegible] Morse [illegible] advanced to [illegible] brokers who usually have [illegible] in regard to his movements say that he plans to send Ice [illegible]. The stock sold at 98 a little more than a year ago. Its high price in 1907 was 88 and in the panic of October it sold down to 8½.

Put Morse on His Feet.

Incidentally, Mr. Rockefeller's campaign in Ice is expected to put Charles W. Morse on his feet again, and to reward him for his work last October in assisting in the financial slaughter of the Heinzes. Persons close to the Heinzes say their ruin never could have been accomplished but for the heavy selling of United Copper by Mr. Morse at a critical moment.

The Standard Oil people, it is asserted, had been attacking Heinze in vain for many months, but could find no weak spot until Mr. Morse payed the Arnold Von Winkelried act and let his friends assault the Heinze phalanx over his own apparently dead financial body. It is generally believed in Wall Street that the speedy resuscitation of Mr. Morse has been due to the support given him by the Rockefellers, and especially by John D., Jr.

Heinze Back to Fray.

On the advance which is planned for American Ice Mr. Morse is expected to liquidate his holdings and re-establish himself in Wall Street with an abundance of cash.

In the meantime F. Augustus Heinze, sore, but unconquered, is planning to recuperate his own fortunes in the West and will return after a few years to fight the battle all over again.

Young Rockefeller is now believed to be the man who stood behind David Lamar for months in [illegible] remarkable attacks on Delaware & Hudson stock. The reason given for the attacks on Delaware & Hudson is that the company purchased at a remarkably cheap price a tract of anthracite coal land. The persons who sold this land believed at the time that they were getting the best of the company, but after the deal had been consummated they discovered to their dismay that it was worth many times the purchase price.

FERNALD IS SURE OF NOMINATION

Augusta, Me., June 27.—The Republican State convention will be held Tuesday at Bangor. Notwithstanding the fact that it is generally conceded that Fernald has the gubernatorial nomination safely tucked away in his vest pocket, with a probable majority of 500 delegates, William T. Haines of Waterville is still fighting for the nomination, and is, he says, confident of winning out. He expects to swing a big bunch of Fernald followers before the convention opens.

Some of those opposed to Fernald accuse him of having bought the nomination. It is asserted $1,000 was spent to carry Dexter, whose delegates are instructed for him, and similar reports are coming from many other sections of the State.

It seems now that Fernald has enough delegates to nominate him on the first ballot. Reddy of Portland has not shown up so strongly as was expected, and now it is predicted that he will not swing over seventy-five votes in the convention.

It looks as if Fernald will have about 800 and Haines a little over 300. It is generally conceded that as matters stand now Fernald has about forty more than he really needs to secure the nomination.

The Democratic convention will be held at Bangor July 15. It has been settled for some time that Obadiah Gardiner of Rockland will be the nominee for Governor, and it is likely that he will be nominated on the first ballot.

"NOBODIES" ALONE CAN JOIN THIS CLUB

Paris Society Organized Whose Members Cannot Have Social Position.

Paris, June 27.—Social nonentity is one of the qualifications necessary for membership of a new society which has been started here, called the Academy of Nobodies." To be a member one must have "no aptitudes or pretensions of any determinate kind," and one's election must not be made a question of "profession, means, opinions or social position."

Candidates will stand upon their merits of heart and soul. They must display only their souls, if they believe they have any, and their personal virtue. Candidates must also have hearts—a question which is decided by the committee before admitting a member.

Members are forbidden on principle to accept titles, honors or dignities, though in special cases they may be excused from refusing such things, on condition that they do not "flaunt them about." Rule No. 4, however, says that "in patently scandalous cases, for instance, should a member become an emperor, a king, a president of a republic, an ambassador, a cabinet minister, a commander of an army corps, a senator or deputy, a famous murderer or the owner of a famous brand of champagne, such member shall be instantly expelled without leave of appeal."

NO PLAYGROUNDS IN SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, June 27.—Lack of an appropriation by the City Council is holding up the work of the Springfield Playground Association this Summer, and no plans have been made thus far to establish playgrounds and manual training schools.

$325,000 LIBRARY FOR SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, June 27.—The new library for this city is to cost $325,000, and work upon it will be commenced in the near future. Of this amount all but $75,000 has been raised.

The library is to be built of white marble and the plans have already been accepted.

ACCUSE RAILWAY OF FAVORING MACKEREL TRUST

MAY TAKE WAR TO COURT

Trust Charged with Restraint of Trade by Chartering Trains and Other Schemes.

Declaring that the members of the Boston Mackerel Company, the Mackerel Trust it is styled, are laying themselves open to the operations of the Interstate Commerce Law by attempting to restrict trade and to se [illegible] transportation favors for their organization, the independent fish dealers of T Wharf and Atlantic avenue are preparing to take the issue into the courts if the business field is not left open as it used to be.

Friction between the "trust" dealers and the independents came to a climax at Newport, where the contest was fought at every point, not only for the fish, but for barrels and ice to pack them, and finally for a train to ship them to Boston.

Train Bought Up.

At one stage of the game an independent dealer, unable to get barrels from the Independent Barrel Company (not allied with the independent dealers except by similarity of name), paid $100 spot cash as membership fee to the organization and secured his barrels that way.

At another time the independents, having arranged, as they thought, for freight privileges on a special train to Boston, found that one of the Boston Mackerel Company representatives had chartered the special train. The independent freight of fish had to wait over [illegible] market in Boston.

The independents are very angry at General Freight Agent [illegible] of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad at Newport. They say that in case of an action against the railroad on the ground of discrimination, the "trust" dealers would be co-defendants with the railroad.

There are about forty fish dealing concerns along the Boston water front. These buy their fish direct from the vessels that come into port. Then there are a dozen principal commission houses, with agents at Portland, Rockport, Gloucester, Newport and other ports to which the fishing fleets sail when too far from Boston to make T Wharf in good season.

28 Dealers in Combine.

The trade at these ports has been practically all handled by the commission men, who bought the trips, or cargoes, of fish and consigned them to whatever Boston dealers they were doing business with.

At T wharf it has been the custom, also, for one dealer to buy for several other dealers. Maybe a representative from the Hub Fish Company would go to the wharf and buy an entire trip or two or three trips, taking more than he could dispose of himself, but distributing the rest to other dealers.

According to the independents a score of the dealers formed an organization recently which they called the Boston Mackerel Company. They added a few more till the concern included the following twenty-eight dealers:

J. R. Neal & Co., Haskins Fish Company, I. B. Goodspeed & Company, Boston Fish Company, A. F. Rich & Co., A. Booth Co., H. A. Rich Company, Watts & Cook, Bunting & Emery, B. F. Phillips & Co., Arnold & [illegible], J. A. Adams & Co., F. A. Rich & Co., Freeman & Cobb, P. H. Prior Company, J. Burns & Co., F. E. Harding & Co., C. J. Whitman & Co., R. O'Brien & Co., Atlantic & Pacific Fish Co., Fulham & Herbert, Prior, Ingalls & Co., Henry & Close, Boise & Washburn, Wetherell Fish Company, Lombard & Curtis, Warren Fitch Company, Long Wharf Fish Company.

War on Nagle Company.

The following twelve dealers comprised the independents: Gloucester Fresh Fish Company, F. J. O'Hara, A. G. Baker, Atlas Fish Company, Hub Fish Company, Williams Brothers, Bay Fish Company, C. Hunt & Co., Taylor & Mayo, Coleman & Son, Wm. Haskell & Co., John Burns, Jr.

Since then, however, the Gloucester Fresh Fish Company has joined the Boston Mackerel Company, making twenty-nine of the so-called "trust" dealers and only eleven independents.

The independents [illegible] that the "trust" was aimed [illegible] the commission house of [illegible] Nagle & Company, which does a big business at No. [illegible] Atlantic avenue, the big [illegible] building at the head of T wharf. Nagle is also president of the Independent Barrel Company, which was organized at Newport [illegible] to see that all the Boston dealers would have plenty of barrels and ice handy to pack fish whenever a trip came in.

The story goes that the "trust" started not only to freeze out Nagle by not doing any business through him, but also to freeze out the independents by refusing to trade through a commission man who handled any independent trade.

Prices Are Slashed.

The independents say they were fighting tooth and nail to buck the "trust" and to help out Nagle when the latter went over to the "trust," practically joining the Boston Mackerel Company, though the latter is ostensibly [illegible] of dealers alone.

The independents accuse the "trust" buyers of getting control of the T wharf arrivals and of cutting the price of fish down to the fishermen. They claim that the skippers sold with [illegible], fearing that if the "trust" gets control of the business prices will be cut still further, till the [illegible] will have only a large [illegible] where his profits usually figured.

Feeling waxed more and more bitter, the independents declaring the "trust" was using unfair methods, that it was breaking faith with skippers by knocking down contracts [illegible] very independent from the [illegible].

Fish buying got down to bare knuckles, however, on Saturday, June 20, at Newport. Early [illegible]

Fight for Barrels.

John Nagle [illegible] at the Newport end [illegible] business [illegible]. Independents would have commissioned Nagle to attend to their trade. But, as the independents tell it, Nagle had gone over to the Boston Mackerel Company. So it [illegible] largely to [illegible] Newport [illegible] what they wanted.

John Burns, Jr. [illegible] Hub Fish Company, for the independents [illegible] the Newport skippers to hold sales till he could get in. The fishing skipper, it might be explained, is an absolute salesman [illegible] his fish go where he can do the best for himself, his owners and his crew. This [illegible] skipper results in odd situations at times, as will be shown.

Burns arrived at Newport at noon and found that the mackerel fares had been iced and barreled before sales had been closed. The barrels were property of the Independent Barrel Company, which, as has been stated, does not mean the independent fish dealers' organization by any means.

The combination, or "trust," had bid six cents for small mackerel and thirteen cents for large. Burns, for the independents, ran the price up to seven and thirteen and one-half cents, and obtained three trips at those figures. The skippers benefited $600 by the rise.

Refused a Way Bill.

Then representatives of the Independent Barrel Company refused to let the independent fares be shipped in the I. B. C. barrels, on the ground that Burns was not a member.

Freight Agent Gardner refused to give Burns a way bill for his goods, on the ground that the I. B. C. would not release the barrels. Burns did some quick thinking and went back to the I. B. C. men.

"How much to join your crowd?" he asked.

"The [illegible] fee is $100," said John W. Rich, the I. B. C. man, without blinking.

"Put me down," says Burns, drawing $100 from his roll. Seeing that they were "in for it," the I. B. C. took Burns's name and money.

"Now," says Burns, "gimme them barrels."

He went to Freight Agent Gardner and [illegible] for his barrels and fish. There was one hour and a quarter to train time and 487 barrels to load on the cars. It seemed impossible to get the fish loaded. Someone tipped off Burns to the fact that Gardner had once held [illegible] freight for an hour to oblige a [illegible]. When he put that up to Gardner the [illegible] admitted it.

Train Held for Fish.

"Then you'll do it for me, of course?" says Burns. Gardner could not refuse. Burns [illegible] sailors at double time rate [illegible] of the fish, [illegible] the train trucking [illegible] out of them into the car himself. He got the shipment in on time and into Boston that night, ready for the morning market.

Burns came back to Boston that night, leaving Ike Price to pick up for the independents any fares that might come in Sunday. Price secured a promise from Gardner that, if 200 barrels would be shipped, a special Sunday train would be sent [illegible] to Boston that night.

Mackerel came in and, toward afternoon, Price had secured 114 barrels. An odd part of this was that some of this mackerel sold to Price for the independents was brought in by the schooner Pontiac, Captain Enos Nickerson. Now the Pontiac is largely owned by B. F. Phillips & Company, I. B. Goodspeed & Company, Baker, Boise & Washburn, and other dealers in the combine. But Skipper Nickerson, exercising his right to sell where he could do the best, did business with the independents' representative, even though agents of his owners were bidding against them.

Train Chartered by Rival.

Price went to load his fish on the special train, but was suddenly informed that Nagle had chartered the train. It seems that Nagle, as soon as he saw that there would be a good cargo of fish, had chartered the promised special on the quiet.

This left Price high and dry, with fish enough, but no train. Nagle wouldn't let the independent fish aboard the chartered train, so the independents say, though other fish than that handled by Nagle was taken on.

As a result Price had to hold over his fish till the regular Monday night train [illegible] the Monday morning market, which happened to be a high priced one, while the Tuesday market, which the Price fish finally made, was not so good.

A reporter went to Nagle's office. Nagle was in Newport. The reporter was referred to Maurice F. Shaw, of A. Booth & Co., for any information about the Boston Mackerel Company.

Mr. Shaw said he didn't want to talk about the Boston Mackerel Company or the mackerel war.

"The independents," he was told, "say you people are shaving pretty close to the line, especially in regard to railroad discrimination."

To the Fishing Grounds.

The steamer King Philip, Captain Edward Dixon, sails at 10 a. m. every day from Commercial wharf for the deep-sea fishing grounds, where splendid fishing is found.

On to Gloucester.

Rugged Cape Ann and picturesque old Gloucester of codfish fame are conveniently reached by the steel steamer Cape Ann, which gives one a delightful sail along the North Shore and back. Sailings are from Central Wharf.

Breezy Bass Point.

Bass Point boats, sailing from Otis Wharf, No. 408 Atlantic avenue, day and evening, take one on an invigorating harbor ride, with the pleasures of Bass Point awaiting the passenger at the other end of the route.

Recital of "Jeanne D'Arc."

Mrs. Jessie Eldridge Southwick will give a monodramatic recital of Percy Mackaye's romantic drama, "Jeanne D'Arc," in Jordan Hall, Tuesday, June 30, at 4 p. m.

Return Checks.

Some one last week thought to please Miss May Vokes by sending her a collar for her pet dog. The collar came to the comedienne at the Bellevue. The word "Tilly," after Miss Vokes's role in "A Knight for a Day," was handsomely inscribed on a plate attached to the collar. Miss Vokes accepted the gift, but her dog, she says, will never wear it in public. He is not that kind of canine.

Miss Lillian Waters, formerly of the chorus of the stock company at the Palace Theatre, has been advanced by Mr. Waldron to one of the principal parts, and will also have one of the leading roles with the Trocadero company on the road next season.

Chorus Girl's Invention.

Miss Georgia Snyder, one of the Corsican belles of "A Knight for a Day" company at the Tremont, has just sent an application to Washington for patent rights to a portable cot for campers which she has invented. When not in service, the cot looks and may be carried like a stout cane.

The cane is really a chamber within which is a thin steel rod of four sections, [illegible] which is wrapped a pneumatic mattress weighing [illegible] ounces when deflated. Its shape is conserved by sections [illegible] compartments, each of which is inflated independently. The inner rod when separated forms posts, to be sunk into the earth and made supporters of the suspended cot.

"[illegible]nouncement Boys" is the title of a new [illegible] comedy which will open the season at the Colonial Theatre on August 31.

LAWN PARTY TO BE A GALA OCCASION

After many weeks of preparation all arrangements for the annual lawn party of St. Phillips Church, Harrison avenue, to be held on Independence Day on the estate at No. 20 Mount Vernon street, Dorchester, have been completed.

It will be a gala occasion for the parishioners and their friends, and all kinds of amusements have been provided for the entertainment of those who attend.

AMERICAN TO GIVE NEWSBOYS PICNIC

5,000 of Them to Be Royally Entertained on Fourth of July.

AT CALEDONIAN GROVE

Forty Special Cars; Plenty of Lunch; Fine Prizes for Sporting Events.

Who's going to have the biggest Fourth of July?

Answer: The Boston newsboys.

There will be various Independence Day celebrations in Boston next Saturday. But it's certain that none of them will [illegible] circumstance to the field day and general good time which the Hub "newsies" are to have at Caledonian grove as guests of the Boston American.

Every newsboy will be on hand who can get there. The Boston American will not print, of course, on the Fourth of July. There wouldn't be any use, any how, for there wouldn't be a newsboy on the job to sell a paper.

There won't be any youngster too sick to go to the outing, either. The [illegible] "newsie" will get to the outing somehow. Any one too ill to be there will be just too ill to breathe.

How Many? Oh Guess.

How many are going. Well, about four or five thousand and maybe then some.

Never have so many [illegible] boys [illegible] on the same outing. Never in the history of the Boston Elevated Railway, have half so many special cars been chartered for one party. As a starter, the Boston American has arranged for forty special trolleys to take the boys from Park square to the grounds on the banks of the Charles River in West Roxbury. If more cars are needed during the day they will be added.

What newsboys can go? Any newsboy in Boston, Chelsea, Cambridge, South Boston, East Boston, Roxbury, Brighton, Dorchester and Brookline, providing he shows up with his ticket at the starting time and place, Park square at 9 A. M. Saturday next.

Lunch?

Of course there's going to be a lunch. Who ever heard of a [illegible] without a lunch?

The newsboys will obtain these tickets from Nathan S. Sodekson at the Washington street office of the Boston American. Sodekson is treasurer of the Newsboys' Protective Union and is in general charge of the field day arrangements. He has a special field committee of fifty boys to assist him at the grove. It is needless to say that the committee chaps are big boys. Sodekson picked big ones on purpose. In the enthusiasm of a gathering of 5,000 boys it is handy to have a competent committee, one able to secure fair play for all.

Lunch? What do You Think?

It has been arranged, too, to divide the boys into two clases, those fourten or over and boys under fourten. This is so that, in the athletic events, the little shavers won't have to run and jump against big lads, who would beat them to a standstill and get all the fun, prizes and glory.

Well, just imagine the whole bunch safely out at the grove after the forty-five-minute trolley ride from Park square. Anything more doing?

Sports will begin right away and will continue till lunch time at noon. One can see how necessary it is for the boys to get their lunch tickets ahead. There won't be any time to distribute lunch tickets when the lunch hour comes. The committee will have its hands full giving out the grub itself without any more preliminaries than necessary. So get wise, boys, and have your lunch tickets ready, too.

About those sports.

There will be field, track and water sports, running, jumping, swimming and baseball playing.

Have you seen those prizes? If not, take a look in the Boston American window at the Washington street office. Those two big silver cups with gold lining are prizes for the baseball contests, one for the junior and one for the senior teams.

Medals? Sixty of 'Em.

The names of the boys on the winning teams will be engraved on the cups, and then the trophies will be kept in a glass case in the room of the Newsboys' Protective Union to be seen by newsboys for years to come.

There are prize medals, too, twenty gold, twenty silver, twenty bronze. The names of the prize winners will be engraved on the medals, which will then be given to the winners to keep.

Two things, boys—there's going to be plenty of lunch, barrels of it, and don't lose your tickets.

As each boy enters the grove he will receive a lunch ticket, giving up his admission ticket.

TRANSIT BOARD FACES INQUIRY

Tuesday the Finance Commission will have members of the Rapid Transit Commission before them to explain purchases of Washington street property in connection with the building of the new subway. The Rapid Transit Commissioners are charged in a report of a special investigating committee of the Common Council with having been reckless and extravagant in the purchase of sites for underground stations. In one particular case they are charged with having paid more for the basement of a building than the whole block is assessed for. The Common Council, on June 18, and without a dissenting vote, called upon the Finance Commission to investigate, and during the Council's discussion of the matter, several councilmen questioned the official integrity of some members of the Transit Commission. The Finance Commission inquiry promises to be deep and thorough.

KEITH TO RECEIVE WOMEN DELEGATES

A reception will be given to the delegates of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, at the Boston Theatre, by B. F. Keith, tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock.

John Colby Abbott will give an entertaining talk, illustrated by Le Grande Pandore, the life sized adaptation of the famous eighteenth century fashion doll, which was one of the features of the society vaudeville given at the Boston Theatre a few weeks ago.

Invitations were sent out a few days ago, and the number of aceptances would indicate that this lecture will be one of the most unique and memorial features of the biennial.

Who Is the Next Millionaire Governor to Rule Vermont?

Burlington, Vt., June 27.—Who's the next millionaire to be Governor of Vermont? Speak lively, for 1910.

The choice for 1908 has been narrowed down to two. Here in Burlington, on Tuesday, the machine made State Convention will say whether it's to be George H. Prouty of Newport or Zed S. Stanton of Roxbury. At a late hour to-night the campaign was still costing each of them a fine bit of money.

After Tuesday it will be all over but the shouting, they say. The Democratic leaders have seen to that. The Democratic leaders have put up for Governor an honest man lest their already weak-jointed party will be rent in twain.

The prophets say that James E. Burke, seven times a candidate and four times mayor of Burlington, will get what Felix W. McGettrick got in 1902. That was 7,364 votes. Felix McGettrick's silver tongue had been preaching the old fashioned Democracy up and down the hills for a generation. When they dumped the 7,364 votes in his hat, Mr. McGettrick threw a few things in a suit case and went away from here. He is now an assistant district attorney on the staff of John B. Moran of Boston.

Why in Brad Smalley's Democratic State convention yesterday, did they name Jim Burke, blacksmith, sixty years old, for Governor? Did anybody fear that Lieutenant Governor George H. Prouty of Newport might need such a guarantee as the State election in September?

"As Goes Vermont," Etc.

Did the interests have in mind the national election and the old, old saying, "As goes Vermont, so goes the Union?"

The meaning of that old saying, of course, is that the rise or fall of Republican majorities in the State election up here, first of all State elections, augurs weal or augurs woe to the G. O. P. two months later. Was Burke's nomination a first aid to Chance?

These are some of the questions that men are asking each other to-night in all the large communities of the Green Mountain State. Democrats are abashed; Republicans indignant. Independence party men are almost jubilant.

"It was rough work," says ex-Mayor John D. Spellman of Rutland, one of the leading Independents. "I hope they keep it up. It won't take but a little more to get Vermonters thinking seriously about their politics and their politicians. Then, look out!"

Nobody blames the blacksmith Mayor. Mr. Burke simply happened to stand in front of the well known and highly popular fruit stand of Smalley, Bullard & Browne, and the yellow fruit was slipped into his hip pocket when he wasn't looking.

What Frightened Republicans?

"What was it that frightened the Republicans"? men are also asking.

Not Percival W. Clement?

It cannot be the Rutland Independent, who turned things almost upside down in 1902, and repeated in 1906, has "come as silent as the monk in cloister."

And yet? Who knows?

In 1902 Clement gave the Republican machine the scare of its life. The millionaire who pulled off the nomination that year was McCullough of Bennington—Bennington in the glorious Summer season and Park avenue, New York, when it snows.

McCullough got 31,864 votes, and Clement, Independent, 28,201. Clement actually got more votes than he polled two years ago, when Democrats wrenched from the unwilling hands of their machine a begrudged "nomination" of the Rutland man and then saw the machine go out and knife him. Result: Proctor—one of the Proctors—42,332; Clement, 26,912, or 1,289 less than his vote when the Democratic machine of Vermont was with him. (?)

Zed S. Stanton of Roxbury, who insists that he will be in the race for Tuesday's Republican nomination until the votes are counted, was Lieutenant Governor from 1902 to 1904 under McCullough. Prouty of Newport is the present Lieutenant Governor. He says he'll have at least 457 out of 736 delegates.

No Choice of Delegates.

The Republicans of Burlington, the largest in Vermont, have had no voice in preparing for the Prouty-Stanton contest. They have had no choice of delegates.

Because they abhor party contests of this sort the Burlington proprietors of the Republican party, otherwise known as the 'committee,' got together and harmoniously decided that Prouty should have nine and Stanton eight of the Burlington delegates. The Burlington list of seventeen was thereupon drawn up in conformity with the wishes of Prouty and Stanton managers.

"Quite the rawest thing," says P. J. McCarthy, of Barre, "that I have ever known, even in Vermont politics."

Even the party press is in open rebellion. Thus the Burlington News calls it "a smothered caucus," and "before the delivery of the goods" raises its "most solemn protest." The News speaks of a "few of the owners of the party" and of carying the voters "in their pocket."

McKinley	42,569
Bryan	12,849
1904.
Parker	9,777

Only this week, for instance, the honorable Board of Railroad Commissioners cleared its pigeonhole of some death cases. Four killed upon the Vermont railroad tracks, but "no blame attaches to the railroad." One was a tramp. "No blame." One, a girl of fourteen. "No blame." One, a young passenger brakeman, who climbed under a waiting train at the order of his superiors. An engine backed in and killed him. "No blame." The Railroad Commission is "in right" with the machines. The people of Vermont never get a crack at it.

Who Gets Postoffices?

"If we beat Taft, who gets the Postoffices?"

They said so right out in meeting. Alleged reformers, and near-reformers and not-quite reformers had harsh things to say about certain parties in Vermont, who are never to be found in a Democratic gathering except when they "scent a national victory." Everybody acted as if a convention settles everything and the election which follows it don't amount to anything.

James E. Burke of Burlington, for instance, who knew he was slated for the Governorship, and young, chubby faced G. Herbert Pape of Barre, a Vermont auxiliary president of the Bryan-George Fred Williams "New England Progressive Democratic League," were out on the floor taking sides about the Denver delegation and calling names with the best of them.

Pape was in favor of James E. Burke of Rutland as against John J. Thompson of St. Albans. Pape said that in the fight two years ago, under the Clement banner, "Rutland Jim" remained on the firing line.

PETERMAN'S ROACH FOOD

Sure Death to Roaches.

ROACH FOOD DID IT

Is made so strong if the full contents of a box are applied well in crevices at one time it will rid a house of roaches in one night. To feed them is the only method to rid a house permanently.

The merit of this food has reached, through recommendation, to the tropical countries, where it is largely sold and very effective in destroying the large species found in those parts.

MOTORMEN MAY RUN CAR WHILE SEATED

Hope Experiment Being Tried on Norfolk St. Line Will Be Acceptable.

Motormen on the Norfolk street, Dorchester, cars are testing an experiment in electric car equipment that, if acceptable, will prove a boon to their fellow employes on other lines. The improvement is a seat upon which the motorman can sit and operate his car.

It is understood that the seat for the motorman is being tried as an experiment only on the Norfolk street line, and if it proves successful the cars of the entire Elevated system will be equipped with the seats.

Motormen who have tried the seats are unanimous in their praise. They consider them as meeting a long desired improvement.

Summer Is Short Story Time

THE July number of COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE is a short story magazine—besides being all the other kinds that a great general magazine should be. Among the unusual stories which dot this splendid number are:

"The Wonders of the Deep"
By Gertrude Pahlow

How SHE was supposed to be scientifically interested in fish. How HE accordingly talked fish morning, noon and night, until he was told that "An over-elaborated fish course may spoil a very good dinner." Whereupon all his troubles were over.

"Filippo"
By Raymond MacDonald Alden

A colorful story of California and of the doctor who once played Providence down in the coast country, between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

"The Sin Buyer"
By Bruno Lessing

Young Yankel needed a thousand dollars on which to get married—and got it, in a very curious way known only to his people. One of Lessing's most achingly funny stories.

"The Hand of Life"
By Lucia Chamberlain

"Why I Wrote Sally Ann's Experience"
By Eliza Calvert Hall

On the tenth anniversary of the first publication of this remarkable short story in COSMOPOLITAN (reprinted in full in this issue) the author tells how and why she came to write it. This is the story which President Roosevelt recently recommended "as a tract in all families where the men folks tend to selfish or thoughtless or overbearing disregard of the rights of their womenkind."

All these and more like them make memorable this

SHAH DECLARES AN AMNESTY; OUSTS PARLIAMENT.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Teheran, Persia, June 27.—The Shah has declared an amnesty, Parliament has been dissolved, new elections ordered to be held three months hence, and a cessation of hostilities effected.

Teheran is to-day practically quiet. Disorders continue, however, in towns along the Russian frontier, here the revolutionary forces are attacking the Shah's troops.

In the British Legation there is N. Takizadeh of Tabriz, one of the best and most educated speakers of Parliament, whom the Shah desires especially to arrest. The Shah caused the legation to be surrounded by a company of Cossacks, and they examined carefully every person who tried to leave the legation.

England's Ultimatum.

The British minister, who previously had assured the Shah that the right of asylum would be granted only in cases of extreme danger to life, sent his government's protest against such serveillance as an unprecedented insult and demanded the withdrawal of the Cossacks. The amnesty ended the surveillance.

All of the legations with the exception of the German and the American have received refugees.

The situation here is steadily improving. The bazaars are reopening and troops to-day are camped on the streets. The population is orderly and quiet.

Several foreigners were wounded or lost property during the recent disorders. The British and the Russian diplomatic representatives have made representations on this matter to the Shah, and His Majesty has promised reimbursement for all damages sustained by foreigners.

Prince Restores Order.

The latest news from Tabriz indicates that a renewal of the fighting is imminent. The revolutionists are short of ammunition, and the supporters of the Shah are pressing their advantage.

Prince Meld ed Dowleh, who has been appointed Governor-General of Teheran, is gradually restoring order. There was no disturbance last night or to-day. Patrols of Persian Cossacks suppress all attempts at demonstration and are systematically disarming the people.

20,000 TO HONOR POPE'S JUBILEE

Disorder Among Anti-Clericals Dreaded at July 5 Fete in Rome.

Rome, June 27.—Twenty thousand persons are expected to participate in the demonstration arranged for July 5 in honor of the Pope's sacerdotal jubilee.

So vast a crowd is promised that Prince Rospigliosi, who has the affair in charge, is fearful of disorder by the anti-clerical agitators.

Perosi, the composer, is training a chorus of 800 voices to chant the hymn he has composed for the occasion.

SUFFRAGETTES TO STORM COMMONS

London, June 27.—The Suffragettes announce that the House of Commons is to be beset on Tuesday "with a cordon of men and women numbering anything from one hundred thousand upward." The object of the gathering is to impress on Premier Asquith the strength of the movement.

J. J. HILL GIVES UP PARIS APARTMENTS

Paris, June 27.—James J. Hill has given up his apartment in the Champs Elysees, which during nine years of his tenancy has rarely been occupied more than five weeks at a time. A small staff of servants has been kept on and the family comes over occasionally. But the son's children do not like the Paris apartment.

REBEL ESCAPES POLICE.

Lima, Peru, June 27.—Owing to the escape of Augusto Durand, the leader in the recent unsuccessful revolutionary uprising against the Peruvian Government, the police authorities at Lima and Callao have been deposed from office and other officials appointed in their place.

MEXICO'S RULER TO VISIT LONDON

London, June 27.—London will have another ruler of a nation as a visitor in a few weeks. It is learned on very good authority that an invitation to visit England has been sent by King Edward to President Dia of Mexico. It is stated on excellent authority from a Mexican source that President Diaz will accept the invitation.

This acceptance, however, has not yet been forwarded to King Edward, but probably will be in a few days.

President Diaz will be accompanied by Senorita Diaz, who, as Americans know, was educated in the United States, England and France and speaks English quite as fluently as Spanish. Also Don Porfirio, the President's son, will accompany his father, and in all probability several other distinguished Mexicans who hold high positions in the Mexican government or army.

The Mexican exhibition at the Crystal Palace is the reason for President Diaz's proposed visit to London. Interest in this forthcoming exhibition seems to be increasing every day, and England apparently is establishing another entente cordiale, not especially in a diplomatic way, but more in a business line.

NEW YORK TO SEE 3 BRITISH STARS

London, June 27.—Three English theatrical stars who are new to New York will be seen there next season. They are Constance Collier, Gertie Millar and Alexandra Carlisle, representing respectively drama, musical comedy and "straight" comedy. All three have been engaged by Charles Frohman in his system of interchange between London and New York.

Constance Collier is a fine, statuesque woman, who is best in powerful drama and heavy Shakespearean roles like Cleopatra. She has been Beerbohm Tree's leading woman at his Majesty's and has also starred at Drury Lane.

Alexandra Carlisle, who was unknown to playgoers three years ago, has had a meteoric career of success. Pretty and graceful, she has a fascinating style of acting. Her latest success was as Portia to Beerbohm Tree's Srylock.

"DODO" FAWNS ON SALOME DANCER

London, June 27.—The activities of Mrs. Asquith, wife of the premier, but better known generally as "Dodo," have become gossip of official and social London. Since the elevation of her husband to the head of the cabinet she has been irrepressible, and the premier has had his hands full trying to keep her in check.

Mrs. Asquith's latest faux pas for a Liberal minister's wife has been her patronage of Maud Allen, the young woman who both electrified and horrified London with her Salome dance. As most of the Liberal party is non-conformist, Mr. Asquith's constituents are properly shocked at his wife's goings on in regard to the dancer.

"Dodo" not only invites Miss Allen to the premier's house to dinners, receptions and parties of every sort, but "Dodo" [illegible] plays the warmest affection for the young woman.

It is remarked that she is received with far greater cordiality at the premier's residence than the wives of Liberals high in their party's councils.

Tells State Secrets.

"Dodo" fancies that Asquith's success is really due to her influence and coaching and she is [illegible] expatiating at any dinner table [illegible] majority are bitter political [illegible] of her husband how she proposes to improve the personnel of the ministry.

A month ago she decreed that Lord Chancellor Loreburn should resign to make way for her great family friend Haldane, who, though War Minister, is really a lawyer and aspires to [illegible] the woolsack. Loreburn, who might have retired voluntarily at the end of the session, has now issued a statement that he has no intention of resigning.

Then, too, "Dodo" disapproves of Sir Samuel Evans as Solicitor General. He and his wife, who was Blanche Rule of Cincinnati, don't belong to her set and "Dodo" wishes Rufus Isaacs, leader of the English common law bar, to have the job. Evans accordingly is being pressed to terminate his political career by accepting a judgeship, which naturally he is not disposed to do, but the question is whether he can afford to fight "Dodo."

Oh, How Shocking!

"Dodo's" infatuation about Maud Allen, which she parades so conspicuously, is considered highly undignified. Mrs. Asquith's own smart friends all swarmed around the dancer, and Liberal ladies were petrified with amazement when they say the young Duchess of Westminster salute Miss Allen with an affectionate kiss. But the Duchess is one of the dancer's warmest devotees. At Ascot she left the royal inclosure and sat on the lawn with her arm almost around Miss Maud's neck.

Miss Allen accepts her position with perfect aplomb. It is magnificent business for her. Every night two rows of stalls are taken at the Palace Theatre by her smart women admirers, the pioneers of modernity in English society, led by Mrs. Asquith.

TROOPS ON TRAIL OF FILIPINO SLAYERS

Determined to Run Down Wild Hill Men Who Murdered Americans.

Manila, June 27.—Troops have started on the trail of the hillmen who slew H. D. Everett of the Philippine forest service and Theodore W. Wakeley, a school teacher on the island of Negros. Wakeley and Everett, with their servants and two native foresters started from the town of Cabancalan on the mountainous island of Negros, in the early part of May, intending to examine the coal deposits in the hills about Mount Tipasi. To do this they left the beaten trail across the island and since their departure from Cabancalan nothing has been heard of them.

Officials of the town of Bios, on the same island, report that the party was assailed in the hills by the wild tribes and murdered, and, moreover, they claim to know the identity of the murderers. Beyond this statement they give no details of the tragedy.

Forester A. Hearn of Manila has started for the scene of the murder, where he will join forces with the constabulary in going over the trail and adjacent country in the hope of finding the bodies of the murdered men and tracing down and arresting the murderers. The constabulary force on the island has already established camps along the trail to facilitate the search.

POPE PIUS SENDS BACK PRESENTS TO AUSTRIA

Churches of that Country Need Them More, Prelate Declares.

Rome, June 27.—"Very beautiful, ladies, I admire your diligence and taste and approve of your unbounded generosity, but I beg of you to take these presents back to Austria, and distribute them among churches in need of ornaments. I have enough for a simple old man."

So spoke Pope Pius to the deputation of Austrian noblewomen bringing presents to commemorate the Holy Father's fiftieth anniversary as a priest.

The ladies, among them Princess Windisch Graetz, Emperor Francis Joseph's granddaughter, were disappointed, but the Pope talked so kindly to them that they forgot their chagrin, and promised to furnish a list of the religious institutions to which the jubilee gifts were to be sent.

FRANCE TO HAVE MOTOR BUREAU

Paris, July 27.—The government has decided to call an international conference in Paris with the object of establishing regulations to facilitate automobile travel in Europe. This conference will meet simultaneously with the International Road Congress.

FEAR NICHOLAS IS BECOMING INSANE

PRACTICALLY IMPRISONED

By Raoul de Saint Rene.

Paris, June 27.—Fear that the Czar is in danger of going insane and not any special desire on his own part is said here to be the real reason why Emperor Nicholas is to leave Russia for a series of visits to Vienna, Rome and Paris.

The Czar is known in Russia now as "Nicholas the Lonesome," and the many months of virtual imprisonment at Czarskoe Selo, interrupted only by his short visit to Reval, have played havoc with the mental condition of the unhappy ruler, who lives in constant fear of death, though he has no [illegible] to live [illegible] for love of his wife and children.

How great is the fear of nihilistic plots at the Czar's court is seen by the fact that the little town of Czarskoe Selo is [illegible] upon by 1,500 police agents, that is to say there is more than one to each house, and besides there are more than 400 detectives guarding the Imperial Palace as [illegible] from the army guards.

Sees Only Grand Dukes.

The telephone service between Czarskoe Selo and St. Petersburg is under constant surveillance, and every conversation is written down and submitted to the chief of the Secret Service, General Dedulin, who also opens every letter and reads every postal card which arrives at the postoffice.

The Czar himself is indeed a lonesome man. With the exception of the Grand Dukes Peter Nicholaevitch and Nicholas Nicholajevitch he sees no relatives. He has not a single confidential friend. His life is, aside from military parades and official audiences, far more secluded than formerly.

The Czar speaks with Stolypin about domestic politics, in which he is much more interested than before, but he never speaks out his mind.

Studies Duma Proceedings.

A short time ago the court camarilla was greatly worried because Czar Nicholas had a private conversation lasting for more than two hours with the president of the Duma, Chomjakoff. The court dislikes Chomjakoff, in whom many see the "coming man," and everything is being done to isolate the Czar even more than at present.

Very much against his usual habit Nicholas stays up late nights. He spends much time reading, and studies every word of the stenographic reports of the proceedings of the Duma. At midnight every night he is called up on the telephone by [illegible] who reads to him over the phone long secret reports, and it is, as a rule, after 2 before the Czar retires.

HUB MAGNATE IS RECOGNIZED COUNT

London, June 27.—Count Reginald Henshaw Ward, who more than twenty years ago began business in Boston as a capitalist, later headed New York and European houses, has been officially recognized as a "Count" by King Edward's Lord Chamberlain.

That settles the Count's title so far as England and the Court is concerned. The former Boston copper magnate has just been issued as ticket to the King's levee, and the ticket bore the title "Count," which Reginald Ward received from the Pope. Persons bearing titles granted by European courts and the Vatican are not enabled to use these distinctions here in England unless the Lord Chamberlain, the King's social manager, chooses to recognize them in his official invitations to functions given by the King.

Count Ward's title is now safe so far as England is concerned, and all the rest of the world has recognized it.

BELGIAN GIRLS GIVE FETE TO BACHELORS

Brussels, June 27.—Every Summer the unmarried girls of Ecaussines, a little Belgian country town, invite bachelors to a fete, the object of which is to encourage matrimony. This year the maidens extended a general invitation to "the bachelors of the world," with the result that there was a record attendance of 5,000 eligible men and 15,000 of the general public.

The girls gave the young men an effusive welcome, taking them through the town, which was gaily decorated, and entertaining them to an al fresco lunch. A good crop of marriages will result from the fetes.

ANDREW MACK HEARD HIS SONG PLAGIARIZED

London, June 27.—Andrew Mack, the Irish singing comedian, who has been resting in London since his return from Australia, received a jolt when he visited a London music hall. A comedian was singing a new popular song called "Waiting for Me," with a refrain that set the audience beating time with their feet and joining in the chorus.

Mack was disgusted. The song, save for one slight change, was identical with his own composition, "Freedom for Ireland," which he wrote over ten years ago.

American Society Queens in Rivalry For Royalty's Favor

Mrs. John Jacob Astor, who has seized society leadership in London from Mrs. Potter Palmer.

Special Cable to Boston American.

London, June 27.—While there is no ill feeling between Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mrs. J. J. Astor for social leadership, to the wealthy American colony of London it is obvious that there is a sharp rivalry and that the New Yorker is [illegible] in a shorter period greater social distinction.

Mrs. Astor has not yet achieved the happiness of entertaining the King and Queen at her own table, like Mrs. Palmer, but it is on the tapis that she will have that honor before long.

Mrs. Palmer has been cultivating the royal and aristocratic society of London for several years. Mrs. Astor began to manifest her ambition to shine as a London hostess only two years ago. Since then her progress has been rapid.

Eclipse Older Set.

Both Mrs. Palmer and Mrs. Astor have eclipsed the older set of American leaders. In aristocratic English society none of the older leaders seem to care about [illegible] to compete in the race where splendid dinners and balls are [illegible] with royalty present. The leaders of other days now give small dinners and small audiences.

In Merry Widow Hat.

Mrs. Henry Coventry, formerly Miss McCreery, seems happy in her new social position. She is invited everywhere. She was at the Londesborough's party, wearing an extraordinary big hat decorated with five huge ostrich feathers. Lady Bateman, formerly Miss Knapp, wore a merry widow hat.

Mr. Marshall Field, Jr., who goes everywhere nowadays, attracted much attention. Everybody whispered she is the mother of the richest boys in the world. The A. J. Drexels have not yet given any notable entertainments.

It is expected that young Mrs. Waldorf Astor will become a conspicuous entertainer next season. During the present season she is making a host of new and distinguished acquaintances.

Mrs. John Mackay of California has reopened her mansion at Carlton House terrace for the first time in two years since the death of her mother. She gave a dinner Thursday to a distinguished company including the Earl and Countess of Oxford.

Paris, June 27.—François Peyrey of the Aero Club of Paris, the [illegible] authority on aeroplanes, says that the Wright brothers will break all records in their projected flight at Le Mans.

This statement has caused a good deal of jealousy on the part of some French aeronauts in regard to the pretensions of the Wrights, but Farman, Peyrey and others are lending all their influence for a fair trial.

Special interest at the moment lies in the statements that the Wrights will try for the Quinto prize of $2,000 destined to the first aviator which can sustain itself in the air for five minutes without descending more than fifty yards, the motor being stopped.

Marcel Desprez of the Institute showed yesterday a platinum model of a tiny aeroplane which fulfilled all these conditions when tested in his laboratory. In principle it is wholly akin to the gliding machine of the Wright Brothers. Every precaution will be taken to guard the race track at Le Mans, where Wilbur Wright expects to make his first flight. The public will be entirely excluded from the track, but stands will be erected at numerous vantage points nearby for spectators.

London, June 27.—Sir Genille Cave-Brown-Cave, the "cowboy baronet" who has just returned from the Western States on inheriting the title, has made a brief, reminiscent return to the (tanbark) prairie at a Wild West show.

While visiting Liverpool Sir Genille met two of his cowboy chums, who were with Colonel Cummins's Wild West Show at New Brighton, the Coney Island of Liverpool. They and Frank Small, the Tody Hamilton of England, persuaded him to put on once again the cowboy togs and ride a mustang in the arena.

Olga Nethersole Cancels Engagement For London Season

Will Tour France and Spain This Summer on Pleasure Excursion.

Paris, June 27.—Olga Nethersole gave a farewell to a number of friends in the tea garden of the Hotel Ritz Thursday. The actress left the next day for Biarritz, having cancelled her season in London. Her reason for taking such action was not ill health, but the desire to take an excursion in the south of France, possibly extending into Spain.

In the Autumn Miss Nethersole opens for a long tour in Europe, which will extend from Rome to St. Petersburg, and take her as far east as Constantinople. She will play Sapho, Carmen, Camille and other familiar pieces in her repertoire. She does not think she will be able to go back to the United States for some time.

Music of Royalty Made Up Program of Miss Lorraine

London, June 27.—Royal compositions formed the entire programme at a song recital given in London by Miss Alys Lorraine. Every song she sang had been composed by an emperor, king, queen, prince, princess or reigning duke, ranging in date from Henry VIII. to the present Kaiser Wilhelm.

Three songs composed by "Bluff King Hal" opened the concert, followed by one by Charles I. Then Miss Lorraine sang a Cavatina by King Anthony the Good of Saxony, a song by his relative, Princess Luisa, a song by Henri of Navarre and one by Marie Antoinette.

The German Emperor's "Sang an Aegir" began the second part, which also included two compositions of Duke Ernst II. of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, and three works by his brother, the Prince Consort of England. Miss Lorraine ended the recital with four ballads composed by Princess Henry of Battenberg.

DUTCH GIVE ORDERS FOR SLAUGHTER OF ACHINESE.

The Hague, Netherlands, June 27.—Convinced that only a wholesale slaughter of the natives will end the war that the Dutch have been waging intermittently for 34 years against the Achinese in North and West Sumatra, the States General has ordered Colonel Swart to surrender temporarily his governorship of the island of Celebes, in the Malay Archipelago, hasten to Acheen and establish order at any cost.

Practically unknown to the world, fighting has raged for more than a third of a century.

Governor Van Daalen's recent surrender of the command there on the ground that he was sick of hopeless warfare, brought the matter sharply to the States General's attention. Governor Van Heutz, who suppressed rebel activity for a few months 11 years ago was called upon for a report.

His report is known to have handled the Dutch colonial policy with small ceremony. He attributes the trouble to niggardliness. The recent abandonment of the effort to pacify the Achinese by peaceful methods he says would have been commendable but for the fact that it has not been vigorously carried out.

Unable, owing to their numerical inferiority, to hold prisoners, these officers say that it has been the custom to kill the natives that fell into the hands of [illegible] flying column.

London, June 27.—Sir John Pepys Lister-Kaye has been appointed groom-in-waiting to the King, to take the place of the late Sir Condie Stephen, so that his wife, who was Miss Natica Yzange del Valle of Louisiana, will not be added to the list of American women whose husbands hold court offices.

The Hon. Mrs. Ward, who was Miss Jean Reid, the Duchess of Marlborough and the Duchess of Roxburghe—whose husbands hold hereditary court offices—and Lady Maxwell, who was Miss Bonynge of San Francisco, and whose husband is attached to the household of the Duke of Connaught, are some of the notable names on the list.

Sir John Lister-Kaye has always been a favorite with the King, and Lady Lister-Kaye for a long time has been a member of the King's set, but henceforth Sir John will be in close attendance on his Majesty with regular intervals for leave.

There are seven grooms-in-waiting, the most hard worked of the number being the Hon. Sidney Greville, Lord Warwick's brother, who occupies a double position, being Queen Alexandra's private secretary as well as groom-in-waiting. The four extra grooms-in-waiting are all elderly men and their duties are merely nominal, nor are they expected to accompany the King on his many travels.

POPE PLANS TO VISIT NAUHEIM

Nauheim, June 27.—The report is current here to the effect that the Pope has been advised to go to Nauheim in July and that already one of the leading physicians has been approached in view of the coming visit, and has said there are formidable difficulties in the way of finding a secluded residence.

RIDES FOR PRIZE, GOES T[illegible]

Madrid, [illegible]—At the Barcelona Horse Show, in the competition for the grand prize Senor O'Shea, lieutenant of Dragoons, was killed. When jumping over an obstacle his horse slipped [illegible] on his rider, who died instantly. [illegible] was suspended and the people dispersed, greatly grieved. The deceased lieutenant belonged to a prominent Spanish family of Irish origin.

DEADLY WEAPON USED IN DREYFUS ATTACK

Paris, June 27.—The police have finished their investigation into the shooting of Major Dreyfus on June 4 by M. Gregori, convincing themselves that the revolver used by Gregori was capable of inflicting a death wound.

The Absolute Safety of Land Investment

ought to strongly appeal to people looking about to safely and intelligently invest their hard earned money—not even a savings bank or bonds offer the surety that does a good land proposition. When you invest your money in mining, oil, industrial and commercial schemes that you know nothing about and probably never will, you are taking awful chances—and your money is gone forever. When you buy Charles River Heights land, joining the Big City of Boston—one of the largest and best cities in the United States—you can see what you buy, you can have your ownership and absolute title legally recorded and guaranteed by the State of Massachusetts. Nobody can take your land away from you or mismanage it or depreciate it. It's yours and yours forever, and every day makes it more valuable. When you like you can sell it for a profit or build your home on it and put what you now pay for rent into more good land and make money.

ALL IMPROVEMENTS.

Such opportunities do not come every day, but when they do come they are good and pay for years of waiting. It pays to buy good real estate and wait for the right time to sell. If you cannot invest a large amount, invest what you can afford. Some of our customers have made handsome profits from only small investments.

In reply to your inquiry as to my investments and the treatment which I received from your Trust, I will say that I believe it would be very difficult to find another Real Estate Trust in this state which puts itself out in order to make a profit for its customers as you have done.

Within the past year I bought from you three different house lots, and I am pleased to say that I have sold every one of them within a very short time at a good profit to me. I bought two house lots from you on May 11th, 1907, and on May 29th, 1907 only eighteen days afterwards—sold both of them through the efforts of your Sales Department at an advanced price showing me a profit of 50% on the cost of the lots.

On May 16th I bought another lot from you, and after holding this one seven months I sold it through your Sales Department at a price showing me a profit of 127% on the total amount of money I invested.

Before investing my money with you I carefully examined into the proposition and then placed full confidence in your advice. My confidence has since been well rewarded by the handsome profit which you have helped me to make. I realize now more than ever that an investment in good real estate purchased from a reliable concern shows many times the amount of interest that one gets by depositing money in the banks. As soon as you have your new lots ready to sell please let me know, as my success in this line has been so satisfactory that I am very anxious to make another good investment with you.

A FEW reasons why we are able to give better values than many dealers. First, our long experience constitutes us good judges of liquors, which insures good quality; second, we buy only direct from best distilleries and wineries in large quantities, which secures lowest prices; third, we have no losses to make up for, through salesmen or credit sales, all our business being strictly cash; and, fourth, our expenses are small in proportion to our business. Send us a trial order and be convinced.

THE HOUSE OF BEST VALUES

CHATS ON WHISKEY.

BY STERNE BROS.—No. 10.

It is not good judgment on your part to pay a low price for a cheap quality whiskey when you can get a superior whiskey at a low price. If our whiskey, Sterne's Extra, was not what we represent it to be, we would waste no time or money advertising it. We expect to do lots of business with you in the future if you send us your first order. Sterne's Extra whiskey sells itself after you try it once. Remember, we are a big, responsible house, and would push only our best articles, consequently you may rely absolutely on what we say about Sterne's Extra whiskey. When we say that it is the regular $4 a gallon quality, please believe us. We will send you 4 full qts. for $2.85 and pay the express. We do this for the sole purpose of advertising our house and becoming acquainted with you, hoping to make you a regular customer.

BOSTON AUTO SCHOOL

343 Tremont St., Boston

26 Market Sq., Prov., R. I.

WANTED—Young men for all kinds of work on board the vessels comprising the big fleets of the United States Navy; do you want to see some of the world and at the same time save more money than most men do working at home?

Do you want a liberal employer, who encourages recreation and study, who gives you a chance to fit yourself for a better position and advances you as soon as you are competent?

Your pay begins when you enter the service—board, lodging, medical attendance if sick and a sixty-dollar uniform outfit, all are free. A trade means better pay to begin and quicker promotion. Musicians have the same advantage.

If accepted, you get a steady job, a chance to become manly and self-controlled. You will be sent to sea, probably on board one of the big new war vessels.

Ask anyone in the Navy, or send for free book, illustrated in colors, which tells in detail all about the life in the Navy—the useful things you learn; also about the cruises, the drills, the sports. This book tells about the number of working hours and the regular half-days off. It also tells what you want to know about the wages paid, the promotions given, etc.

Send postal for it to the BUREAU OF NAVIGATION, Navy Department, Washington. Or get all the books about the navy at the Navy Recruiting Station, 66 Hanover st., Boston, Mass.

MAKE $30 TO $45 A WEEK

EASY, quick; men, women; all or spare time; showing, taking orders, appointing agents; experience unnecessary; B. H. Huested of Mich., writes: "Sold 11 one day;" Geo. Robinson of Maine: "Am delighted, so are friends; took 12 orders three days;" Ed. Wilson: "Sold 5 first day;" Geo. Halman: "Already have 70 orders;" this patent new—nothing else like it; two sales a day makes $30 to $45 profit weekly; most wonderful low priced valveless, wickless, oil-gas and air-burning stove ever invented; consumes 395 barrels of air to one gallon kerosene oil; saves one-third to one-half on fuel bills; not like those sold in stores; burns like gas, blue flame; no wick, no valve; no more hot fiery kitchens; Wm. Stevens of Mass., writes: "Best stove out; no smoke, easily operated, perfectly safe;" not dangerous like gasolene; enormous demand; where operated causes excitement; people stop, look, 10 to 8 buy; 30-day trial offer; all sizes; price $3.25 and up; get in early for territory; write to-day; this won't appear again. ☞ THE TAG That Tells THE TALE

ROXBURY STORAGE Salesroom SACRIFICE TAG

Monday, June 29
COST $325 SELL AT $75.

We guarantee the above saving on the best known pianos and we will have many of them on our selling floor this week. We seriously advise your very early attendance at our Sacrifice Piano Sales this week, beginning Monday. We have the entire stock of high-grade pianos of several small dealers, who were forced to the wall by the Piano Trust. They were sent to us to sacrifice, and will be sold to you at prices that mean saving from $100 to $300 on each instrument, and we assure you that the different lots contained some of the finest pianos made in America. Many of these high grade instruments have exquisitely carved cases, the carving of which cost much more than the price which we have placed on our Sacrifice Tag. Remember this is no auction—there is no bidding up the prices of pianos here, no one competes with you to buy any piano. Your early attendance and good judgment of a piano is what helps you get a fine bargain.

$5 Down—$1 a Week The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

"HIDDEN—NOT LOST"

Lucky Young Married Man Plans to Build on Property Given by American.

Walter Sinclair, a young business man from Cleveland, met Madame Alvarez, a beautiful and mysterious woman, in Boston. He found that she was trying to elude pursuers who were intent upon doing her an injury. They hired a red car and an expert chauffeur and went about the city. They found themselves pursued by three men and a woman in a green car.

The green car whizzed by and the woman in it shouted something in a tongue that Sinclair did not understand. Then Madame Alvarez took a jewelled box from a package and removed something from it. A rough looking man, creeping out of the darkness, approached her with a levelled revolver. When the man saw who the woman was he fell on his knees and kissed the hem of her dress.

Madame Alvarez gave Sinclair the package from which she had removed the box, and told him to keep it until she called for it. If she never did that he was to retain it all his life and have it buried with him. She said that in case the box contained what was worth more than half of Boston. The strange woman then left Sinclair to hide the jewelled box. She returned and found Sinclair and the chauffeur dozing in the auto.

Sinclair and Madame Alvarez rode to a railway station in the red automobile. As the car stopped the woman took a sealed envelope from her bosom and gave it to Sinclair. She said the contents would throw some light on the mystery in which he had become a figure. Just as the train started a woman in black and two men ran into the station, crying out: "Stop that woman—she is an escaped lunatic!"

CHAPTER IX.

THE police! That was the first thought which crossed Sinclair's brain when he heard the outcry and saw the two men and the woman bearing down on him. Madame Alvarez stood transfixed on the steps of the car as if undecided what to do. He looked questioningly at her, but she was looking at the approaching trio and gave no sign of what she would have him do.

As they drew nearer Sinclair recognized the foremost of the trio as the man with the chimney pot hat whom he had last seen peering from the side of a musty racing cab. And the panting woman in the rear—surely unless his eyes deceived him she was the one who had jumped out of the alley to ask him if he had not received a white rose. The three were all now shouting frantically at the top of their voices.

By this time Sinclair had begun to think his nerves immune from shock, but they received another severe one when he grasped the full meaning of these words. Was this, then, the explanation of all the mystery? Had he for twelve hours been like a fool obeying the capricious whims of a dangerous maniac? What should he do now—drag her from the train and deliver over to her pursuers?

He looked at her again. She was deadly pale and save for a nervous twitching of her lips was as calm and self-possessed as ever. Certainly she did not look a lunatic, yet for all he knew she might be a homicidal maniac and if he let her go the blood of many men and women might be on his head. It was a distracting dilemma.

All these thoughts raced through his brain in less time than it takes to tell. The train was now in motion, with Madame Alvarez clinging to the railing of the rear platform of the last car. The breathless men and their woman companion were less than a hundred feet away. At their headlong pace there was time, unless he prevented, for them to catch the train.

As if she divined his quandary Madame Alvarez looked down at him for the first time since her pursuers had appeared. Appealingly she stretched out her arms to him and in that rich voice which he liked so well to hear she pleaded:

"Trust me, for God's sake, trust me, and don't let those people get aboard this train.

Gets Into Action.

Sinclair could not resist that appeal. Maniac or no maniac, the woman should give her pursuers the slip as she desired. His mind moved quickly, for the trio were close upon him, and there was not a second to lose.

With a dexterous twist which in days gone by had often stood him in good stead on the football field he thrust forth his sturdy right leg just as the foremost man rushed by. It was a lucky move. The man with the chimney pot hat tripped, stumbled and fell sprawling at full length on the pavement, his hat rolling on ahead of him. The other man—a tall, military looking individual with bristling mustaches—fell headlong over his prostrate companion. The woman lagging breathlessly behind narrowly missed a similar fate.

The ruse had succeeded beyond Sinclair's fondest expectations. The train was already outside the train shed. He waved his hand in response to a white handkerchief which fluttered from the rear platform. Was that to be his last glimpse of this woman of mystery, he wondered.

Slowly, with many groans and curses, the baffled men picked themselves up. Their hats were battered, their clothes covered with dust and their hands and faces bruised by the fall. So suddenly and with such force had they fallen that Sinclair marvelled that they were not more seriously hurt.

The man with the Hammerstein hat was the first to recover himself. His face was livid with rage and as he advanced toward Sinclair he shook his fist threateningly.

"Curse you, curse you," he shouted hoarsely. "I have a good mind to thrash you within an inch of your life. What do you mean by this, you impudent young scoundrel? Don't you know that woman is a dangerous lunatic? She escaped only last night from an asylum and we have been searching high and low for her since daybreak. She is armed and now, as a consequence of your cursed stupidity, she will probably commit murder before she is caught. I'll"——

He never finished his threat. The tall man, seeing that his companion was working himself into a fearful passion, pushed him gently to one side and took up the conversation with less heat. In deed he was suavity and courtesy itself.

"Be calm, doctor," he interposed, "let us talk this matter over quietly. Doubtless it was all an unfortunate mistake and this young man intended no harm. Very possibly, now that he knows the facts in the matter, he will be willing to give us some information which will aid us in tracing the unfortunate woman.

Suspicions Aroused

"I am Doctor Malthus," he continued, turning to Sinclair, "head of a large sanitarium in the city; this is one of my assistants, Dr. Bernot, and this is Madame Ferrati to whose care we had entrusted the poor woman who has just given us the slip."

"My name is Sinclair," said the bewildered man from Cleveland, bowing with what affability he could muster under the circumstances, to each of the trio in turn.

He looked hard at the woman, but could not be sure that she was the one whom he had seen before. Her face was completed hidden by a heavy veil and throughout the entire interview she refrained from speaking. If she were the woman he had seen in the alley way this story of the escaped maniac was all a hoax. If she were not it was probably true for the man who had just spoken looked sufficiently like a physician and the story he had told was plausible enough.

Nevertheless Sinclair's suspicions were aroused and he decided that he could lose nothing by not saying too much.

"Can you tell us anything as to the destination of this woman?" asked the man who had introduced himself as Dr. Malthus, and who had made himself the spokesman of the party. "She styles herself Madame Alvarez, but that is not her real name. It is a most pitiable case, I assure you. She comes from a wealthy Western family. Two years ago she developed this incurable mental disease, and ever since then has been under my treatment. Several weeks ago she seemed to be much better, but of late she has become violent again, and shortly after midnight yesterday, in some unexplained manner, she eluded our vigilance and made her escape. Her friends will be distracted when they hear of it, and I trust, sir, that you can give us some hint as to where she is going."

"I am sorry, but I cannot give you much definite information," replied Sinclair. "The truth is that the lady is an almost total stranger to me. In fact, until last evening I did not know that such a person existed. We were stopping at the same hotel, and when by the merest chance we met we discovered that we had mutual friends.

"She being alone in the city, I offered to escort her to the station, and I was in the act of putting her on the train, as you saw, when you made your appearance on the scene and made demands which from my acquaintance with the lady I did not feel justified in obeying.

"As to where she is going I can only say that she asked me to buy her a ticket to Albany. She said, however, that she was only going to stop there an hour or two, and that then she would go on to a city in northern New York State. She did not mention its name, and I have no expectation of either seeing her again or hearing from her.

"That, gentlemen, is all the information I can give you—except that my name is Walter Sinclair, my home is in Cleveland and I am staying here at the Hotel Somerset."

Gone!

Sinclair paused, well pleased with this masterpiece of fact and fiction which he had mingled so that he himself hardly knew which was which. If Mme. Alvarez really was an escaped maniac he judged that he had given enough truth to aid in her ultimate apprehension. If the story was a hoax and these people were really enemies, he thought he had not told enough to injure her cause. Accordingly he was well satisfied with himself.

"It is very good of you, Mr. Sinclair," said Dr. Malthus, scrutinizing him as if to make sure of his sincerity, "to tell us as much as you have. We will wire the authorities in Albany and if Madame Alvarez is there we will have her back again before night.

"In case we get no trace of her to-day perhaps you can be of further assistance to us. Can I prevail on you to accept an invitation to dine with me this evening? I will endeavor to make amends for the rather unpleasant manner in which our acquaintance has begun."

To dine with this man was the last thing Sinclair wanted to do, but not seeing how he could well refuse, he gave a half promise, and it was arranged that the doctor should telephone him in the afternoon and make a definite appointment. The two men and the silent woman entered the elevated station. Sinclair leaped into the waiting automobile and in an incredibly short time Dalton set him down at the Somerset.

As Sinclair was entering the hotel his attention was attracted to a man and woman who were acting suspiciously. He overheard their conversation for a moment.

"We will go to the nearest beach resort to-morrow" said the woman "and I will take up the search there. I have a memorandum here that I think will give us some help. It says to cross a long bridge-like structure and enter a large entertainment enclosure.

"One of the attractive places there is a Japanese village. We will look there. The merry-go-round may reveal something. The circle swing would be a good place. I am sure we will get at least a clew at the entrance to the skating rink. Great stress is laid in this memo., on the arena. We will not neglect that."

His mind was in a whirl. He was too tired to think. All he wanted was sleep. But first he must put the valuables in his possession in a place of safety.

There was his pocketbook and there the bag of gold pieces, and there the letter Madame Alvarez had given him, but the packet, the packet he had sworn to guard as he would his life, where was it? He searched vainly through all his pockets. The packet was gone!"

More clews in to-morrow's instalment of the great mystery story. If the reader gets or fails to get any of the treasure to-day, be on the alert for to-morrow's American.

$5,000 GIVEN TO CLEVER READERS

$1,000 in Gold to Be Awarded as One Prize by the American.

While searching for some of the Boston American's $5,000, hidden treasure in company with his wife at Franklin Field yesterday afternoon, William Penman, a young man of No. 152 Talbot avenue, found a certificate that called for a fine building lot on Arlington Heights. The lot is valued at $500.

Mr. Penman is employed in the ledger department of a large department store. He has been married two years and moved to the Dorchester section from Roxbury only a week ago. He called at the Boston American office at 7:30 o'clock last evening. He said:

"I read the clews in the "Hidden—Not Lost" mystery story in the American this afternoon. It was a half-holiday for me, so I and my wife went out to look for the treasure. She was walking a little ahead of me and we were not far from a large bowlder near the centre of the field when I turned over a small stone, and there lay a small envelope with a certificate which called for the lot.

Given Quitclaim Deed.

"I am very glad that I followed the clew in the American. I do not know yet what use I will make of the lot. I should like to build on it if possible. Any how, it is a great thing for us."

Led by the clews in the hidden treasure story, thousands of people hurried to Franklin Field. In crowds, in couples and singly, the visitors scoured the acres of green, upturning every movable object and peering into all sorts of places suggested by the clew that "The Money Man" had declared in the American would prove the biggest of the work of the great gold hunt.

The installment of the story containing the clews yesterday was first published in the Night Edition of the American, which comes out shortly after noon. Hitherto the first clews were contained in an edition issued shortly before 4 o'clock. The change was made yesterday so that the Saturday half holiday readers could get a good opportunity to find the clews and run them down.

Thousands Join Hunt.

Interest in the gold hunt has increased since last Monday, when the first clews appeared in the American. It has been participated in by thousands of men and women, boys and girls. One of the clews that proved very baffling located treasure at a spot from which cars start. Of course there are a great many places in Boston from which cars start.

This clew had to be repeated the following day with the additional fact that there was a monument to a great American at the spot. Then people swarmed to Park square. Frank Lacy of Chelsea ran down the clew and got $100.

Another clew that readers found hard to trace led to a statue with a man on horseback. Some thought it meant the Washington statue in the Public Gardens. Others, realizing what had been said about every effort being made to prevent damage to property, reasoned that the Hooker monument was meant. For two days the searchers followed the clew, which was augmented the second day with the information that the statue stood near a stately building.

This was so obviously the Hooker statue that the State House was almost mobbed. The crowd was orderly, however, and heeded the repeated admonition in this newspaper to not harm any property. Harry Lewin, of Malden, located the treasure, and it turned out to be a $50 gold watch.

Gold for Rewards.

Many of the other clews led to historic spots in the city, such as Faneuil Hall, the old State House, the Old South Meeting House and so on. Gold in various amounts were the rewards of these successful searchers. Young Lewin, in discussing the search for the watch, said:

"I found it without stepping on any grass or disturbing anything. I stood on the steps of the State House, nearest the Hooker monument, and was poking about when I found the little package. The penny I invested in the American was the most fortunate investment I ever made.

"I graduated this week from the Daniels Grammar School. The watch is a handsome one, and I shall keep it as a valuable souvenir of a pleasant experience. I shall keep in the hunt, and try to get that $1,000 in gold."

James H. Kearney, of No. 117 Mt. Pleasant avenue, Roxbury, hustled to Dewey square, after reading the American. He searched about there for a time and finally, behind a sign leading to a large building found $5.

Arthur Holley, of 191 N street, South Boston, read the clew that led to the building named after the third President of the United States and hurried to the Jefferson building on Washington street.

"I went into the entrance," said the boy, "and pinned to one of the signs I found $5. I had been at both the Hooker and Washington monuments, but I had not got anything."

Charles Briggs, of No. 62 Temple street, Winter Hill, joined the searchers about the historic church building now used for another purpose, and in a crevice at the side of the Old South Meeting House found $5.

"I have been pretty lucky in American contests" said Briggs. "I found one of the mystic keys last Winter and got $20. I am out for the $1,000 in gold that is locked in a vault of the Old Colony Trust Company."

Frank Thomas, of No. 830 East Fifth street, South Boston, was one of the first to reach the Cradle of Liberty, which was one of the easy ones. He had a large number of competitors, however, and for a time their wits were pitted against one another. Over the doors to the entrance Thomas spied something. He climbed up and got it. It turned out to be $5.

Finds Long Hidden Key.

A number of fake keys and tags with the picture of keys have been found in various sections of the city by searchers, who have called at the American office, hoping that they had discovered some of the $5,000 buried treasure.

One of the strangest finds in the search was that of Charles B. Kelley of No. 20 Village street, Boston, who found one of the $20 mystic keys secreted by this newspaper last February in another contest. This key was the only one of the many hidden that was not found.

It remained at the identical spot where it was hidden nearly five months until young Kelley dug it out of a section of pipe in Norfolk Place, a sort of alley that runs off Washington street, right in the heart of the business section of the city.

Kelley, who is employed with a sign company at No. 3 Franklin street, called at the American office yesterday and said:

"I started to follow the clews in Friday's story at 5 o'clock. I went to the Jefferson building. There was a crowd there. I looked around and did not find anything. Then I left and went into the alley. I found an Edison pipe that had been cut off. It was filled with paper and other stuff.

"I got a hatpin and tried to fish the stuff out, but could not do it. Then I got a stick and drew out a small envelope. It was torn. Nothing was in it, so I tried again and got the key. It had been punched out of the envelope. I am going to have a fine vacation on this $20."

MYSTERY SHIP TO CARRY PRINCE ACROSS SEA.

SECRECY ABOUT HER PLANS

London, June 27.—As previous cables have briefly announced, the Prince of Wales is to sail to Quebec for the tercentenary celebrations in the new cruiser Indomitable, but it has not been made clear that this is the famous "mystery ship."

For two months a strange, monstrous vessel with three funnels, oddly placed, and two gigantic tripod masts has been coming and going at Spithead. She is the gigantic armored cruiser Indomitable. All the important details of her have been kept absolutely secret.

Three Sister Ships.

She is one of three sister ships, the two others being the Invincible and Inflexible, which were voted in 1905, but not laid down till 1906, and which are to all cruisers of the past what the Dreadnought is to all earlier battleships.

She is at once the fastest, the largest and the most heavily armed cruiser afloat; indeed, in many respects she resembles a fast battleship rather than a cruiser.

The first point to notice is the immense power of her artillery. She carries eight huge 12-in. guns, each forty-five feet long, and each capable of firing an 850-lb. shell twice in the minute.

These guns are mounted in pairs in four turrets, and the turrets are so arranged that all the eight big guns can fire on either broadside, and six of them ahead or astern.

The guns are directed from fire-control stations, which are duplicated, one on each mast, the details of the system being absolutely confidential. But the general arrangement is that electrical transmitters from the fire-control stations aloft send down to indicators at the guns the range in yards, the deflection to right or left, the order to commence or suspend fire, and the final signal, a loud ring on a gong, to fire the gun.

Force of Big Guns.

Some idea of the blast and the force of these guns can be gained from this fact—that during her trial two of the amidship turret guns were trained right ahead and fired simultaneously.

A boat was hanging on the davits, well out of the actual path of the projectiles, but in the track of the blast of gas which accompanies them.

After the shots had been fired the boat was left a mass of matchwood, lying on the deck. The projectile from these mammoth guns will pierce four feet three inches of solid iron placed close to the muzzle. At 5,000 yards they will penetrate with ease fourteen inches of the best and strongest armor now made.

The engines of the Indomitable are of the Parsons turbine type, developing 41,000 horse power, the most powerful ever put into a British warship. They drive four screws, and on her recent official trials, which were carried out under war conditions, propelled her at a rate in excess of twenty-five knots.

The turbine engines run smoothly and almost without attention; indeed, it is said that the engine room staff in these new turbine vessels have so little to do when running at high speed that there is danger of the men going to sleep.

The effect of the Indomitable on naval construction has already been remarkable. In Germany two even more gigantic and powerful cruisers are now being built of her special type, while Japan is also constructing cruisers of the same general design.

SULTAN HONORS MRS. ROOSEVELT

Constantinople, June 27.—The Sultan of Turkey, by conferring upon Mrs. Roosevelt, wife of the President, and his daughter, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, the Order of Chefakat, has signally honored them.

It is an order conferred only upon women, and its Arabic name signifies pity, considered by them the chief virtue of women.

The insignia of the order is a diamond star and a red and white sash. Few American women have received the order, but among them are members of the family of Minister Leishman. Others entitled to wear the diamond star are the Empress of Russia, the Queen of Roumania and the wife of the President of the French republic.

Ambitious Peeresses in a Bitter War for Royal Favor

The Duchess of Roxburghe.

Duchesses of Rutland and Roxburghe Amuse London by Their Rivalry.

London, June 27.—The rivalry of two duchesses—English and American—is affording society a good deal of amusement. Her Grace of Rutland, the handsome clever mother of the lovely Lady Marjorie Manners, is engaged in a contest with the Duchess of Roxburghe, who was Mrs. Goelet, for the social triumph of entertaining the King and Queen and the immense prestige that will result therefrom.

The Duchess of Rutland, who has great social influence, devoted much manoeuvring to secure a promise from the King and Queen to attend one of her entertainments. When the younger and wealthier Duchess heard of her rival's success she did not rest until she also had obtained a similar honor, and actually got the royal date fixed for the day before her rival's party.

Which Will Be Disappointed?

It is unlikely that Queen Alexandra will go to both functions, as she seldom goes out two days in succession. The question is, which Duchess will she disappoint?

The struggle between two other women to obtain the King's presence on a certain date for private functions has also created much quiet amusement. These two women are Lady Paget, who was a Paran Stevens, and Lady Beauchamp.

The King, by some mistake of a court official, conditionally accepted both invitations. Then there ensued a regular battle of diplomacy, and finally the American was awarded the victory because she was the older and the more intimate friend, and the younger woman was promised the coveted honor at a later date, still to be settled.

Americans to Attend.

Lady Paget, now that she has secured the date, July 5, means to make the party one which will be talked about for the rest of the season. The party, which will be an al fresco affair, will be given at her house at Coombe, a motor drive from town, and she has built two great marquees in the gardens, one for a theatre and one for refreshments.

She has engaged Adeline Genee to dance, and Mme. Rejane and M. Coquelin and Miss Marie Tempest have also been engaged to appear in "sketches." The King's "inner set" numbers about one hundred, and all these intimates, including, of course, the American Ambassador, Mrs. Whitelaw Reid and Mrs. J. J. Astor, have been asked to attend.

ANTI-RUST SECRET AGAIN DISCOVERED

London, June 27.—An Italian trade secret that had been lost for 700 years has been rediscovered by Inspector Simpson of the Blackburn Fire Department. It is of great importance to the building and ship building trades, as it is asserted that it absolutely prevents damp and rust.

Inspector Simpson's discovery is a liquid on the principle of a secret preparation known to the old Italians, but lost to the world in the thirteenth century. When painted with this liquid, the dampest room becomes absolutely dry, and freshly plastered walls in new house, after treatment with it, may at once be papered without damage to the paper.

No ironwork painted with it can rust, and it completely prevents the "weeping" of the inner skins of iron ships, which causes so much damage to cargo.

When applied to the bottom plates of ships it not only prevents oxidation, but allows no marine growths, barnacles or other parasites to attach themselves. It preserves a glass-like surface on ships' bottoms, which will add several knots to the speed of liners and warships.

SAILS THE SEAS IN FOURTEEN-FOOT EGG

London, June 27.—Columbus made an egg stand up, but he probably would have hesitated before attempting to sail across the Atlantic in one. Nevertheless, an egg fourteen feet long, and carrying three men, has just successfully made a voyage from Bergen, Norway, across the stormy North Sea to London.

The Uraed (Fearless) is an egg-shaped boat, and is the invention of Captain Bude, a Norwegian, who navigated her to the Thames. He claims that the boat is unsinkable. The Uraed's only motive power is a small lug sail.

PAGEANTITIS NEW ENGLISH TROUBLE

Many Historic Towns Commemorate Anniversaries with Parades.

London, June 27.—"Pageantitis" is troubling England more than ever. The number of historic towns that are having "pageants" this year is four, including one London suburb. London itself had arranged to have a pageant which was to have been the greatest of all; but it has been postponed until 1909 to avoid clashing with the great Franco-British Exposition.

Dover and Winchester, two ancient towns whose history goes back into the dim ages, are having pageants in which the many historical incidents connected with them will be reproduced. Pevensy, in Sussex, with its ruined Norman castle and memories of the battle of Hastings, has also a pageant on a smaller scale. An unusual feature of the Dover show will be that one "episode" will be spoken in French, written by Louis Tiercelin, a noted French poet. It shows the meeting of Charles I. with his French bride, Henrietta Maria.

Chelsea, the picturesque, artistic suburb on the Thames, is another pageant town this year. The borough is rich in associations with Sir Thomas Moore, Charles II. and Nell Gwynne, and coming down to the nineteenth century, with Turner, Carlyle and Rossetti.

TOWN HATCHES FISH TO RELIEVE TAXES

Cardiff, June 27.—The municipality of this busy Welsh seaport has a novel way of reducing taxation. It breeds trout by the thousand, turns them out into lakes among the neighboring hills, and then sells the fishing rights to citizens. All the money received from the sale of "fishing tickets" is clear profit on the enterprise, and goes to the relief of the local taxes.

Since 1900, when the corporation established its "hatchery" and 500 fish were turned out, the business has grown steadily, until now no fewer than 200,000 eggs are laid down every year.

FRANCE TO RUN ITS RAILROADS

CLEMENCEAU LED FIGHT

Paris, June 27.—The Senate has by a vote of 126 to 125 decided to support the government and take immediate action on the proposal to take over and nationalize the Western Railroad. This victory of the government was followed by a strong speech by Premier Clemenceau, who claimed that the measure was one of the essential reforms of the government program. He ended by boldly calling for a vote of confidence.

By the terms of the bill just passed by the French Senate the Western road will be purchased outright, a proceeding which will add 2,800 miles to the existing State system, bringing the total up to an approximate total of 4,500 miles.

Government ownership of railroads, a subject which has lately excited considerable interest in Great Britain, has always been the principal plank in the platform of the French Socialists, and with the radical government now in power has made considerable progress. The bill for the nationalization of the Western passed the Chamber of Deputies some time ago, but has been the object of a hard fought struggle in the Senate, a body which is inclined to be conservative financially. The measure was brought into the upper house during the early days of the present month, and has remained the chief topic of discussion ever since.

Bitterly Divided.

Eloquently defended by the Minister of Public Works, M. Barthou, and by the Minister of Finance, M. Caillaux, it has been violently opposed by other speakers whose authority is considerable. Meanwhile, another great company, that of the Orleans line, made a proposal that somewhat complicated the situation.

The scheme now proposed would have resulted in the transfer of the Montparnasse and Vaugirard terminal of the Orleans and Western lines to the state; the surrender to the state of nearly seven hundred miles, at present exploited by the Orleans Company; the renunciation to the treasury of its reserve dividend, which would constitute an unexpected windfall for the state of nearly $1,000,000, and finally, the cession to the state of a certain number of branch lines belonging to the Western company. The government, however, declined to accept this proposal, and the measure was finally pushed through.

In the light of the oft-repeated argument that government ownership of railroads is not so economical as private management, it is interesting to note the report of the State roads in France for 1906.

Cheaper Management.

Over the State-owned line and its brances there was operated in 1906 trains with an aggregate mileage, as follows: Passenger and mixed trains, 7,552,729 miles; freight trains, 3,301,278 miles; a total of 10,854,008 miles. From the last official report just published it appears that the total receipts for the traffic of the year and the expenses of operation were as follows: Receipts, $10,537,800; expenses, $7,911,841; net earnings, $2,625,959.

The rates for passenger travel on the State railway are shown in the following example: Distance from Paris to Bordeaux, 380 miles, first-class fare, 3.41 cents per mile; second-class fare, 2.32, and third-class fare, 1.52. These rates are, however, subject to various discounts and concessions in special cases, the most important of which is the reduction on a return ticket, good for various periods, according to the length of the journey. The discount on the return ticket is based on distance, as follows: Up to 100 kilometres, 30 per cent of single-distance fare; 101 to 300 kilometres, 30 to 40 per cent, and over 300 kilometres, 40 per cent. The State railway management also issues cheap Summer excursion tickets from Paris to Les Sables d'Olonne and such seaside resorts on the southwestern coast, while the northern and western companies offer similar inducements to excursionists to the various northern bathing beaches from Calais to Cherbourg.

RUSSIA PLANS TO BUILD BIG NAVY

$5,500,000 Appropriation for Four Battleships Is Now Assured.

St. Petersburg, June 27.—Debate on the budget of the ministry of marine, which amounts to $42,500,000, inclusive of $5,500,000 to lay down four battleships this year, was begun in the Council of the Empire last night. The financial commission of the Council passed the budget last Saturday night. On June 6 the Duma, by a vote of 194 to 78, rejected the battleship appropriation, and this action was considered tantamount to a vote of lack of confidence in the minister of marine.

Last night's speeches were made by Premier Stolypin, M. Durnovo, former superintendent of posts and telegraphs; M. Timiriazeff, minister of commerce, and Count Witte. All supported the appropriation, the passage of which is assured. Premier Stolypin said he understood that it was the unquestionable discretionary power of the Council of the Empire to reject the appropriation, as the Duma had done, and if this were the case the fleet would not be built, but he argued that the Council's competency in the matter was exclusively financial, and must not intrude upon the executive province of the government by means of votes of lack of confidence, inasmuch as the cabinet is responsible solely to the monarch, and if its bills are rejected in order to force reforms, an anomalous and chaotic state of irresponsibility is created.

Count Witte, in a speech lasting an hour and a half, attacked the Duma for mixing in the affairs of national defence. He declared that he personally edited the articles in the fundamental laws under which the army and navy are placed under the exclusive prerogative of the Emperor.

By a majority of two the Duma to-night voted a subsidy of $3,000,000, to be distributed over a period of eleven years, for the establishment of a semi-weekly service of the volunteer fleet between Vladivostock and Tsuruga, Japan, and weekly service between Vladivostock and Shanghai. The new steamers will be convertible into fast cruisers in time of war.

ARREST STEWARD FOR PARIS MURDER

Paris, June 27.—A man named Renard has been arrested charged with complicity in the murder of M. Auguste Remy, a wealthy retired banker, seventy-seven years old, who was stabbed to death with a dessert knife in his home, in this city, the night of June 6. Renard was a steward in the Remy household.

ROOSEVELT'S GAME READY FOR SHOOTING

PLENTY OF SPORT AHEAD

Alarming Increase Has Caused Relaxation in Regulations in Several Places.

London, June 27.—When Mr. Roosevelt goes to Africa next year, as the American exclusively told he would, he will find more exciting sport than the hunting of grizzlies and mountain lions in the Rocky Mountains.

Rhodesia, the British African territory north of the Transvaal, is the finest big game country in the world, thanks to the game laws and the restriction of hunting to the holders of expensive licenses. This protection of wild beasts has resulted in an inconvenient increase in their number and daring—so much so that the authorities have been obliged in some cases to relax the regulations.

In one district, where wild elephants have been terrorizing the population and destroying the crops to an intolerable extent, the unrestricted destruction of elephants has been permitted.

There has been consequently a boom in big game shooting, in which some exciting adventures have occurred. The following story of what happened to three Dutchmen who went elephant hunting is sent home by an English missionary, the Rev. W. T. Grantham:

"One morning they came on a troop of seven elephants and killed one bull. They followed on the spoor (tracks) of others, and in the afternoon came up with them about seven miles east of my station. By this time the other elephants had joined up, and they numbered about eighteen. The hunters fired and a bull dropped.

"The remaining elephants spread themselves out and completely surrounded the men on a small ant heap. To run was impossible, so they sat tight, kept their nerve and shot straight, with the result that in two minutes they killed four elephants within a radius of from twenty to fifty yards. The others then made off, five having been killed and all of them tuskers. I went out to the scene of the fray and an interesting sight it was. Hundreds of natives, male and female, had congregated there, and by noon next day dozens of fires were drying tons of flesh."

MYSTIC MILLINERY COLORS OF PLANETS

"Astrological Hats" Follow the "Emotional Gowns" in Smart Set.

London, June 27.—After "emotional gowns" come "astrological hats" or "mystic millinery." These hats are symbolical of the different planets, and therefore are supposed to have stellar influences upon the wearers. The astrological lady who has designed the mystic hats explains their principle thus:

"Every woman who wishes to attract good influences and good fortune should wear the colors and flowers of the planet under which she was born. If she happens to know the hour of her birth we can tell her exactly the color or combination of colors she must wear to be happy and lucky."

Among the astrological hats shown by this mystic milliner are a mammoth Mercury hat with medlars growing riotously over the front; a purple Jupiter hat smothered in iris blossoms, a creamy sun hat shot with gold, a snow-white moon hat, a Merry Widow Venus hat, and a Uranus hat, particularly aggressive looking, built up of murky chiffons and peacock's feathers, forked lightning playing about the front, and an angry beetle lurking in the gloomy brim.

SPEED LIMIT ASKED FOR LONDON VEHICLES

London, June 27.—Because of the dangerous condition of the streets owing to the great growth in the number of fast-moving vehicles, H. S. Straus, the member of Parliament for Tower Hamlets, has introduced a bill in Parliament to secure the safety of pedestrians.

Although the motor traffic constitutes the principal source of danger, Mr. Straus will endeavor to legislate for a speed limit to all vehicles as follows:

CHINA AGREES TO PAY INDEMNITY

FINISH STATUE OF LAFAYETTE

Paris, June 27.—The gigantic bronze statue of Lafayette, the gift of American school children to France, has been hoisted on its pedestal in the Square du Nouveau Louvre. All present united in pronouncing the statue a splendid artistic success. The final ceremony will probably take place July 4.

It is nine years now since the plan for the erection of a statue to Lafayette by the American people first took definite shape. A great deal of enthusiasm was roused in that country, and a committee was formed in Chicago to collect money. The plan was to have the funds largely contributed by American school children, and $60,000 was turned in from this source.

Other contributions were made by the federal government, which gave $25,000, the Daughters of the Revolution, who gave $10,000, and many others. A total of $130,000 was collected.

France approved heartily of the plan, and offered one of the best sites in Paris for the statue, in the Square du Nouveau Louvre, commanding a view of the great thoroughfare which runs past the Tuileries Gardens.

The committee had planned for an unveiling on July 4, 1900, during the Paris Exposition, and as it was not possible to prepare a bronze statue in the limited time available, a plaster substitute was used. Shortly afterward the committee chose the American sculptor, Paul Wayland Bartlett, to make the bronze figure. Then there followed a long period of inaction. No one was able to learn why the bronze was not completed, and meanwhile the temporary plaster cast began to show badly the effects of the weather. A hoof fell from the plaster horse, and a boot from the hero. Bartlett patched it up as well as he could, but notwithstanding the complaints which were made, refused to hurry, saying that the work was important. The statue was completed about nine months ago.

JAP AND RUSSIAN NOBLES HOLD ORGY

Special Cable to Boston American.

Paris, June 27.—The Czar has been asked to intervene and punish the participants in a scandalous fete given at which the guests included many well known members of the Russian colony in Paris and prominent Japanese attached to the Mikado's embassy.

It is said the fete was organized by the aide camp of the Duke of Leuchtenberg, who is a first cousin of Nicholas II. the entertainment consisted of that impiety known as "Black Mass." The scene chosen for orgy was one of the well known Catholic churches, seized by the French government recently.

The guests were grouped in the choir of the church. Incense was burned in old censors, and the fumes made the appearance of twilight in the ancient church. Then suddenly from the sacristy a woman appeared in white drapery. She danced oriental dances. Other features of the entertainment are said to have been much more impious.

A complaint implicating the Duke of Leuchtenberg and especially his aide de camp, was made to the Russian Ambassador, Monsieur Nelidoff. His investigation proved the truth of the report.

The matter has been referred to the Czar, who is expected to take some action regarding members of his family.

Berlin, June 27.—Rigorous measures have been taken by the medical authorities to stamp out a strange hair disease epidemic which has attacked the school children in Berlin's fashionable district of Schoeneberg. Making its appearance a week ago, the malady has spread until hundreds of children have become entirely bald in three days.

Similar epidemics appeared some time ago in Paris and Bale, but the disease has so far been unknown in Germany.

FIND NEW DIAMOND FIELD.

Berlin, June 27.—A dispatch received here from Windhoek, Damara Land, German Southwest Africa, says that a diamond field, the extent of which is nearly ten miles, has been discovered at Luderitz Bay.

CHILDREN HAVE EMPIRE DAY FET

WRONG IDEA EMPHASIZE

Happiness, Liberty and Fai Should Be Keynote, She Says.

By Lady Henry Somerset.

London, June 2 —What is calle Empire Day is on that is graduall becoming widely recognized, both in the colonies and in the mother country.

The original idea was to commemorate the birthday of Queen Victoria, and associate that anniversary with the building up of t greatest empire of ancient or mode times. Now there are many, and I reck myself among the number, who do n believe in emphasizing this idea of t magnificence of an empire so much as cultivating in the child's mind the unde standing of his or her responsibility as a individual citizen in that part of the empire in which he or she is called to live.

I feel that there is a danger in emphasizing the empire idea. England is the proud position of being the plan from which star dust disintegrates, th Mother of Nations rather than the possessor of wide domains and of vast trac of empire.

In order to assure myself of the sort celebration which the ordinary Engl public school is commemorating on t particular day I went to a neighbor national school to witness the performan on Empire Day.

The worship of the flag seemed the p dominant note. Patriotism is a splen thing, and the salute of the flag has ways impressed me in America when children leave the schools, but I think is a little overstrained to sing words to hymn tunes to a flag, and to bow head before the bunting, when many wo resent making the same sign of revere to the cross. Moreover, I think that hymn which begins "Sing Us a Song Empire," set to the tune to which child ordinarily sing, "Oh, Day of Joy and Gl ness!" to celebrate the resurrection Christ, is putting the whole idea utt out of proportion.

By all means, let the children love t country; by all means, let children taught that they owe her a duty whic a debt; but let them understand that not the width of domain or the prid possession which is the secret of g but rather the widespread happiness, real liberty and the deep-rooted faith w make for the true greatness of any n
